LONG-STANDING FEUD REACHES CLIMAX IN HORSEWHIPPING

T. H. Godsey of Sonoita was arrested Monday on a charge of aggravated assault, preferred by Sheriff H. J. Brown. The charge was placed against Godsey after he had given Major Fred L. Putnam, a neighbor, a severe whipping with a blacksnake whip last Saturday.

It is stated the trouble between Putnam and Godsey is of long standing, and reached the serious stage Saturday when they met on the road, Godsey driving along side of Putnam's wagon and plied the whip about the victim's face and head, the whipping being so severe that Major Putnam is in a serious condition as a consequence. Godsey was released on $1500 bond pending a preliminary hearing in the justice's court of Sonoita.

RUSSELL ROSHON PASSES AWAY IN PHILADELPHIA

The news of the death last November in Philadelphia of Russell Roshon, formerly a resident of Patagonia, has just been received. Mr. Roshon's death resulted from tuberculosis, which was a result of having been gassed in France during the World War. Mr. and Mrs. Roshon left Patagonia for their old home in Philadelphia about a year ago, when the young man began to show improvement in health. His return east was decided on against the advice of friends, who feared the change was not for the best. He was well known in Phoenix, Flagstaff and other Arizona towns, having been connected with several newspapers. News of Mr. Roshon's death will be received with much regret by those with whom he was associated while here.

WESLEY FULLER'S NAME ADDED TO LIST OF DEPARTED PIONEERS

Wesley Fuller, 68, is the latest Arizona pioneer to pass away. Mr. Fuller met instant death last Saturday at the home of his sister, Mrs. Josephine Saxon of Nogales, when a load of shot from a shotgun was accidentally discharged as he was taking the gun from beneath his bed, preparator yto going hunting. The full charge entered his left breast, literally tearing out his heart.

The coroner's jury rendered a verdict of accidental death from a gunshot wound.

Mr. Fuller was born in Oregon, and was taken by his parents to California at a very early age. Later the family moved to Arizona, before the advent of the railroad. For 30 years he had resided in Santa Cruz county, living most of that time on the Fuller ranch on the Sonoita creek, near Patagonia. He lost his ranch a few years ago when the U. S. supreme court decided against the settlers in favor of the Brea Flood heirs, after many years of litigation. Deceased is survived by a sister, Mrs. Josephine Saxon.

The funeral was held Sunday, at 4 p. m., interment was made in the Odd Fellows' cemetery. The funeral was largely attended.

During the late war one of her legs was amputated, but she carried on her work with the aid of an artificial limb. At the time of her death she had almost completed a film for a moving picture company, carrying on the work against the advice of her physicians.

The Fate of a Prisoner.

The Seminole headed straight out into the lake. No sound of movement or speech reached West's ears from the cabin, and he settled down into moody forgetfulness, still staring dully out through the open port. What was to be, would be, but there was nothing for him to do but wait for those who held him prisoner, to act. He was still seated there, listless, incapable even of further thought, when the door was suddenly unlocked. He had barely time to arise to his feet, when the man with the red mustache stepped within, facing him, and as he pushed tightly shut the door behind. The fellow's eyes saw the severed rope on the floor, and he smiled, kicking the strands aside contemptuously.

"Smart enough for that, were you?" he asked. "Well, I would have taken them off myself, if I had thought about it. How did you manage? Oh, I see; rather a bright trick, old man."

The man's tone, and air of confidence was impressive; beyond doubt he felt that the cards were all in his hands. West drew in his breath sharply. "May I ask a question or two?"

"Fire away; I'll answer as I please."

"Who is the woman on board?"

"Mary, you mean? Hobart's wife."

"She came from the place on Wray street last night in an auto?"

"Yes; I brought her along myself."

"Alone?"

"There were two of us, Mark and I—why, what are you driving at?"

"Just putting some broken threads together. Then Natalie Coolidge is not on this yacht?"

"I should say not. What would we be doing with her out here?"

"Where is she, then?"

"Oh, I begin to see what brought you aboard so easily, West. You thought we had the lady kidnaped, and was sailing off with her. Some stunt, that. What put the idea in your head?"

