DENVER LIVE STOCK

Cattle. A broad demand prevailed all down the lines with the strongest trend toward the beef and butcher lines, but the supplies of both were rather light and the bulk of activity was noted in the feeder and stecker divisions where supplies were nearly sufficient to go around.

Beef steers were decidedly in the minority and what killing stock was offered was chiefly in the 200 to 400 lb. range. Demand for good heavy cows and heifers has been very good all season, and with some attractive bunches put on their disposal buyers were quick to take them up at good steady prices. Some attractive bunches were sold to the North Park district were sold to packers for $5.50 and packers also purchased some heavy cows for $7.75. There were but few steers offered. Fat $9 to $10 head sold for $7.75 and other sold for $5.25, $5.40 and $5.50. Quarterlings of beef in the market were quoted at $5.25 for the good to choice kinds. Demand for feeders and stockers was strong and a good movement was reported. One lot of good heavy cattle steers sold to go back to the country for $6.50, and some other yearlings of less attractive qualities brought $6.15.

Hogs. Eastern centers were reporting declines of 1c to 2c over the advance but here compared favorably with those at the river. Small killers paid the top price for one lot of stock averaging 172 pounds. The price was $6.90, other sales were made at $6.85, and packers paid as high as $6.75. Most of the stock offered was of good attractive grade, and no difficulty whatever was experienced in disposing of it. Heavy runs in the East, together with the current situation were apparently the cause of the decline in those quarters and the slump of the live market was considered as a reflection of those conditions.

Sheep. Packers were on hand looking for butcher stock and the sales of one lot of 78-pound lambs was taken over by them for $9. Quotations on fancy lambs reached a high mark at $9.75, although dealers were expressing confidence that this week would find the choice kinds ranging at $10 to $11. Demand for feeder lambs was exceptionally strong. A number of country buyers were on hand and salesmen found a ready market for 2,000 head of stock. Two loads of feeder lambs sold for $8.50 and some yearlings weighing 39 pounds sold for $8.

A Hot Letter from a Pipe Smoker

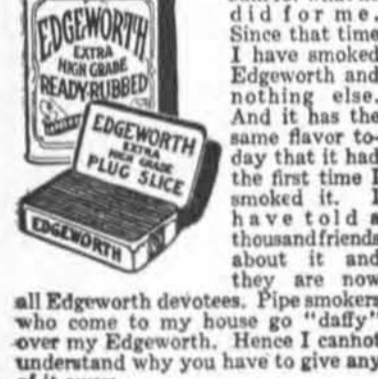

Forest City Live Stock and Fair Co., North Randall, Ohio, 1050 Leader-News Bldg., Cleveland, O. Larus & Brother Co., Richmond, Va. Gentlemen:

I am more than surprised to discover that you are advertising Edgeworth and are offering to give some of it away.

It has never been my policy to advise other people concerning their business, as I have had enough to do to take care of my own affairs. But if I manufactured Edgeworth, I would see all the smokers in the world dead and buried before I would give away as much as a pinch of it.

Three years ago my dentist heard me complaining because I could get no pipe tobacco that was worth a cent a carload. He immediately introduced Edgeworth. If I had a million dollars I would be almost willing to give half the sum for what he did for me.

Since that time I have smoked Edgeworth and nothing else. And it has the same flavor today that it had the first time I smoked it. I have told a thousand friends about it and they are now all Edgeworth devotees. Pipe smokers who come to my house go "daffy" over my Edgeworth. Hence I cannot understand why you have to give any of it away.

Very truly yours, (signed) H. J. Kline, Secretary Forest City Live Stock and Fair Co.

General Manager The Forest City Fair, Secretary The Grand Circuit. Mr. Kline has expressed surprise that we give Edgeworth away. Yet until a friend gave him some, he knew nothing about its quality.

There are still thousands of pipe-smokers to whom Edgeworth is an unknown quantity. That's why we offer samples to anyone willing to buy a postcard to send for them.

It's good business for us to let men unfamiliar with Edgeworth smoke it. If these samples didn't make regular, happy, and often enthusiastic smokers of Edgeworth, we would stop offering them.

The above letter came to us from Mr. Kline seven years ago. We wrote to learn if he still held the same high opinion of Edgeworth. He replied: Trojan Laundry Company, Flint, Mich.

Gentlemen: My opinion of Edgeworth has not changed, for the very good reason that Edgeworth is still the same. I would make my endorsement stronger than ever if I knew how to do it.

Very truly yours, (signed) H. J. Kline, Asst. Sec'y & Treas. Trojan Laundry Co.

Our offer to send samples of both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed to any man sending for them is still open.

Both kinds pack so nicely that they burn freely and evenly to the bottom of the pipe.

For free samples, address Larus & Brother Company, 41 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants—If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-dozen carton of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

Scientists Test Sight of Bees

Experiments Expected to Have Important Bearing on Natural Selection.

COLOR-BLINDNESS AT ISSUE

Research is Expected to Last for Years and to Establish Just What Bee or Moth Can See or Not See.

New York.—A series of delicate experiments will soon be started by three eminent American scientists to discover whether bees and other insects are color-blind or not. The scientists who are now busy inventing devices for testing the vision of bees are Dr. F. E. Lutz, a biologist of the American Museum of Natural History; Dr. J. Arthur Harris, an entomologist of the Carnegie Institution, and Prof. E. K. Richtmyer of Cornell University, a physicist and specialist in color vision. They form the committee on the biological relations between flowers and insects of the National Research Council.

Their tests of the sight of insects are expected to last for years and to establish just what a bee or a moth can see and what it cannot see. These years of elaborate experimentation have not been planned by the National Research Council and undertaken by three eminent scientists solely for the purpose of ascertaining a bee's optical equipment. A greater question lies behind. The controversy about the bee's sight, it is said, involves the validity of the whole theory of natural selection.

The evolution of man from the lower animals and the evolution of all plant and animal life from a primitive form of life originating on earth billions or hundreds of millions of years ago are almost universally believed by scientists, but the hypothesis that the evolution was brought about almost solely by the process of natural selection has come under attack recently from many quarters. This is where the bee's sight becomes important.

Theory on "Selected" Flower.

The theologian holds generally that the beautiful colors of the flowers were placed there by the Creator for the delight of man. The biologist has generally denied this, and argued that the colors are there because they attract the attention of bees. The visits of the bees result in carrying pollen from one flower to another, which fertilizes the seeds. Unless they receive the pollen the seeds do not grow.

