Examination Made of Wieland's Low-grade Property at Jefferson Camp

P. D. Wilson, engineer with the C. & A., was here this week, going out to Jefferson Camp to examine the Wieland property, where 120 feet of low-grade copper ore has been proven up.

The special mining edition of the Mohave County Miner of Kingman, Arizona, in which the famous Oatman-Goldroad district was featured, was a fine piece of newspaper work, on which the management is to be congratulated.

Harry Stevens and Marshall McDonnell were in from the Blue Eagle mine this week and took out a load of supplies. They are running a raise to the surface from the tunnel level, on completion of which sinking will be carried on in the winze, which is down 50 feet.

The American Boy mine will make a shipment of ore to the smelter soon. The owners of this property are prosecuting development work steadily and sorting the richest ore for shipment, having a large tonnage of lower grade ore in the workings. Jens Peterson was here yesterday attending to the details necessary for shipment.

Josiah Bond of Alto, in writing the editor of The Patagonian against the proposed bond issue for good roads, says: "Just now when everything is feeling the effects of the world-wide disturbance caused by the great war; when our government has levied 'war taxes', when our general government is spending more money per capita than it should, when state taxes are nearly doubled, when county taxes are going up by leaps and bounds, increasing twice as fast as the power to pay it; when the business of the country is at a standstill and peaceful businesses are going to the dogs, and hard times are staring the country in the face, and when the only thriving businesses are cattle raising, which occupies an envied position, and copper mining, which this bond issue will discourage, it seems the part of wisdom to go slow and not be carried off our feet by an unthinking minority. In my opinion, this bond issue should be voted down by a decisive majority."

The Tombstone Epitaph says the taxpayers of Cochise county should bear in mind the fact that bad roads cost more money than any other tax they are called upon to pay. Good roads bring results from all directions which tend to the betterment of conditions among the people using them.

HOW TO ENCOURAGE A MAN

There is a Right Way and Wrong Way of Letting Him Know His Attentions Are Welcome.

A girl who wishes to encourage a man will often adopt a course of half-rude chaff. She will disagree with everything he says; she will argue against his pet theories, and she will be so (apparently) independent and self-reliant that he begins to feel frightened, and the moment a man feels frightened because a woman is too clever or too argumentative all pretty thoughts of tenderness or romance leave his heart.

Also it is just as much of a mistake to "show off" and "put on side" both of which are methods adopted by some women to bring about the subjection of The Man as it is to let shyness and over-retiring diffidence get the upper hand. Neither method is successful with the average man today. And, after all, it usually is the average young man of today—not the brilliant sage or intellectual super-giant—who finds and holds the one very tender corner in our faithful feminine hearts; for, as a rule, feminine hearts are extremely faithful when the Right Man gives them a chance!

And now having considered the unsuccessful methods of encouraging this most important person—the Right Man—let us discuss those which are more likely to bring about desirable and happy results. Always welcome the right man brightly and show—you know how to make the fact quite obvious—that you are more glad to see him than you are to see other people. Never forget to inquire after any little undertakings or aspirations, the details of which he may have confided to you on the occasion of your last encounter.

Don't be afraid to make room for him to sit down by your side. Don't try to look extra cheerful when he is talking to another girl—even one touch of subdued sadness is better than this.

If he is musical, and you find pleasure in his singing, don't be afraid to tell him so. If he ardently presses your hand at parting, and by so doing cuts your rings into your flesh, bravely conceal the pain and smile up into his eyes; and when the day comes that he asks you to go all the way with him down life's long road, just show him how very, very glad you will be to start on the journey—Nashville Tennessee.

GOOD USE FOR VACANT LOTS

Chicago Health Department Would Permit Children to Play on Unused Land—Favors Gardens.

"Vacant" is a misnomer for most unused city lots. They may not have dwellings on them, and in that sense they may be vacant, but in very many cases they are strewn with unsightly, unhealthy litter. Instead of that, they ought to contain that which is healthful—slightly things, objects that by their very presence tend to create good citizenship. The Chicago health department evidently had all this in mind when it circulated these "vacant" lot rules.

