"KIDDING" THE FARMERS ON EXPORTS

The Republican policy of isolation--political, commercial and social--from 1918 was the chief factor in the ruin that came to the American farmer in 1921-22. Isolation meant no further international co-operation--after 1918--either by the government or by bankers or business men--in any definite or systematic way to maintain or keep stabilized the international exchange, credit, and trade situation, so as to keep a steady and even flow of commerce back and forth between Europe and America. The result was that when the cash and the liquid or gilt-edged credit of Europe became exhausted she could not, unaided, keep stabilized the exchange situation and so buy our supplies of surplus foodstuffs or raw materials so as to go to work. Europe needed vast quantities of these, being entirely depleted. The result was--her purchasing power becoming exhausted--that the mechanism and entire international trade situation became dislocated and demoralized, and prices and market conditions in Europe went to pieces early in 1921. The fluctuating exchange was one cause of this. The law of supply and demand was thereby suspended.

Since that time our farmers have sold to Europe in a disrupted and dislocated market, which meant any old price far below that which the law of supply and demand would have fixed under some reciprocal trade conditions which international economic co-operation would have maintained.

It is "kidding" the farmer sure enough to point to the larger quantity of his exports during 1921-22 to a broken and collapsed market and keeping silent as the grave about the almost nominal prices he got, when the farmer is only interested in the latter. Our farmers could have exported even larger quantities had they been willing to give it away or to take nominal prices. Everyone knows that tens and even hundreds of millions of abled-bodied people in Europe have either been want or starving for our surplus foodstuffs during 1921-22, and that the law of supply and demand therefore would have insured a splendid price for our surplus if permitted to operate.

"President Harding sees nothing in the international or domestic situation which will require an extraordinary session of congress," says the Washington Post, recognized as the official spokesman of the administration. When President Harding and his political advisers contemplate the fact that upon the assembling of the next congress the reactionary Republican party, as at present constituted and controlled, will cease to function, it may be said with obvious truth that Mr. Harding not only does not want an extraordinary or special session of that congress, but that he does not want a regular session either.

The total sales of sugar in this country during 1922 were 11,200,000,000 pounds. If that quantity is sold in 1923 under the "protection" of the Fordney-McCumber profiters' tariff law it will cost the American people about $197,000,000 more than they paid last year.

The principal regret expressed at Secretary Fall's resignation is that it was not accompanied by the resignation of Attorney General Daugherty.

ONE HARDING PROMISE THAT WAS KEPT

Judge Edwin L. Davis, who represents the fifth district of Tennessee in congress, who has won additional distinction by his leadership of Democratic opposition to ship subsidy, has made the promise that President Harding gave one pledge in the 1920 campaign which he has faithfully kept. Being emphatically fair in all things, Judge Davis took the opportunity at the Jackson Day dinner in Philadelphia to give President Harding full credit. He said: "During the 1920 campaign you will recall that they (Republicans) denounced President Wilson and his administration in unmeasured terms. They criticized him severely because, although the head of his party, he had taken the lead in party matters; they upbraided him bitterly because, although the chief magistrate of the nation, he had taken the lead in governmental affairs. They said that they prepared to elect a man who would not do these things. "They proposed to set up a sort of political Sanhedrin of elder statesmen and master minds, perhaps permitting the president to sit in as an observer. "Candidate Harding acquiesced in this sort of a program, and he is the only man who ever ran for president who had as one of the chief planks of his platform a promise that, if elected, he would only be a figure-head president. However, he has kept that pledge to the letter, and I want to be fair enough to give him full credit for it."

It is going to cost the taxpayers many hundreds of thousands of dollars to have the tariff commission undertake to make the Fordney-McCumber profiters' tariff law do what the Republican congress said it would accomplish when it was enacted.

Republican "game ducks" are not limping in their race to get Secretary Fall's job.

Owl Preys by Night

The habits of animals are developed and regulated chiefly by their surroundings and by the sort of prey on which they live. Sea-gulls, for example, can dive a considerable distance under water and catch the fish which form their principal article of diet, while a chicken would starve to death if forced to depend upon this method of securing food. So it is with owls, which generally make their appearance only after dark. This species of birds feeds mainly upon mice and other small creatures which are active at night. Therefore, the owl, which has developed a soft plumage that makes its flight almost noiseless, comes out after sunset in search of its food. It is also because of this habit that the owl's eyes, like the cat's, are so made that the pupil can be dilated until the bird is able to make use of every particle of light available and, while owls cannot see in absolute darkness, they are able to utilize the faintest of light rays to such an extent that they can spot and catch their prey unerringly.