The cumbersome phrase of "natural selection" in this case is intended to describe a process probably millions of years old, under which the flowers which most attracted the bees by their colors or scent were pollinated in greatest numbers, while those less attractive received fewer visits from the bees and tended to die off. In each generation the flowers which pleased the bees most would be "selected" to live. These "selected" parents would have offspring, some brighter than themselves, some about the same as themselves, and some less bright (that is, of course, bright from the standpoint of the bee, whose standards of brightness might differ greatly from ours). The action of the bees, tending to preserve the prettiest colors, would make each generation of flowers slightly lovelier than its predecessors, thus producing finally the gorgeous natural varieties in existence today.

This theory had been accepted for many years, but recently it has been rudely shaken. Investigations in Germany and Belgium have made it doubtful whether a bee can tell one color from another, or whether the flowers which are gorgeous to human eyes have any power, by reason of their coloring to attract the attention of the bees at all. The results have so far been so uncertain, however, that the American scientists and institutions agreed that it was necessary to make a far-reaching study of the whole subject.

Biologists have attempted to account for the coloring of many insects or animals, as well as flowers, on the principle of "natural selection." The plumage of birds and the colors of fishes aid in courtship, mating and the increase of the species. Zebras, giraffes and thousands of types of animals, birds and insects have camouflage or protective coloration which makes it difficult for their

Dust Cause of Ages of Cold

Dr. Harlow Shapley, Harvard Observatory Director, Discusses Climate Changes.

MYSTERY PUZZLE TO SCIENCE

Earth Cooled Off During Long Periods When Sun, Earth and Other Planets Passed Through Region of Dust Clouds.

New York.—A new theory relating to one of the greatest mysteries about the past of the earth has been offered by Dr. Harlow Shapley, the measurer of the universe, whose appointment as director of the Harvard observatory was announced recently.

This mystery concerns the changes of climate over millions of years, which at one time caused the polar ice-cap to extend as far south as New York and at other times warmed the arctic region so thoroughly that the animals and vegetation of the temperate zone could live there, as shown by fossil remains in that region.

The earth has been cooled off during long periods, according to this theory, when the sun, the earth and the other planets were passing through regions of space filled with clouds of dust or dark, nebulous material, which cut off enough of the sun's heat to freeze most of the globe. At other times, apparently, the solar system moved through a region of space almost entirely free from such material, so that the sun's rays beat with full force on the earth, probably making the polar regions pleasant and the rest of the earth unlivably hot. At present the sun is apparently moving through a part of space thinly scattered with interplanetary materials.

Dog Receives Snake's Fangs to Protect Lad

Hayward, Cal.—A new niche has been set aside in the hall of fame of dogdom for Joan of Arc, an Alredale dog owned by Frank Belval of Hayward.

Belval, his thirteen-year-old son, Robert, and the dog set out on a hiking trip from the Bolinas valley ranch one Sunday afternoon. At a sharp turn in the trail Belval heard the warning signal of a coiled rattlesnake. He jumped aside barely in time. Before he could seize his son the snake struck. But the faithful dog, seemingly sensing the danger, met the snake in mid-air, receiving its poisonous fangs upon the lips. One shake and the dog had killed the rattler.

According to Belval, the snake possessed nine rattles and was almost a yard long. First aid applied to the wounded dog saved its life.

Golden Thoughts

Christmas Merry Thoughts by Christopher G. Hazard

WHO can speak of Christmas care? Merry thoughts are everywhere: From the chimney nook they run With a smile for everyone.

GOLD is good for Christmas Day. Boys and girls care more for play. Fun is good for girls and boys, Happy fun and joyful noise.

OH the Christmas and the snow! And the ruddy winter glow! Heap the table and the fire, Christmas joy should never tire.

GIVE your heart with all you give, Then your gifts with love will live. Love can live when gifts are small, Love himself is best of all.

TAKE this little gift from me, May the season gladsome be. Holly red and evergreen Twining everywhere are seen.

SETTING UP THE TREE

THE easiest way to do this, if the tree is not too large and heavy, is to insert the trunk into the hole through the bottom of a wooden box, and either paint this box green or red or cover it with green or red paper.

SINGING CHRISTMAS CAROLS

Writing of Christmas of long ago Chambers' Book of Days states: "Amid so many popular customs at Christmas, full of so much sweet and simple poetry, there is perhaps none more charming than that of the Christmas carols which celebrate in joyous yet devout strains the Nativity of the Saviour. The practice appears to be as ancient as the celebration of Christmas itself." These carols are first sung on Christmas eve, then on the morning of Christmas Day, usually by children and youths from the choir of the parish church. The beautiful practice survives in many parts of England, and it is not wholly unknown in Canada. In this city, for instance, carol singing on Christmas Eve has been revived by members of the Salvation Army.

CANDLES AND YULE LOG

CHRISTMAS gifts were common in Medieval times. Accounts tell of the chandlers' guild sending out gratis to everyone a special sort of big, flat candles which were burned with the Yule log to light the houses for the coming of a supernatural Christmas visitor. The bakers also sent out "Yule cakes," or "Yule babies," which were little images of Christ. This custom, in fact, seems to be even older, it being recorded on the old Roman calendars that on the Vigil of the Nativity little images of the Christ Child were made in great numbers and presented to the fathers in the Vatican.

GINGER COOKIES

Crown together one cupful of sugar and one cupful of shortening. Add two tablespoonfuls of molasses, one teaspoonful of ginger and a whole egg well beaten. Stir two teaspoonfuls of soda in half a cupful of boiling water. Stir in a teaspoonful of baking powder with enough flour to make a soft dough. Roll out and bake for about 30 seconds in a hot oven.

LEISURE CLASS

"Have you in this country any leisurely class that affects superiority over others?" "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "the people who shopped early for Christmas."

CANDLES AND YULE LOG

CHRISTMAS gifts were common in Medieval times. Accounts tell of the chandlers' guild sending out gratis to everyone a special sort of big, flat candles which were burned with the Yule log to light the houses for the coming of a supernatural Christmas visitor. The bakers also sent out "Yule cakes," or "Yule babies," which were little images of Christ. This custom, in fact, seems to be even older, it being recorded on the old Roman calendars that on the Vigil of the Nativity little images of the Christ Child were made in great numbers and presented to the fathers in the Vatican.

GINGER COOKIES

Crown together one cupful of sugar and one cupful of shortening. Add two tablespoonfuls of molasses, one teaspoonful of ginger and a whole egg well beaten. Stir two teaspoonfuls of soda in half a cupful of boiling water. Stir in a teaspoonful of baking powder with enough flour to make a soft dough. Roll out and bake for about 30 seconds in a hot oven.

LEISURE CLASS

"Have you in this country any leisurely class that affects superiority over others?" "Yes," replied Miss Cayenne; "the people who shopped early for Christmas."