"Love your neighbor's lot as you do your own—but be sure to love your own."

"Don't plant tomato cans or rubbish on unused land; their fruits are withered civic pride."

"Don't allow tumble-down buildings to stand on valuable land; they are financially wasteful; they create filth, invite vice, and are a menace to life."

"A fence that has ceased to be a fence and has become an offense should be repaired or destroyed."

"Unregulated advertising on unused land pays for the maintenance of a public nuisance."

"School gardens are valuable adjuncts to education and recreation. They can be cultivated on an open lot."

"Let the children play on the unused land, so that they may become strong and keep out of the hands of the law."

"Let not an inch of land be kept in idleness. It has a divine right to bear fruit and flowers and ever serve the highest interest of man."

"These commandments," says the department, "first written and circulated by the Suburban Planning association of Philadelphia, must command themselves to all good citizens."

Drop Gingerbread.

Beat to a cream one-half cupful of brown sugar and one-half cupful of butter or lard that has been softened. Add two well beaten eggs, one cupful of molasses, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, a tablespoonful of ginger, half a cupful of sour milk with a teaspoonful of soda beaten in, and, lastly, three cupfuls of flour. Cover the bottom of a dripping pan with buttered paper, drop the dough on in spoonfuls, giving the cakes ample room to rise and bake a rich brown in a moderate oven.

Power of the Individual.

If only one person—you—makes up his mind to do his best for the meeting, from that nucleus the contagion of best-doing will spread through the society.

AIR NEEDED IN ICE BOX

Provision for Proper Circulation is as Much a Necessity as Supply of Cooling Material.

It is astonishing how little the average housekeeper knows about ice. Some women seem to think all there is about ice is to have the man put it in the refrigerator. Others, more careful, think to save the ice bill by putting some kind of covering over the ice.

True, the ice does not melt so quickly with the cover, but then again, since it does not melt, it has no cooling effect. Unless ice melts it is useless. The faster it melts the colder the ice box becomes.

The most important feature of a good refrigerator is ample facility for free circulation of air when the box is closed. Cool air, being heavier than warm air, sinks. The warm air rises. For this reason the coldest place in the refrigerator is the bottom and not the ice chamber, as so many people think it is and consequently often put butter or milk directly in with the ice.

There must be suitable passages to allow the warm air rising from the things placed in the refrigerator to flow to and over the ice at the top, and for this same air when cooled and purified by the melting ice, to return into the food chamber.

The circulation continues until the temperature is equalized. While this circulation proceeds the ice melts rapidly, but when the temperature is once equalized the ice melts very slowly, that is, if the door fits tight. It will pay in the end to keep the ice compartment well supplied with ice. It should never be less than one-quarter full. The ice melts faster, and with less cooling effect, when the supply is low.

KITCHEN HINTS OF MOMENT

Proper Receipts for the Preservation of Food—Meat When Roasting Should Be Kept Covered.

Everybody does not know that food in general should not be allowed to cool in tin, copper or iron. It must be placed while hot in agate, chinc or well glazed earthenware.

Green vegetables should be dropped into boiling water to which a pinch of bicarbonate of soda has been added. Put in salt when the article is half cooked.

If you have covered a pan in which meat is to be roasted never open it to baste the meat. Keep it covered from start to finish. The idea is that the pans are filled with steam, which penetrates the fibers of the meat. It is desired to brown the outside leave the cover off for the first half hour in a quick oven.

The shank bones of mutton, of so little general value, if well soaked add to the richness of gravies and soups stock.

When boiling haricot beans or dried limas do not put in the salt until they are nearly cooked, otherwise they are apt to split and come out of their skins. They should be brought to the boiling point, that water poured off and fresh boiling water poured over them.

Whipping Cream Should Be Cold.

Often the housewife finds that the cream she has will not whip. The department's dairy specialists point out that to obtain satisfactory results in whipping cream it should be cold and of the right thickness, containing about 30 per cent or more of butterfat.