Wholesale Human Mutilation

Forty thousand pairs of ears and 40,000 noses, the war trophies of that famous and painfully thorough Japanese General Hideoyoshi. He beneath the plain stone marker and grass-grown mound of the "Mimi-Zuka," or Ear tomb, a short distance from one of Klot's main streets.

The ears and noses are not, however, the bounty of any recent exploit. Hideoyoshi was the strong man of Japan more than three centuries ago, and his gruesome trophies were once the valued property of 40,000 Koreans who had foolishly resisted the Japanese general's invasion of their native land.

The Fine Art of Conversation

Quite often people who are willing to spend years in the perfection of other arts are loth to devote a little time daily to the interchange of good conversation. Practice three times a day, a few minutes at a time, during breakfast, luncheon and dinner, will enable the shyer boy or girl to become a ready conversationalist.

Table talk need not be brilliant, but it must be agreeable. Impassioned arguments, unfeeling gossip, shop talk, house-keeping troubles, details of hospital operations or dental services--these and kindred topics are not social subjects. Young people should be encouraged to report at the dinner table any pertinent incident of the day or to invite comment upon books, music, pictures, etc. Good stories--brief and well told--may be repeated at dessert time. What is essential is to acquire the habit of ready conversation.

SOME BIRD

The other day two women, one of whom was very deaf, were walking by the railway. Suddenly an express train pulled by, and as it passed the engine gave a double shriek that seemed to rend the sky. The deaf one turned to her friend and remarked, with a happy smile: "That's the first chicken I've heard this year."

BIRD FEASTS ON LIVE SHEEP Species of Parrot is the Most Formidable Enemy of the New Zealand Farmer.

HAS BEEN UNDER SIX FLAGS Five Emblems Waived Over Texas Before the Permanency of the Stars and Stripes.

When the first settlers came to New Zealand the kea was mainly a vegetarian, the animal part of its diet being confined to insects and grub. It has been suggested that it acquired its taste for sheep flesh from the offal which the farmers left exposed after slaughtering a sheep.

BUTTONS ONCE HAD PURPOSE In Old Times There Was Good Reason for the Present Merely "Ornamental" Appendages.

A well-known speaker recently engaged in some captious remarks at a gathering of women, upon the frivolities of fashion particularly as concerned women's dress. He was getting considerable fun out of it until one of the ladies interrupted him and asked what the buttons on the back of his coat were for.

Average Would Be Maintained. Bret Harte was once lecturing at Harrisburg, in Virginia, and on the morning of his arrival had such a terrible headache that he said he would cheerfully have died there and then. He went for a walk, accompanied by the person who was to take the chair at his lecture. The latter told him that Harrisburg was a very healthy place, the death rate averaging only one per cent.

BAD BOY ON OCEAN'S CHART Geographers Tired of Misbehavior of Falcon Island, Located in the South Pacific.

Falcon Island, in the South Pacific, is the most restive and changeable piece of land in the world. It has a knack of disappearing below the waves and then suddenly bobbing up again.

It was first seen and charted by H. M. S. Falcon in 1805. But in 1877 another ship found that the land had disappeared, though smoke was issuing from the sea. The charts were altered accordingly.

No further signs of ambition were noted until 1900, when the island again began to grow. Since then it has undergone many changes. Today it is covered with palm trees and vegetation, but its reputation for misbehavior is such that no one will settle upon it.—London Tit-Bits.

Dancing Egg of a Bug. Shasta county, California, is the land of wonders, according to the Los Angeles Times. The latest is the dancing egg. It is laid by an as yet undetermined insect on the leaves of oak trees. Masses of these eggs cling to the under side of the leaf and as they advance toward maturity they drop to the ground and dance about.

Indian Mode of Travel. Throughout early history the Indian is characterized by his mode of travel. Explorers who first pushed up the great rivers found the Indian navigating the water with his canoe. In the northern part the canoes were of birch bark, and of elm bark farther south.

Queer African Idols. Very odd in appearance is a group of African idols recently brought to the United States by a missionary. They were carved by natives of Nigeria. One of the group, "Ifa," a queer-looking image with a high-crowned hat, was the principal deity of Nigeria when the missionaries began their work there.

India's Beautiful Tower. Among the wealth and magnificence in and about Delhi, one of the most wonderful sights is the Kutub Minar, said to be the most nearly perfect tower in the world. It stands ten miles outside the city in the midst of a vast pile of ruins which tell of Delhi's greatness when it was the largest city of India.