SUFFERED ALL A WOMAN COULD

Mrs. Meyer Finally Found Relief and Health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Orange, Cal.—"I always feel very grateful to you, as some twenty years ago three doctors said I had to have a serious operation. I had a tumor, and ulcers which would gather and break. I had displacement so badly that I could hardly sit down at times, and it seemed as if I suffered everything that a woman could suffer. Then some one advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it until I was cured and saved from the operation. I have told women of your wonderful medicine times without number, and I am willing that you should use these facts and my name if you like. I also used your Compound during the Change, and I can do all my own work but the heavy part, and can walk miles every day as I help my husband in the office."

Long Beach, Cal.—Men dressed in asbestos clothing braved the great column of flame of a burning gas well at Signal Hill, near here, and placed a charge of explosive which blew out the fire. The well was estimated to be flowing 100,000,000 cubic feet of gas daily, which took fire early in the day. Watching crowds scurried for shelter as the men walked into the flames, fearing premature explosion of the dynamite. The charge was detonated electrically. The fire is supposed to have been caused by friction of the gas on the well casing.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS

The joyous Christmas season is here, the days of "peace on earth and good will toward all men."

It has been 1921 years since the birth of the child who was to be proclaimed the Savior of mankind.

In the larger cities of the United States many organizations have been busy for some time preparing Christmas treats for the children of the poor.

A "no empty stockings" campaign has been launched and will no doubt bring happiness to many hearts on Christmas day.

GOVERNOR RETURNS FROM TRIP TO WASHINGTON

PHOENIX, Dec. 21—Returning from the governors' conference at Charleston, S. C., and the national capital, where he appeared before congress to urge the adoption of a comprehensive national reclamation policy and hold conferences with various members of the tariff committee looking to the securing of an adequate protective tariff on long staple cotton and other Arizona products, Governor Thomas E. Campbell arrived in Phoenix yesterday.

As a result of representations made by the governors, following the Charleston conference, it is believed by Governor Campbell that a national reclamation bill will probably be enacted at the present session of congress.

PATAGONIA

Patagonia is known to the outsiders as a town made up of good people. If you should be in some nearby town and ask about Patagonia, the answer you would receive would sound about like this: "Well, Patagonia is a small place, but it is a clean, beautiful little town—and the climate is perfectly wonderful. The people in Patagonia are nearly all old-timers and you will find them friendly and hospitable."

The story that should be told to the outside world is the one of climate, scenery and opportunity. The time is not far off when Patagonia will be known as a hustling mining center and when that time comes we can offer to prospective citizens what they most desire—health, happiness and success.

The social life of Patagonia has reached a high standard and is the cause of favorable comment when the name of our town is mentioned.

U. OF A. TEAM LEAVES TUCSON FRIDAY FOR SAN DIEGO

TUCSON, Ariz., Dec. 22—Arizona's football squad composed of 23 men, will leave here Friday, according to present plans, and will go to San Diego, by way of Los Angeles.

Arriving in Los Angeles Saturday morning, the squad will practice there, probably on the University of Southern California field, and leave for San Diego in the afternoon. The team will rest Sunday and will be in good condition for their game with Centre College the following day in the San Diego stadium.

When Coach McKale leaves here Friday night for San Diego, he will have about 25 or 29 men with him. These will include 24 players, and Assistant Coaches Jim Pierce and "Tim" Smith, Trainer Kearns and Kirk LaShelle, whose leg was broken in the Toledo giving game.

LaShelle is being taken along as a reward for his hard work and his severe injury.

TAX PROBLEMS TAKEN UP AT MEETING AT PHOENIX

PHOENIX, Dec. 22—With representatives from every county in the state present with the exception of Apache, tax problems were discussed at a conference of the state tax commission and county assessors. The day was given over to a preliminary discussion of the 1922 assessment.

The day's conference revealed an unmarked improvement over conditions of a year ago, although the outlook is promising with the expected resumption of mining after the first of the year.

Bank Assessments a Topic One of the interesting discussions at the opening session had to do with bank assessments where there had been bank failures. It was shown that there was only a slight loss to the county and state in taxes in view of the substitution of assessing the physical property of the bank instead of its capital stock surplus and undivided profits.

Stock and merchandise assessments will show a loss in practically every county, especially in the mining towns.

New Auto Law Discussed One of the most important items to claim the attention of the tax men had to do with automobiles. Under the act passed by the last legislature automobile licenses will be distributed by the assessors rather than through the office of the secretary of state, to whom the assessors will make monthly reports and transmit the license fees.

Those who were here for the conference were George Henshaw, assessor and James McDonald, deputy assessor of Cochise county; William Benson, Coconino county; W. G. Duncan, Gila; J. M. Alfred, Graham; R. J. Coleman, Greenlee; Harry Polver, Maricopa; W. D. Roggeles, Mohave; W. E. Shawway, Navajo; V. S. Griffith, Pima; Thad Moore, Pinal; V. J. Wager, Santa Cruz; C. E. Gentry, Yavapai and A. B. Ming, Yuma. Tom Trevillian, city assessor of Phoenix and J. S. Briggs, representing the farmers of Yuma valley, also were in attendance at the initial session.

JAILED.

Synopsis.—Young Carlyle Wilburton Dale, or "Bill Dale," son of a wealthy coal operator, John K. Dale, arrives at the Halfway Switch, in eastern Tennessee, abandoning a life of idle ease and incidentally a bride, Patricia Claverling, at the altar—determined to make his own way in life. He meets "Babe" Littleford, typical mountaineer girl. "By" Heck, a character of the hills, takes him to John Moreland's home. Moreland is chief of his "clan," which has an old feud with the Littlefords. He tells Dale of the killing of his brother, David Moreland, years ago, owner of rich coal deposits, by a man named Carlisle. Dale believes the man was his father. Dale makes his home with the Morelands. Talking with Babe, Dale is ordered by "Black Adam" Ball to leave "his girl" alone. Dale whips the bully. He arranges with John Moreland to develop the coal deposits. Ben Littleford sends a challenge to John Moreland to meet him with his followers in battle. Moreland agrees. The two clans line up for battle. A Littleford fires the first shot. Babe, in an effort to stop the fighting, crosses to the Moreland side of the river, and is accidentally shot by her father and seriously wounded. The fight stops and Babe is taken to the city. Doctors announce she is not seriously hurt. Dale meets an old friend, Hobbly McLaurin, who has married Patricia Claverling. Dale's father admits he killed David Moreland and offers him funds to develop the coal. Dale declines and gets funds elsewhere. He realizes he loves Babe, who goes to live with Patricia to be educated. Henderson Goff, a coal man, appears on the scene. Dale has an exciting encounter with Goff, and is saved by "By Heck." He tries to end the feud. John Moreland and Ben Littleford declare peace. Babe comes back home, but finally promises to return to Patricia. Goff starts up trouble. Dale and Black Adam exchange shots. Black Adam is killed. Dale is accused of killing Black Adam. Babe promises to return to Patricia.