Ordinary cream, designated as coffee cream by the trade, is altogether too thin to give good results.

The whipping cream, as delivered by the milkman, contains 30 to 40 per cent of butterfat. Thoroughly chill the cream before whipping by placing it in a covered bowl on the ice. The whipping process is also aided and hastened by standing the bowl in a pan of ice water.

Scotch Broth.

Three pounds neck mutton, two tablespoonfuls pearl barley, two tablespoonfuls minced onion, two tablespoonfuls minced turnip, two tablespoonfuls minced carrot, two tablespoonfuls minced celery, two tablespoonfuls salt, one teaspoonful pepper, one tablespoonful minced parsley, three quarts cold water. Remove bones and fat from mutton, cut meat small and place with vegetables and seasoning, except parsley. Simmer three hours after coming to a boil, then thicken with flour and add parsley.

Beef Tea Meat.

Remove all gristle and fat from meat intended for beef tea. Place these trimmings in a pan with sufficient water to cover them, and add any vegetable to hand cut up small. Allow to simmer, then add the meat from the beef tea. Simmer for four hours, then strain through a hair sieve and pour the liquid into a mold to set. When cold it will be a nourishing jelly, suitable for invalids. The vegetable used must be quite fresh.

Paint Flower Pots.

Instead of buying expensive jardinières for your plants, paint the ordinary flower pots and saucers with oil paint to harmonize with the color scheme of the room. Have pots painted a soft leaf green, or Chinese blues are very quaint and decorative.

To Prevent Gas Stove Sweating.

If you are careful to leave the door of your gas range open after using, it will allow the heat to escape and prevent the sweating of the metal, which leads to rust.

SYNOPSIS.

Captain Abraham Rose and Angelina, his wife, have lost their little home, the old log cabin, built by Abe's father, Gold mining stock. Their household goods sold the $100 auction money, all they have left, will place Abe in the Old Man's home, or Angy in the Old Lady's home. Both are self-sacrificing, but Abe decides to remain in town to find work. He had a chance to take the wunt of it. The old couple bid good-bye to the little house. Terror of "what folks will say" sends them along by-paths to the gate of the Old Ladies' home, because of the ill fortune of the old couple. She tells the other old ladies, and Blossey, who has paid a double fee for the only double bed-chamber, voices the unanimous verdict that Abe must be taken in with his wife. Abe is told to go to the Old Ladies' home to find a room to rent. The old ladies give him such a warm welcome that he is made to feel at home at once. "Brother Abe" expands under the warm reception. The old ladies and the young people in the Old Ladies' home, Abe is the center of the community. The semi-annual visit of Bossy's aged lover, Capt. Samuel Darby, is due. Abe advises her to marry him. For the first time the captain tells Abe of his past, of his secret regarding Darby, his old captain in the life-saving service, that gosip begins to buzz. At the feast in celebration of the anniversary of the Roses' arrival at the home, Abe lands Blossey in his speech, and Angie is sent from the room.

CHAPTER IX.

A Winter Butterfly.

"Cap'n Rose," began Aunt Nancy. Brother Abe pricked up his ears at the formal address. "Cap'n Rose," she repeated, deliberately dwelling on the title. "I never believe in callin' a man to account in front of his wife. It gives him somebody handy ter blame things on tew jest like ole Adam. Naow, look a-here! What I want is ter ask yew jest one question: Whar, whar on 'arth kin we look for a decent behavin' ole man of not in a Old Ladies' hum?" Would yew—" she exhortated earnestly, pointing her crooked forefinger at him. "Would yew—"

Abram caught his breath. Beads of sweat had appeared on his brow. He broke in huskily:

"Wait a minute, Aunt Nancy. Jest tell me what I've been an' done."

The ladies glanced at one another, contemptuous, incredulous smiles on their faces, while Aunt Nancy almost wept at his deceitfulness.

"Cap'n Rose," she vowed mournfully, "I've lived in this house for many, many years, an' all the while I been here I never heard tell o' a breath o' scandal ag'in the place until yew come an' commenced ter kick up yer heels."