SOUND THEIR DANGER SIGNAL All Beavers Understand Warning Which is Conveyed to Them by Their Follows.

Although sometimes found in pairs, beavers are essentially gregarious animals, and like many inoffensive creatures of that habit, they have a danger signal understood by all the members of the colony and a peculiar odor for keeping them in touch with each other, writes H. I. Coocok, F. R. S., in Conquest.

A suddenly started beaver promptly dives, and, as it goes under, it gives the water a resounding slap with its tail, which warns other beavers with lightning earshot that danger is at hand. Down they all go into the depths, leaving no sign of their presence apart from the ripples on the surface of the lake or stream. The odor which keeps the community together comes from an oily fluid discharged from a couple of large glands beneath the root of the tail.

Sunset is emphatically a magazine for the whole family, and it is not duplicated in any sense by any other periodical. Despite heavier costs of production and mailing expense, due to "zone" postage rates, Sunset maintains a fair subscription price of $2.50 per year; but permits western newspapers to offer it in attractive club combinations. Sunset readers are given the benefit of a special "Western" Editorial section (Pulse of the West), a home-makers and home-builders' section (The Home in the West), The Book Corner, The Service Bureau, the Guide Post (for travelers and tourists) and Interesting Westerners—unusual stories of unusual (western) people; besides a high quality of fiction and special articles. You may not soon again have the opportunity to get this high-class magazine at a reduction. By special arrangement with the publishers of Sunset we are offering it in combination with the Patagonian (for a limited time only) at a saving of $1.50 per year for the two publications. You want your "home" paper, and you should also be a subscriber for a distinctly "western" magazine. Sunset will fill that need. Every person in the west who subscribes for Sunset magazine is really helping the west—and himself, as well. Get the Patagonian and Sunset for $3 a year—a saving of $1.50. The first of the year 1923 he took the first annual session of the American Farm Bureau Federation. It was necessary for the executive board to outline the policies for the coming year.

The Farm Bureau poses as a service organization. Without doubt the greatest and most immediate service which can be rendered is help in more successfully and profitably marketing farm products. This undoubtedly means cooperative marketing and may be applied to every type of farm production and thus render a real service to every farmer in America. There is, therefore, being organized a special department of marketing in our office here to be handled by one of the strongest men of the country available for that work who will be ably supported by sub assistants as he may need. Successful cooperative marketing means bringing into play all the other departments of the American Farm Bureau Federation. The departments of organization, information, research, transportation and legislation will be called on and used to assist in this great work. Each can render efficient help. This work can only succeed with the aid of each and every one of our members. Let each one make good use of the facilities being set up for your use and stand by it. Let the slogan for the year be:

FORWARD, FARM BUREAU!
I am counting on every member to do his share.

Meal Lost to Him Forever.
The Philosopher was grumbling about the poor breakfast he had in the dining car. The grapefruit was pithy, the ham was tough, the potatoes were cold, the bread was underdone, and even the coffee—well, it was not worth the 15 cents he had paid for it. "Cheer up," said the Optimist, always to be found in the smoking compartment if three men are there. "It will be all the same in a hundred years."

"It will not," asserted the Philosopher with emphasis. "It will never be the same. I am behind one meal and I will never catch up. When I pay twice as much for a meal as it is worth, as I usually do these days, I can get even by working harder and making more money that day. But when I skip a meal or when I eat a poor one I am that much behind and I stay behind because I can't eat two meals the next time. "I feel that I am entitled to two good meals a day at my age and a fair luncheon, and if I do not get them I am a loser to that extent."—New York Sun.

New Mexico Wonder.
One of the natural wonders of New Mexico is the Alamogordo, or Tularosa, desert. It is a sandy plain, measuring from 100 to 125 miles from north to south and from 35 to 50 miles from east to west, and it represents, in the opinion of many authorities, the upper surface of a gigantic block of the earth's crust that sank after the deposition of the cretaceous strata. It is surrounded by an elevated border, and on the east, especially, the cliffs rise sheer to a height of 1,000 feet. The curious Organ mountains are on its southern border. Within the plain, where floods of lava once swelled up, are vast deposits of gypsum, which forms as white as snow, which the wind drives into vast drifts. The vegetation is peculiar and highly interesting to botanists.