The three women turned their eyes toward the lanky mountaineer. He was standing straighter than they had ever seen him standing before, and he held his repeater across one of his thin shoulders in a manner that was almost soldierly. It was as though he had just discovered a hitherto unknown depth to himself.

The truth was that he was carrying a secret that was great, and almost too much for him.

His aged mother rose with a rheumatic groan. "Looky here, By," she demanded, "what on earth's the matter of ye? Ha' ye done went and swallowed a rifle's rattled, or a fishin' pole, that ye walk so cussed straight and look like a plumb daddled fool?"

"No, maw," grinned her son, "Nothin' like it. I'm jest hungry, that's all. My gosh, ef I don't feel hungry enough to eat a whole raw yaller dawg! And top it off with a couple o' baked house-cakes. Durn my eyes and blast my forehead, I wish't ye'd come and go home along as I go, maw, and git me some dinner."

"All right, By, all right." To Mrs. Littleford, "Come down and bring

CHAPTER XII.

Jailed.

Cartersville nestles close between the points of two outlying foothills, and it is a delightfully lazy and old-fashioned town. For the most part it is made up of gabled old brick houses, which have pretty settings of green lawn, roses, honeysuckles and trees. Even in the small business district, the streets are lined with trees. They have electric lights there, and water mains, a common school and a high school, a courthouse, a jail and a theater.

It was a little after nightfall when Dale and the other two men rode through the shaded streets. Dale noted that the people they met under the swinging lights spoke cordially and with marked courtesy to his companions. It was very evident that the officer and Major Bradley were in high standing in their home town.

Sheriff Tom Flowers drew in before a hitching-post that stood in front of the courthouse, a great old wooden building with a clock in its tower.

"Well, dismount here," said he.

They did. The major took the rein of Dale's horse.

"I'll see that the animal is well cared for, sir," he said to Dale. "And as soon as I have seen to our horses, I'll be with you. I wish to talk matters over with you. Suppose I bring supper for us both, eh?"

Dale thanked Bradley, and turned away with the officer. They walked a short block and entered a low, square building of brick and stone of which the windows were small and high and barred with iron. Dale knew that it was the Cartersville jail, and his heart sank in spite of him. Just as death by violence had been entirely new to him, so also was this entirely new to him.

Flowers took a ring of heavy keys from the hand of the jailer, and led the way down a whitewashed corridor. It was not yet bedtime, and the other prisoners were still up; some of them were reading newspapers, others were trying to mend their clothing, still others were doing nothing. A few of them called out boldly and bade the new prisoner welcome—and each of these received a gruff order from the sheriff to keep quiet. Dale paid no attention whatever to his would-be tormentors.

At an iron door at the end of the corridor, the officer halted and faced about.

"If there could be such a thing as a comfortable cell here," he said in low and kindly tones, "it's this one." He went on earnestly: "Now I want you to believe me when I tell you that it is with real regret that I put you behind a door of iron. But if I didn't do it, somebody else would do it; and it's possible that I can be a little more decent about it than another officer would be."

"I realize all that, y'know," replied Dale, "and I'm very much obliged to you, sheriff."

Flowers unlocked the door, and Bill Dale walked in. Flowers locked the door and went away.

Dale began to inspect his quarters. To all appearances, they were at least clean. There was a narrow bed covered with a pair of gray blankets, a stool and a soapbox, and nothing more. The light in the corridor behind him made snaky black lines of bar-shadows on the brick partition walls and the outer wall of stone. Dale shuddered in spite of himself. He put up one hand and turned on a small light, which dissipated the uncanny shadows—and showed him a line from Dante's "Inferno" that to him seemed very miserable; some former occupant of that cell had written it with charcoal on the whitewashed outer wall.

Then Dale sat wearily down on the narrow bed, lashed his head upon his hands, and began to think.

He had always wanted difficulties to overcome, barriers to surmount, a work to do, a fight to fight for himself. In full measure he had found them every one. He did not doubt his ability to overcome the difficulties, surmount the barriers, do his work well and fight his fight as a good man fights, and win—if it were not for the charge of having shot and killed Black Adam Ball! It seemed to him now that that must end all that was worth while for him. For that was more than a difficulty, more than a barrier.

He firmly believed that it had been his bullet that had finished the earthly existence of the giant hillman. True, it had been an accident. But how was he to convince a jury that it had been an accident? Would the jury take his word for it? The jury would not, of course.

The mysterious third shot, that had come from a little distance, that he could not reasonably expect deliverance from that source. If only he had held down his abominable, savage temper; if only he had—

Major Bradley interrupted his unpleasant train of thought.

"No brooding there, my boy!" Dale looked up. The old attorney, as neat in appearance as though he had not even seen a saddle that day, was standing just outside the hateful door of bars. Beside him stood a whitehead negro boy with a big tray of steaming food on one hand and a pot of steaming coffee in the other.

The jailer came and unlocked the door; also he very considerately brought another stool and fresh water. The major entered the cell, and the negro followed.

An amused twinkle appeared in Dale's eyes as Bradley put the tray down on the soapbox. There was enough for five thrashing-machine hands! The black boy was sent to the front door to wait.

"I thought you'd be as hungry as I am, and I'm as hungry as poor old By Heck ever was!" laughed the major, as he sat down and began to pour the coffee. "Riding always made me as hungry as a bear in April. Light right into it, Dale. There's nothing like a good steak, for any meal, when a fellow is half starved; eh, Dale? Try that one, won't you? I told Massengale I'd cause his headachin if these steaks weren't perfect, Massengale," he added, "runs the hotel here, the Eureka Funeral Parlor, and the One-Price Clothing Emporium."

"I wonder," smiled Bill Dale, "what he does with his spare time?"

Bradley laughed, his eyes twinkling merrily. Dale found that he too was hungry, now that savory odors had invaded his nostrils. A minute later, and he had pronounced his steak delicious.

"Massengale shall not suffer beheadment," said the major; and he began to carve his own steak.

It was an excellent meal, the grim surroundings notwithstanding. When it was over, the negro boy came and took away the dishes, and received with a gladsome grin the two silver coins that were given him. Then Bradley produced a handful of cigars, and two of them were promptly lighted.

"Now, sir," said the old lawyer, "I feel like talking. Let's see, you gave your man Hayes orders to carry the work right along as though nothing had happened, didn't you? And the sheriff is to go back the day after tomorrow to arrest two or three Balls, and two or three Torreys, to see what he can find out concerning the dynamiting of the two buildings and the trestle—today was not a good time to make the arrests. Am I correct?"