Lasy Daisy, who had long been an intimate, also nodded her unwieldy head in confirmation, while a low murmur of assent arose from the others. Abraham could only pass his hand over his brow, uneasily shuffle his mangled heels over the floor and await further developments; for he did not have the slightest conception as to "what they were driving at."

"Cap'n Rose," the matriarch proceeded, as in the earnestness of her indignation she arose, trembling, in her seat and stood with her palsied and shaking hands on the board. "Cap'n Rose, yer conduct with this here Mis' Betsy Ann Blossom has been somethin' reediculous! It's been disgracful!"

Aunt Nancy sat down, incongruously disreputable in appearance, her pink bow having slipped down over her right ear during the harangue. Over the culprit's countenance light had dawned, but, shame to tell! it was a light not wholly remorseful. Then silent laughter shook the old man's shoulders, and then—could it be?—there crept about his lips and eyes a smile of superbly masculine conceit. The sisters were fighting over him. Wouldn't mother be amused when he should tell her what all this fuss was about?

"Now, kindly, short-sighted Miss Abigail determined that it was time for the matron's voice to be heard."

"Of course, Brother Abe, we understand perfectly that yew never stopped take inter consideration how susceptible some folks is made."

There being plain evidence from Abe's blank expression that he did not understand the meaning of the word, Ruby Lee hastened to explain.

"Susceptible is the same as flighty-headed. Blossey allers was a fool over anything that wore breeches."

Abe pushed his chair back from the table and crossed his legs comfortably. For him all the chill had gone out of the air. Suppose that there was something in that? An old, old devil of vanity came back to the aged husband's heart. He recalled that he had been somewhat of a beau before he learned the joy of loving Angy. More than one Long Island lassie had thrown herself at his head. Of course Blossey would "get over" this; and Angy knew that his heart was hers as much as it had been the day he purchased his wedding-beaver; but Abe could not refrain from a chuckle of complacent amusement as he stroked his beard.

"Oh, hurry, Sister Angy and Brother Abe!" called Blossey. "We are waiting for you, and I've got some news for all my friends." She waited smilingly for them to join the others; then with a gesture which included every member of the household, she proceeded: "The pink tea, I want you all to know, had a double significance, and first, of course, it was to celebrate the anniversary of Brother Abe's sojourn with us; but next it was my farewell to the Home." Here Blossey gurgled and gave the man at her right so coy a glance that Samuel's face flamed red and he hung his head lower to one side than usual, like a little boy that had been caught stealing apples. "I left the tea a trifle early—you must forgive me, Brother Abe, but I heard the train-whistle." Abe stood beside Angelina, rooted in astonishment, while Blossey continued to address him directly. "You gave Samuel so many good recommendations, dear brother, that when the time approached for his June visit, I felt that I simply could not let him miss it as he did in December. Last year, on the day you entered, he was here through no desire of mine. Today he is here at my request. My friends," again she included the entire home in her glance, "we'll come back a little later to say good-by. Now, we're on the way to the ministers."

The pair, Samuel tongue-tied and bewildered by the joy of his finally won success, moved toward the door. On the threshold of the home Blossey turned and waved farewell to the companions of her widowhood, while Samuel bowed in a dazed fashion, his face still red as it was blissful. Then quickly the two passed out upon the porch. No one moved to see them off. Abe looked everywhere yet nowhere at all. Not a word was spoken even when the carriage was heard rolling down the drive; but the sound of the wheels seemed to arouse Angy from her stupor of amazement; and presently Abraham became conscious of a touch—a touch sympathetic, tenader and true—a touch all-understanding—the touch of Angy's hand within his own.

On the threshold of the home Blossey turned and waved farewell to the companions of her widowhood, while Samuel bowed in a dazed fashion, his face still red as it was blissful. Then quickly the two passed out upon the porch. No one moved to see them off. Abe looked everywhere yet nowhere at all. Not a word was spoken even when the carriage was heard rolling down the drive; but the sound of the wheels seemed to arouse Angy from her stupor of amazement; and presently Abraham became conscious of a touch—a touch sympathetic, tenader and true—a touch all-understanding—the touch of Angy's hand within his own.