PLEA FOR AN "ONION WEEK"

Tribute to Odoriferous but Modest Vegetable is Advocated by Magazine Writer.
It has been quite popular to have one week set apart for certain special observations and practices. We have had prune week, peanut week, orange week, apple week and other similar gala periods. We often have wondered why we have not been favored with onion week, during which we could as a nation give ourselves over to a more thoughtful and sympathetic study of this modest member of the vegetable family than her quiet demeanor and shrinking personality have won for her in the past, says Thrift. The onion should be encouraged. Its more general use would go far toward eliminating the dangers that come from the congestion of great crowds in street cars, at railway stations, in the subway and elevated trains and at political meetings. People who cut freely of the onion find that they are less apt to be crushed in traffic jams or trampled upon while trying to find their way out of public gatherings. The apples have adopted as their motto for life the following pleasing epigram: "An apple a day keeps the doctor away." But at a recent convention held by the onions the following slogan was unanimously accepted: "An onion a day keeps 'em all away." The onion has many culinary advantages. It can be fried, broiled, stewed or baked. Also it can be eaten alive.

VENTRILOQUISM AN OLD ART
Trick Was Well Known to the Ancient Greeks, and Word is of Latin Origin.

Ventriloquism is an art or power acquired through long practice, although some people seem to have a natural gift in that direction. It was known to the ancient Greeks, and the name comes from the Latin, "venter," "to quit." It is a method of speaking so that the voice seems to come from a distance, or from some other person than the person who is actually speaking. The vocal organs—larynx, pharynx, etc., are trained, but the ventriloquist, through practice, is able to speak with the scarcely moving. To do this he leaves his lips slightly open and substitutes some letters for others—never using the labial or lip letters such as m, p, b, etc., but instead, saying "n" (formed with the tongue on the roof of the mouth), for "m" (formed with the lips), and "d" and "t" for "b" and "p." In this manner he would say "nan" instead of "man," and "day" for "bay," "tay" for "pay."

According to one authority, besides tricks of speaking and various devices to attract the attention of an audience, the whole art of a ventriloquist is simply to draw a long breath and let it out gradually, while speaking, modulating and decreasing the sound of his voice.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Reverence for Name of Mary.
The Irish showed their reverence for the name of Mary by having two different words for it; one of which they used in referring to the Blessed Virgin, the other when any other woman was the bearer of it. Maol-Mhuire, or the servant Mary, was, however, a name frequently given to children in ancient Ireland. In its Anglicized form it is scarcely recognizable, the Ave Maria notes. Such names as Meyler, Miles, Murray and Gilmore are supposed to have been originally either Maol-Mhuire, the servant of Mary, or MacGuolla-Mhuire, the son of the servant of Mary.

Like the Hebrews, Greeks and other antique races, the ancient Irish had nothing to correspond to the modern surname. It was not till the Eleventh century that surnames began to be used in all parts of Ireland. When it is transformed into a family name Maol-Mhuire, the servant of Mary, became O'Maol-Mhuire.

Success.
A very young painter, who afterward became great, stood in his obscure and struggling days, when no one had heard his name or would look at his pictures, before the greatest canvas of the greatest painter of the time. The grandeur of the work, alike in conception and execution, staggered him. Possibly there was despair at his heart as he asked himself how could he, too poor for proper opportunity for study, too poor even to afford a model, or to buy oils, ever hope to emulate such a masterpiece as this. But there was at his heart no meanness, no envy, no disposition to belittle or to grudge the other his high place. Throwing back his head, with flashing eyes and a throbb in his voice, he exclaimed proudly, radiantly, "And I, too, am an artist!"—Coulson Kernahan.

Control Your Appetite.
This is from "Les Miserables," by Victor Hugo:
"My friends," Tholomys shouted, with the accent of a man who is recapturing his empire, "gluttony chastises the glutton. Indigestion was sent into the world to read a lecture to our stomachs; and, bear this in mind, each of our passions, even love, has a stomach which must not be filled too full. In all things, we must restrain ourselves when it becomes urgent, put a bolt on our appetites, lock up our fancy, and place ourselves under arrest. The wise man is he who knows how, at a given moment, to arrest himself."

The First Shovelful
It has not been long, as far as years go, since travel in the West was by means of stagecoaches, and the Northwest was still inaccessible. Then one man began to vision how this section of our country could be developed and he planned a railroad as a great artery into what was then a wilderness. His scheme was called a "wildcat," but he went ahead and he himself raised the first shovelful for the laying of the tracks. That man was James J. Hill.
Our small store in Wyoming 21 years ago was the "first shovelful" that has made for a nation-wide chain of stores serving the public in 29 States.