"Correct," nodded Dale.

Bradley regarded his cigar thoughtfully.

"Now," he said in a low tone, suddenly lifting his gaze to the other's face, "tell me about the thing that brought you here. Don't omit even the slightest detail. Nobody can overhear you if you will hold your voice down. These walls are very thick, you see. Well, you may begin."

In carefully guarded tones, Bill Dale gave a straightforward account of the whole unfortunate occurrence. The major listened intently to every word of it, so intently that he allowed his cigar to go out. Often he stopped his client and asked him to repeat certain portions of the story in order that he might be doubly sure of a point.

As Major Bradley rose to ask the jailer to come and let him out, Dale muttered dolefully:

"Tell me, major; what do you think of my case? It looks rather bad, doesn't it?"

"Not bad enough to warrant your feeling blue over it, my boy," said Bradley, showing his polished white teeth in a smile that was meant to be you're killin', and spend the day with me. Good luck to ye, Babe, when ye go back to the city!"

When they were within a hundred yards of their cabin home beside the river, Granny Heck said to her son, whose mind seemed inordinately busy: "Who d'ye reckon killed Black Adam, the bound dawg o' Torment, eh, darlin'?"

"I'm a-lookin' fo' rain today," very quietly said By Heck.

"I axed you, sonny boy," the witch-like old woman went on, "who did you reckon killed Black Adam?"

"E'en rain in the air," as though he had not heard. "Ef it don't rain today, it'll shore rain tonight."

"Now looky here!" snapped Granny Heck. "I axed who did you think killed Adam Ball?"

By Heck did not smile, nor did he frown. "Ef it don't rain today nor tonight," he drawled, "it'll shore rain tomorrow. I tell ye, mother, the rain's in the air."

"By: By! Ye daddled idjit!"

reassuring. "I think we'll get you out of it. Anyway, don't worry about it. Worry will kill a cat, they say! You didn't kill Adam Ball, John Moreland had taught you how to shoot pretty well; and if you took even half as careful an aim as you think you did, you couldn't have missed Ball's hat by so much."

"I have an idea, Dale," he resumed, "that if we knew who fired that third shot we'd know who did for Ball. It might have been done in order to save you. Ball was noted, I understand, as an unfair and tricky fighter. He might have been trying to trick you when he rose and fell groaning. Perhaps he meant to draw you into the open, that he might have a clean shot at you, eh?"

Dale shook his head gloomily.

"Hardly plausible, major. In that event there was nothing against the man whose bullet finished Ball, because he did it to save me; and he would have owned to it and prevented my arrest. A man who liked me well Adm, but he missed—Adam had done shot at Bill fust, y'understand, Tom. But I didn't miss, I don't never miss. I'm a plumb tombstone shot. They allus rules me out at any shootin' match. I'd ha' owned up to it yest'day, but the thought o' Jall had me skeered bad. I jest can't let as good a man as Bill Dale suffer fo' a thing I done myself. So you let him out, Tom, and put the right man in there."

Flowers had a good heart, and this touched it. But he was not very much surprised.

"Tell us about it, Caleb," he requested.

Caleb looked toward Dale, then he faced the lord of Cartersville's little prison again.

"Well, sheriff, when I seed Bill Dale go off toward the trestle by himself and alone, I knowed right then he was in danger o' bein' laywaged by some o' them thar lowdown Balls and Cherokee Torreys. So I decides to foller after him and yard him, without him a-knowin' anything about it, which some I done. When he met Adam Ball—"

He broke off abruptly.

"Go on," urged Flowers.

"I reckon I won't," smiled Caleb, and his eyes were still twinkling. "I reckon I won't do no more talkin' just now. Yes, I reckon the proper place fo' me to do my big talkin' is in the cotchouse at my trial. Lock me up will ye Tom?"

"We'll see," said Flowers.

Fortwith he dispatched a deputy for Judge Carter and Major Bradley, who hastened to the jail.

An hour later Caleb Moreland was the occupant of the cell at the end of the whitewashed corridor, and Dale was mounting his bay horse Fox to ride back into the heart of the ever-lasting hills. He arrived two hours after nightfall. The Morelands were glad to see him, and the Littlefords were glad to see him. There was rejoicing there in the broad valley that lies between David Moreland's mountain and the Big Pine. Everybody had been expecting him, and many were the pairs of eyes that had been watching for him. He found himself suddenly wishing, with a lightning at his throat, that his father could know how much bigger and how much better it was to be thus esteemed than to be wealthy.

Luke took charge of his tired horse and led it away to the old log barn and to some fifteen ears of yellow corn. Luke's father escorted him proudly, the guest of honor, in to one of Abba Moreland's incomparable old-fashioned suppers, which was none the worse for being late. Several Littlefords sat at the long, homelike table.

"I've Come Here to Own Up to the Killin' of Black Adam Ball," Began the Young Hillman.

enough to kill Ball to save my life would like me well enough to confess and save me from suffering for it. I am sure of that, major."

"Ah, my boy," smiled the older of the two, "you don't yet know the mountain heart. Jail is a terrible thing to the liberty-loving mountaineer. But love of you, and love of fair-dealing, will soon overcome the fear of jail, and you will be freed—if what I strongly suspect proves to be well founded. I'll leave you now, Dale. I'll see you in the morning, sir. Good-night!"

When his optimistic attorney had gone, Dale glanced once more at the to him miserable line from Dante's "Inferno," and began to remove his outer clothing preparatory to going to bed. He did not feel anything like so confident concerning the outcome of his trial as Major Bradley evidently felt. Then he became even more dejected, and he told himself that the major had spoken so reassuringly merely to help him keep up heart.

The night passed, and another bright summer day dawned, and in the Cartersville jail there was one prisoner who had not slept at all. Each of those long and heavy black hours had been an age to this prisoner to whom jail was so new.

At noon a furious windstorm, accompanied by much vivid lightning and blinding rain, sprang out of the west and began to sweep the countryside and out of the lowering wet gloom there came one to deliver Bill Dale. He was a mountaineer, young and stalwart and strong, and about him there was much of that certain English finesse that was so striking in his father.

He entered the low, square building of brick and stone and stopped in the center of the corridor, where he stood, while water ran from his wet clothing and gathered in little pools at his feet, and looked to his right and to his left. Dale saw him, and cried out in surprise:

"Caleb!"

Caleb Moreland walked straight, his head up and his shoulders back, a splendid picture of virile young manhood, to the end of the corridor. He gripped top of the door's hated bars, bars that had long been worn smooth by other human hands; he pressed his smoothly shaven, sunburned face against the iron, and smiled.

"How are ye a-feelin' by this time, Bill? It's some h— of a place, ain't it?"