A Prayer

Let me have a good sense of proportion. Let me live more in today, instead of living so greatly in the past and counting so largely upon the future. Teach me to realize that regrets over the past will get me nothing while too great preparations for the future may find me in my grave and unable to cash in on the climax. Teach me to realize that the man who spends all his earnings is simply and solely an asset to his relatives. Enable me to get into the cheerful frame of mind where today always looks fair and bright, where all the disagreeable things in the past are forgotten and where the future does not assume a vastly overrated importance in the present.

Foreigners in Chinese Service.

Many foreigners are engaged by the Chinese government in its various departments, either in the customs, railways, post offices, or other branches. According to the latest information the total is 2,948 persons, whose nationalities are as follows: British, 1,105; French, 1,003; Germans, 533; Russian, 463; American, 174; Japanese, 207; Italian, 75; Austrian, 60; Belgian, 171; others, 158.

Afraid to Be Poor.

Prof. William James, who succeeded in analyzing what is at the back of men's brains as well as anybody, writes: "We have grown literally afraid to be poor. We despise anyone who elects to be poor in order to simplify and save his inner life. We have lost the power of even imagining what the ancient idealization of poverty could have meant—the liberation from material attachments, the unbridled soul, the manly indifference, the paying our way by what we are or do, and not by what we have; the right to fling away our life at any moment irresponsibly—the more athletic trim, in short, the moral fighting shape."

Constipation causes many serious diseases. It is thoroughly cured by Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. One a laxative, three for cathartics. (Advt.)

When We Work Best.

Autumn and spring are the best seasons of the year for all kinds of work. At a very low temperature both mental and physical work are depressing. Mental work reaches its highest efficiency at a temperature of 33 degrees, while physical work reaches its maximum at 59 degrees for men and 60 degrees for women. Recent investigations show that weather variations are distinctly good for us and promote our mental efficiency.

To Make Bandages.

Bandages can be prepared from the good parts of worn sheets or pillow slips if perfectly clean. Rolls six to eight yards in length are most convenient—one inch wide for fingers, two inches for feet, two and one-half to three inches for head and arms and four inches for legs. A good way of keeping them in condition for use is to seal the rolls in a perfectly clean glass fruit jar.

Dangerous Method.

"What are your usual modes of punishment?" was among the questions submitted to a teacher in a rural district in Ohio. Her answer was, "I try moral suasion first, and if that does not work I use capital punishment." As it was a neighborhood where moral suasion had not been a success, and the children were scarce, the committee took no risks.

QUAINT OLD STAMBOL

TURKISH CAPITAL PLACE OF INTEREST TO THE TOURIST.

Quarters Allotted to Foreigners Are Pera and Galata—Three Sundays Celebrated During Week—Method of Telling Time.

Constantinople, or Stamboul, as the Turk calls his metropolis, is a much-discussed city just now. But of its important foreign quarters, Pera and Galata, the stay-at-home Briton hears little.

Galata is separated from Constantinople proper by the Golden Horn, and lies principally between the two bridges which span that world-famous waterway.

Formerly these bridges had captains and crews exactly as if they were ships. Later they became remarkable for their shops, bazaars and dogs. Shops, bazaars and dogs have gone, but still the bridges are objects of intense interest to the stranger.

In Galata may be found a sort of Petticoat lane in full swing every day of the week. But, unlike Sunday market in the East end of London, the avenue is shifted each morning. For example, the indescribable bargaining and din is to be found on Thursdays at Pershembel, which means the Thursday market.

Dealers in second-hand clothing have a more or less permanent rendezvous at the Bit bazaar or Louse market—an appellation more apt than delicate.

Pera, which is modern Greek for "beyond," stands on the hills behind Galata, in a double sense. It looks down on, considering itself the superior suburb. Both are despised by the real Turk, who, if he wished to tell you that another Turk has gone hopelessly to the bad, will say "he has gone to Pera" or, more correctly, "to Bey Oiou," for the Turk refuses to recognize the Christian designation of either Constantinople or its suburbs.

A stranger stranded at Pera might possibly go hungry; but it would be his own fault if he thirsted. Elaborate drinking fountains are in nearly every street.

There is a superabundance of post offices—but no postmen! No letters are delivered. Each European power has—or had—it's own post office. Thus, one calls at the English establishment if expecting letters from home, at the French if correspondence is likely to arrive from Paris, and so on.

Three Sundays a week are observed in both suburbs—Friday by the Turks, Saturday by the Jews, and Sunday by the Christians. And three distinct calendars are used. This year the Mohammedan is dating his letters 1333, the Jew 5675, and the Christian, of course, 1915.

The inconvenience of using three different calendars is slight compared with the bewildering method mostly used in computing the hours of the day. A watch which kept correct time on the shores of the Golden Horn would be, somewhat paradoxically, rather an erratic timekeeper, according to the standard laid down by Greenwich. For, as twelve o'clock is reckoned always to fall at the exact moment of sunset, one's watch has to gain or lose a few minutes each day, according to the season of the year. Answers.

Thousands of German Nurses.

The nurses of the German Red Cross are divided into three classes," says a recent bulletin of the American Red Cross, "the first being the Red Cross Sisters, who for years have carried on the profession of nursing. Second class, the volunteer auxiliary sisters, who undergo one-half year's training, pass an examination, and who are called out from time to time to take part in repetitive courses and practical service in military hospitals. The third class comprises the volunteer helpers of the Red Cross. They are employed only in the home military hospitals, and even then only under the supervision of trained nurses.

"Over 60 per cent of the Red Cross nurses, about 5,500 in all, are now on the battlefield or in the field, war and base hospitals. The remainder are at home, not only nursing sick and wounded soldiers, but also men, women and children of the civil population.

A Bird Mystery.

One of the most curious and interesting of the unsolved problems relating to bird migration, according to Mr. W. W. Cooke's recent memoir on this subject, is connected with the chimney swift, more often called the chimney "swallow," a very common and well-known bird of the eastern United States. After the breeding season the flocks drift slowly south and concentrate in vast numbers on the northern coast of the Gulf of Mexico. Then they disappear as completely as if they hibernated under the water or in the mud, according to the old belief regarding birds in general. The last week of March they appear again on the gulf coast. "Their hiding place during the intervening five months," said Mr. Cooke, "is still the swift's secret." (Chapman's Handbook says they winter in Central America.)

Grave Possibilities.

"Do you think a man ought to appoint his relations to office?"

"No," replied Senator Borgham. "There's no sense in complicating the destinies of a nation with the possibilities of a family quarrel."

BAND WIPE OUT LEADING CHARGE

French Composer Tells of Musicians Playing Till All But One Fall.

WROTE MARCH IN TRENCHES

Camilie Decreas, French Composer, Describes Death of Collignon—Tells of Life in Trenches With French Soldiers.

New York.—Having served as a volunteer in the army until incapacitated through rheumatism brought about his honorable discharge, that the memorial service took place at Fontainebleau. I had composed my "March Funèbre" between trips from the depot to the front trenches.

"It was at Vauquois that happened an incident that I suppose stands alone in this war, the charge of a regimental band at the head of troops. Nowdays the bands are usually kept at the rear. But a critical moment came. Our men had three times attacked the Germans, and thrice had been repulsed. The colonel felt that a time for supreme effort had arrived. He summoned the leader of the band.

"Put your men at the head of the regiment, strike up the "Marseillaise," and lead them to victory," he commanded.

"The bandmaster saluted. He called his musicians and told them what was expected. Then the forty of them took their positions. Our line was reformed. The bandmaster waved his baton.

"'Allons, enfants de la Patrie!' rang out, and the men took up the song. France was calling upon them to do or die. The band started out on the double-quick, as if on rapid parade.