Dale took a step toward him. "Well, a man's boudoir is nicer. What are you doing here, Caleb?"

"Ye come to set you free," said Caleb Moreland.

Dale stared unbelievably. "But that is impossible, Cale. How could you set me free?"

"Call Tom Flowers, and I'll sight ye."

Dale called, and the officer came immediately. Caleb Moreland turned from the cell door and faced him.

"I've come here to own up to the killin' of Black Adam Ball," began the young hillman.

He swallowed, went a trifle pale under his tan, and continued bravely: "Bill Dale thar, he never done it. I am the one 'at done it. Bill he shot at Black Adam's follic capture Dale.

ARE IMITATION BLUE POINTS

Product Generally Sold as Pick of Oyster Family Not Really Taken From Famous Beds.

It has been computed that six barrels of Blue Point oysters are ordered and eaten for every barrel taken from the Great South bay, in Suffolk county, New York. About 10,000 acres in the bottom of Great South bay are under oyster cultivation, and Blue Points now come from many other places along the Atlantic coast. Even those that are taken from the waters of Great South bay are not the Blue Points which made that name famous; considerably more than a century ago, but are descendants of Virginia oysters, which were planted in Great South bay many years ago, and which probably came from Chesapeake bay. Nearly a century ago—that is, about 1825, oysters in the waters which were the home of Blue Points, became so scarce and costly that they were worth five cents apiece, which was a scandalous price for oysters at that time. Those old-fashioned Blue Points were not small oysters with comparatively smooth shells, but were of giant size, more like those we call Saddle Rocks or Tangier "selects." Finally the Blue Point oyster bottom became barren. After this condition had prevailed for a number of years, it was determined to restore the Great South bay oyster industry, and boatsloads of seed oysters were taken from old Virginia and put overboard. Their descendants are there today, yet even they are able to furnish only a small proportion of the Blue Points that are ordered.

Editors as Exhibits.

They are shameless, abandoned people in South America. They make fun of editors!

The following paragraph appeared in the Buenos Aires Herald recently: "At the Press club carnival ball the editors of all the papers in town will be on view from one to two in the morning, free and for nothing, a special cage having been built to hold their bodies, and another arrangement for the support of their weighty brows. Those who have never yet seen such people in the raw, so to speak, are advised to look early and avoid the rush, but the public is hereby warned that nothing may be poked through the bars, the exhibits having regular feeding times, even as you said it."

Radium Invisible.

Radium is found in nature in quantities so exceedingly small that it is never visible even when the material is examined with a microscope.

Furthering Science.

In 1920 the Smithsonian Institution undertook 23 separate expeditions. New astrophysical stations were established in Arizona and in Chile. The African and Australian expeditions and various experiments were eminently successful.

Corn is Still King.

Washington.—Corn is still king of American farm products in point of money value. The census bureau, in a statement, placed corn at the head of twenty leading crops in 1919 with a value of $3,507,797,102 out of an aggregate value for the whole list of about $13,750,000. Next were: Hay and forage, $2,523,000,000; cotton and cotton seed, $2,355,000,000; wheat, $2,074,000,000, and oats, $855,000,000.

New York to Poison Rats.

New York.—An endless chain of death is being prepared for the rat population of New York, the city health department announced. A half dozen of the city's 6,000,000 rats will be inoculated, it is explained, with a germ which will cause their death shortly and infect other rats.

Three Bodies Recovered.

Greenville, Ala.—Three bodies were recovered from the ruins of the Stabler hospital here, which was destroyed by fire. All the victims were in rooms on the top floor of the three-story building. Their exit was cut off by flames.

Recommend Increase at West Point.

Washington.—An increase in the cadet corps at the West Point Military Academy from 1,334 to 2,500 is recommended by Brig. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, superintendent of the academy. In his annual report, the academy, the report shows, now can train only one-third of the officers needed even for a peacetime army of 150,000 men and would fall short, it was said, of providing the nucleus of officer material desired for training civilians in time of emergency.

U. S. Concern Gets Big Contract.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A contract for electrical apparatus to the value of $2,000,000 has been awarded to the Westinghouse Electrical International Company by the Daito Electric Power Company of Japan, the Westinghouse Company announced. The machinery is to be used in the hydro-electric plants, which are to form part of a great power system for the Tokio district. The contract is to be transmitted at 151,000 volts, the announcement said.

CHAPTER XII.

Jailed.

Cartersville nestles close between the points of two outlying foothills, and it is a delightfully lazy and old-fashioned town. For the most part it is made up of gabled old brick houses, which have pretty settings of green lawn, roses, honeysuckles and trees. Even in the small business district, the streets are lined with trees. They have electric lights there, and water mains, a common school and a high school, a courthouse, a jail and a theater.

It was a little after nightfall when Dale and the other two men rode through the shaded streets. Dale noted that the people they met under the swinging lights spoke cordially and with marked courtesy to his companions. It was very evident that the officer and Major Bradley were in high standing in their home town.

Sheriff Tom Flowers drew in before a hitching-post that stood in front of the courthouse, a great old wooden building with a clock in its tower.

"Well, dismount here," said he.

They did. The major took the rein of Dale's horse.

"I'll see that the animal is well cared for, sir," he said to Dale. "And as soon as I have seen to our horses, I'll be with you. I wish to talk matters over with you. Suppose I bring supper for us both, eh?"

Dale thanked Bradley, and turned away with the officer. They walked a short block and entered a low, square building of brick and stone of which the windows were small and high and barred with iron. Dale knew that it was the Cartersville jail, and his heart sank in spite of him. Just as death by violence had been entirely new to him, so also was this entirely new to him.

Flowers took a ring of heavy keys from the hand of the jailer, and led the way down a whitewashed corridor. It was not yet bedtime, and the other prisoners were still up; some of them were reading newspapers, others were trying to mend their clothing, still others were doing nothing. A few of them called out boldly and bade the new prisoner welcome—and each of these received a gruff order from the sheriff to keep quiet. Dale paid no attention whatever to his would-be tormentors.

At an iron door at the end of the corridor, the officer halted and faced about.

"If there could be such a thing as a comfortable cell here," he said in low and kindly tones, "it's this one." He went on earnestly: "Now I want you to believe me when I tell you that it is with real regret that I put you behind a door of iron. But if I didn't do it, somebody else would do it; and it's possible that I can be a little more decent about it than another officer would be."

Git this here, mother dear—whichever it was done it shore ain't n-goin' to let nary half in Bill Dale's head suffer fo' it!"

One of old Granny Heck's bony fingers shot out toward her son like a weapon.

"It was you, By!" she accused. "It was you killed Black Adam Ball! Now own up to me, son, and I'll bakke ye some cawbread with algs and hawz-renderin's in it. Wasn't it you that done it?"