The Germans must have rubbed their eyes. No musician carried a weapon. But they were carrying the 'Marseillaise' against the foe. Then came the continuous rattle of the machine guns. The band marched on, their ranks thinning at every step. The leader went down. The cornetists followed him. The drummers and their instruments collapsed in the same volley. In less than five minutes every man of the forty was lying upon the ground, killed or wounded, that is, with one exception. That was a trombone player.

Instrument Shot Away.

"His whole instrument was shot away except the mouthpiece and the slide, to which his fingers were fastened. He did not know it. He still blew, and worked the slide. It was only a ghostly 'Marseillaise' he was playing, but the spirits of his dead comrades played with him, and with that fragment of a trombone he led the way to victory. The trench was taken. Half of the band had died on the field of honor.

"You have perhaps read statements that the Germans were lashed to canon. Of that I have no proof, but with my own eyes I have seen German soldiers bound to machine guns with chains. We took several of these prisoners at the battle of Vauquois, and we found several dead lashed to their guns. Their officers had lashed them there, with instructions to keep turning the crank.

"Not a Red Cross flag came near our front but what the Germans fired at it. This cannot be disproved. We found the German prisoners we took in absolute ignorance of where they were. They had been told invariably that they were within a few miles of Paris.

"I finally had a breakdown, due to rheumatism, and the doctors sent me back to Fontainebleau, where, after a thorough examination, I was honorably discharged on May 4."

M. Decreas wears a diamond horse-shoe scarpin presented to him by his regiment. Indicative of the spirit of comradeship prevailing between officers and men is a note he carried from his colonel. M. Decreas sent the commander a card of congratulation when the latter was made an officer of the Legion of Honor, and the colonel wrote an appreciative reply with his own hand. He also had a letter from General Samson-Schneider, commander of the first and second subdivisions of the Fifth corps, commanding him as a "good patriot who had discharged his duties to his country until his strength had given way," to all representatives of France abroad.

Safe Behind a Stone.

"I cannot tell you how long I lay there, but when I discovered I was still alive I began to drag myself away by the elbows, and finally found myself in a trench again. My comrades did not recognize me. Exhaustion and rheumatism, the latter acquired through lying there wallowing my way back in the mud, invalidated me back to the depot for a fortnight's rest.

"Then they gave me a job as distributor of munitions, food, clothing and other things meant for the men in the front line. These things were unloaded at a certain distance back. In that capacity I went to the Argonne, and was at the battle of Vauquois, at the end of February. I had come to know Collignon very well. I know that Collignon was repeatedly offered a commission, but he wanted to carry the colors of the regiment. He was a splendid figure, with his white beard, and the rosette of the Legion of Honor on his breast. He could not wear the military shoes and most of the time he went barefooted. Later he wore sandals. It was at Vauquois that he was killed. Our men had sought shelter in the cellars of ruined houses in the village. In a heavy rain of bullets from machine gun, Collignon rushed out from such a shelter to rescue a comrade who had fallen wounded. A shell burst near him and killed him.

"He was buried at the front, and it was not until after my 'reformation,' or honorable discharge, that the memorial service took place at Fontainebleau. I had composed my "March Funèbre" between trips from the depot to the front trenches.

"It was at Vauquois that happened an incident that I suppose stands alone in this war, the charge of a regimental band at the head of troops. Nowdays the bands are usually kept at the rear. ### Municipal Control.

The great difficulty with municipal control of public utilities does not lie in graft and in political evils of that character, as so often stated, but lies in the shifting responsibility of changing administration, so likely to change the policy of the plant and to upset smooth running. In other words, it lies in getting a business administration for the plant which is to be successful must be run in a businesslike way.

Politics should not have anything to do with the operation of the plant, yet politics is bound to, it is a municipal plant. Even city water departments today are not on a good business basis and they have long been under political control, and are far less difficult to handle. Until we have a business form of government we cannot hope to have successful municipal plants—that is, as successful as they should be, for many such plants are fairly successful now.