By Heck looked toward some fleecy white clouds that were sailing slowly, like ships of silver and pearl in a sunny cerulean sea, over the rugged crest of the majestic Big pine.

"E'en rain in the air," he drawled. "Ef it don't rain today, it'll rain tonight; and ef it don't rain tonight, it'll rain tomorrow. Yeah; the rain in the air, mother, as shore as dammit."

CHAPTER XII.

Jailed.

Cartersville nestles close between the points of two outlying foothills, and it is a delightfully lazy and old-fashioned town. For the most part it is made up of gabled old brick houses, which have pretty settings of green lawn, roses, honeysuckles and trees. Even in the small business district, the streets are lined with trees. They have electric lights there, and water mains, a common school and a high school, a courthouse, a jail and a theater.

It was a little after nightfall when Dale and the other two men rode through the shaded streets. Dale noted that the people they met under the swinging lights spoke cordially and with marked courtesy to his companions. It was very evident that the officer and Major Bradley were in high standing in their home town.

Sheriff Tom Flowers drew in before a hitching-post that stood in front of the courthouse, a great old wooden building with a clock in its tower.

"Well, dismount here," said he.

They did. The major took the rein of Dale's horse.

"I'll see that the animal is well cared for, sir," he said to Dale. "And as soon as I have seen to our horses, I'll be with you. I wish to talk matters over with you. Suppose I bring supper for us both, eh?"

Dale thanked Bradley, and turned away with the officer. They walked a short block and entered a low, square building of brick and stone of which the windows were small and high and barred with iron. Dale knew that it was the Cartersville jail, and his heart sank in spite of him. Just as death by

"Wasn't it as endearing as usual?" asked Jack with a twinkle in his eye. "Yes, just as much as ever," replied Charlie.

"Then, for Pete's sake, what is the trouble?" inquired Jack impatiently. "The letter," mumbled Charlie, "was a carbon copy."

War Changed French Youth

Treat Girls as Comrades and Disdain Officialdom and Professions, Says Writer.

SEES BERNARD SHAW UPHELD

Women Now Do the Courting—Princes Become Plumbers or Raise Horses and Pigs—Not Keen on Literature.

Paris.—A radical change has taken place in the youth of France in the last decade, according to a writer in the Paris Temps, who sees them, made materialists by the late war, inclined to treat the opposite sex as comrades and caring little for matrimony or courting, and much more interested in making money than in entering the professions.

"A very brief observation of our young men," he writes, "reveals how they have departed from the ways of their elders. The war and the moral and material overturn that it brought about abrupt changes in our mode of living that have come in the last 20 years, speed of communication by automobile and airplane, the depreciation of currency, calling for increased earnings—all this is acting upon the young folk and is creating in them needs and desires we never knew.

One of the most striking traits, and the most significant among them, is their disdain for officialdom and the liberal professions. The recruiting of functionaries, officers, professors, and in general all the careers with a fixed salary, is becoming more and more difficult. At St. Cyr (the French West Point) the number of candidates is continually diminishing. It is industry, commerce, finance, agriculture, colonization which attract young people. The love of risk and action is much stronger in them than in their forefathers.

"Almost no one at present can live within his income, and in the best families of the aristocracy and the bourgeoisie the boys are going bravely to work. The young Prince M. is in a large plauding concern. Two of his relatives live in Morocco, where they are raising horses and pigs. In another large family the three sons are in banks and commercial firms.

"Literature, it is evident, attracts youth little. Many never even open a book; serious works, history, memoirs, etc., have more chance than novels, but not much. Love stories hold a

Hard to Tame Missouri River

Army Engineers Engaged in Keeping It From Swallowing Farm Land.

ONCE GREAT TRADE ARTERY

Before the Coming of the Railroads Steamers Plowed Its Waters as Far as Fort Benton, Mont.—Need Special Boats.

Kansas City, Mo.—Taming the Missouri river, outlaw among American rivers, is the task of the United States army engineers, whose headquarters are here. Their sector is the Missouri river, from Fort Benton, Mont., to a point opposite Alton, Ill., where the Missouri, with a roar and a rush, joins the Mississippi and thereafter sweeps with some degrees of calmness to the Gulf of Mexico.

The task of the river engineers is to coerce the Missouri river into "staying out," and to coax it out of its long-time custom of changing its channel whenever the wind moves it. This may sound like an exaggeration, but to anyone who has spent a day on the river with the army engineers, and has seen the Missouri eating away at a cornfield with wicked energy, swallowing up earth, corn, weeds, fences and trees, it seems sometimes as if the river actually had a personality, and an outlaw one, at that.

Other Ruinous Operations. And while carrying away farm land from one bank, somewhere else it is equally busy, piling up sand, mud and driftwood, making land out of what was river a few days before. Then, too, the river has a habit of occasionally clogging its own channel, building sandbars so long and so high that it must needs become broad and shallow in order to continue its restless course.

It is a constant struggle, but it is not a hopeless one, and the engineers point with a measure of justified pride to those places along the stream where they have built dikes, which resulted in the making of land; to the concave bends where revetments have stopped the river from cutting its bank. Given a dike on one side and a revetment on the other, and constant diligence, so that small breaks may be repaired before they become serious, the river engineers say they can keep the stream fairly well anchored.

Special Boats Needed. Boats designed for any other river in the world but the Missouri have been used, and because of the shifting depths of the river, have failed. With all its disadvantages, there is a good deal to be said, according to the engineers, for the old paddle-wheel steamer, side-wheeler or stern-wheeler, which condition is ideal for service on the Missouri.

The river is navigable, say the engineers, and with sufficient time and patience it can be made manageable.

"A great game if you don't weaken," one says to Major Wilkes, in charge of the river work, and his aids. "You can't weaken," they assure you. "You just keep after it, for the river itself never weakens."

lower place in their affections than in those of their elders. What they talk about is the automobile, aviation, boxing, mechanics. They marry young and treat young women as comrades, as in England and the United States. It is not rare at a ball to see one of them invite a lady to dance with him by a gesture from a distance, and to leave her when the dance is over without conducting her to her place, and no one seems to be particularly shocked.

"The number of marriageable men being less than that of women, it is the latter who take the initiative and conduct the love-making. Bernard Shaw, in 'Man and Superman,' develops the thesis that men never marry women, but are married by them. We reproach the Anglo-Saxon countries, and yet see ourselves daily proving the thesis of Bernard Shaw."

FOCH IS MADE LEGION MAN

Distinguished Marshal Recipient of Ceremonial Badge From George Washington Post, No. 1.

Marshal Ferdinand Foch became a member of the American Legion the day he landed in America on his recent visit. He signed the application for membership immediately upon his arrival at Washington, D. C.

The Marshal was met at the train by officials of George Washington Post No. 1 and escorted to the President's room in Union station. Here he was presented by Lieut. Howard S. Felt, U. S. N., commander of the post, with the American Legion ceremonial badge.

EX-SERVICE MEN RUN BUSES

Former Soldiers and Sailors Are Re-Employed by the Fifth Avenue Coach Company.

The Fifth avenue bus in New York is a national institution. It is as famous as Broadway, Fifth avenue, Brooklyn bridge and the Woolworth building. The busses which ply through one of the most congested thoroughfares in the world are manned largely by ex-service men. This fact was discovered recently when employees of the Fifth Avenue Coach company, operators of the busses, applied for a charter for an American Legion post.

"We have found the ex-soldier and ex-sailor to be excellent bus men," said John A. Ritchie, president of the coach company, in a recent interview. "The ex-service man may have been a little restless when he came out of service, but wasn't everybody a little restless after the war?" asks Mr. Ritchie.

Mr. Ritchie re-employed every man of his organization who had gone to war and in putting on new employees has given preference to ex-service men. His company recently started a "citizenship" campaign, the purpose of which was to bring about a more friendly relationship between the patrons and employees of the bus. The campaign has resulted in virtually eliminating complaints of passengers, and, according to Mr. Ritchie, proves that "there are two sides to nearly every complaint."

IS STRONG FOR AMERICANISM

St. Paul Newspaper Editor Lauds the First Task of the American Legion.

"Good American citizenship means making the most of ourselves and our opportunities as Americans, and helping our neighbors to do likewise," declares Harrison Fuller, the first department commander of the American Legion in Minnesota, who was selected by Legionnaires of that state to represent them on the recent "pilgrimage" to France and the battlefields.

"Americanism," continues Fuller, "as conceived by the American Legion, has for its first task the education of all elements of our population in the principles of American government and in the opportunities offered by our system to the humblest resident of our land."

Fuller is city editor of the St. Paul Dispatch and Pioneer Press. During his term as state commander, he organized 472 posts of the Legion in Minnesota.

RIFLES FOR LEGION POSTS Arms and Ammunition for Use at Funerals Will Be Supplied by the Government.

American Legion posts wishing to stock up on obsolete rifles and blank ammunition for use in funeral ceremonies may obtain them from corps ordnance officers, United States army, under the provisions of an act of congress. No more than ten rifles and their equipment will be supplied to one post.

Legion state commanders must approve the application for the loan of rifles and the sale of blank ammunition. Upon receipt of the application bearing the endorsement of the state commander, the corps ordnance officer will supply a bond covering the total value of the property. This bond, when properly executed, must be approved by the state commander and returned to the ordnance officer. Transportation must be paid by the post.

Corps ordnance officers are located as follows: First area, 90 Chancery street, Boston, Mass.; second area, Governor's Island, N. Y.; third area, Fort Howard, Md.; fourth area, Fort McPherson, Ga.; fifth area, Fort Benning, Ga.; sixth area, Fort Sherman, Ill.; seventh area, Fort Crook, Neb.; eighth area, Fort Sam Houston, Tex.; ninth area, 804 Santa Fe building, San Francisco, Cal.

They Gave Him a Raft for Himself

Joe Krebeck, a mere youth in years, who, when he's feeling extra fine, easily manages to flatten a scale to the extent of 629 pounds, recently gave the officers of the S. S. The captain saved the day by assigning a special raft to him.

MANY COSTLY BOOKS ARE SAVED

Blotting Paper Used to Prevent Loss of Priceless Library.

Collection of Books on China Had Been Soaked With Sea Water During Visit of Tidal Wave to Jap Port.

London.—The late Dr. G. E. Morrison, correspondent of the London Times at Peking, had collected a splendid library of books relating to China which he sold to the house of Mitsui in Japan. The Mitsuis, the Rothschilds of the Far East, were about to establish a seat of Oriental study and desired the Morrison books for this purpose. This much is known, but what happened to the library between the books leaving Doctor Morrison's house in Peking and their arrival at Tokyo is not generally known and reads somewhat like a romance.

These priceless volumes were packed by the Japanese agents of the purchaser in ordinary packing cases and made the journey safely through the Yellow sea and were landed at the Japanese port of arrival. The cases were then put into the ordinary warehouses of the port. Then a strange thing happened.

The Japanese port was suddenly visited without warning by a tidal wave of unprecedented force and dimension. All the warehouses were flooded and the whole library was drenched in sea water.

The house of Mitsui, however, is resourceful; every scrap of blotting paper in Japan was secured and literally thousands of hands were set to work interleaving every damaged page with blotting paper. The entire approach to this particular port was blocked with wonderful books being dried—like Bombay ducks—in the sun.

The damage, of course, was heavy, but from the literary standpoint the library was saved.

KNEW HOLY LAND GEOGRAPHY

Insurance Man Could Do More Than Guess at the Birthplace of His Acquaintance.

An insurance man of Indianapolis, who is also a Biblical student, was recently making his usual weekly calls in Irvington, and stopped at a residence to inquire of the young woman at the door about the birthplace of her mother.

She said that it was the same name of a town mentioned in the Bible.

"Was it Jerusalem?" he asked. "No, but I am sure it was a town near there," she said.

"Well, then," the man replied, "it must have been Antioch."

"So in the evening when the mother returned home from a social function the daughter related the conversation that had taken place when the insurance man called."

"It seems strange," said the mother, "but he was right. I was born in a little town in Ohio by the name of Antioch, and nearly was another village called Jerusalem."—Indianapolis News.

Evidently. "And so they married and lived happily ever after." "Yes." "Evidently a very old-fashioned couple."

What Kind of a Day Do You Wish Yourself?

Suppose you could make a wish at the breakfast table and finally have the wish come true. Would you say,

"I want this to be a good day," or—"I am willing for this day to drag along?"

If you keep on wishing your days with the food you eat, finally the wish is likely to come true.

Grape-Nuts helps your wish for a good day. Nothing miraculous; just the natural result from right food with the right taste.

There is a charm of flavor and crispness in Grape-Nuts that is like the smile of a good friend at the breakfast table.

And Grape-Nuts, with cream or milk (fresh or tinned), is fully nourishing—feeding the tissues and glands, the bone and blood, with just those elements which Nature requires—building strength without any "heaviness."

Grape-Nuts is the perfected goodness of wheat and malted barley, scientifically developed—ready to eat from the package. A Grape-Nuts breakfast or lunch is a practical wish for good luck.

Catarrahal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrahal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrahal Deafness is caused by an inherited condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a running ear or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrahal deafness.