West hesitated a moment, but decided a truthful answer would do no harm.

"I knew an automobile had driven out of the alley back of Mike's place; and that a woman was in it. When I got away a little later, I picked up a message—a note which had been dropped. It was written in a woman's hand but unsigned—"

"The little cat! She dropped it?"

"It seems so. You forgot yourself that time. So she was with you, was she?"

"I don't know what you mean. I told you who were with me. Go on; what did the note say?"

"It was only a request for the police to search the Seminole at once."

"Oh, that's the way the wind blows. But you preferred to tackle the job yourself. I am certainly obliged to you, West."

"You have no reason to be. I took that note to the police, and they are on the case. They are combing the city right now for Hobart, and if they get him, this bubble of yours is likely to be pricked."

"H—l, they won't get him. There isn't a fly-cop in Chicago who could either, for if you do, you are going to get hurt. There is a guard outside in the cabin, and we are not afraid to shoot out here on the lake. Nobody knows where you are, West; so, if you want to live, keep quiet—that's my advice."

He slipped out, closing and locking the door behind him. West, more thoroughly confused than ever over the situation in which he found himself, paced the brief length of the narrow stateroom, and then paused to stare moodily out of the port.

He had learned little of the slightest value; merely that Natalie had been of the party leaving in the automobile the night before. She, undoubtedly, had been the one who had dropped the note. Then, in spite of all they said about her, in spite of what she had told him, she was actually a prisoner, desperately begging for assistance to escape. As to the other things Hogan had told him, the probability was they were mostly lies. West did not believe the girl had returned to "Fairlawn," the story did not sound natural. The longer he thought it all over, the more thoroughly was he convinced the girl and he were both prisoners on the same vessel. Yet what could he do? He sank down, with head in his hands, totally unnerfed—it was his fate to attempt nothing; only to wait on fortune.

Mark brought in food, merely opening the door slightly, and sliding the tray in on the floor. No words were exchanged, nor was the tray removed until just at twilight, when the fellow appeared again on a similar mission. It became dark, but no light was furnished. Outside the clouds had thickened, and a heavy swell was tossing the vessel about rather roughly. Seemingly the engine was merely endeavoring to maintain head-way, with no port in immediate prospect; they were steering aimlessly into the promise of a stormy night. No sound reached him from the cabin, and finally, worn out mentally and physically, West flung himself on the lower bunk, and lay there motionless, staring up into the intense darkness.

Lying there motionless, yet wide awake, his senses alert, he could feel the labored efforts of the vessel, the slap of waves against the side, the rush of water astern. The Seminole rolled heavily, yet there was nothing at all alarming in her actions, and West felt no premonition of illness, or fear as to the sea-worthiness of the little craft. He endeavored to arouse himself, to keep awake, but finally fatigue conquered, and he sank into a deep sleep. He had no knowledge of how long this slumber lasted, or what suddenly awakened him, so startled at the moment that he sat up in the berth, staring into the blackness. Was it a dream, or a reality? Had some one spoken? He could neither see nor hear anything; the boat seemed to be motionless, not even throbbing now to the beat of the engine—the silence was uncanny. Something was wrong, must be wrong. Where were they—at anchor in some harbor or helplessly adrift on the lake? The yacht rocked gently, as though the swell of the sea no longer buffeted her; there was no sound of action on the deck above. Then he heard a voice again, outside, reaching him this time plainly through the open port.

"All set, Mapes," it said sharply. "Come on down. You finished the job?"

"Ay, ay, sir," the answer gruff, but with a tinge of excitement in the tone. "She's fixed all right. Hold hard, now, mate."

West leaped to the port-hole, and endeavored to gain a glimpse without. If land was near it remained invisible, nor could he even be sure of the close proximity of a boat. There seemed to be a smudge there at the left, a black, lumpy shadow, shapeless against the background of sea; yet he could not be sure. Even as he gazed at it doubtfully, the dim object disappeared, fading away like a mirage. Something told him that mysterious shadow was a boat, a boat filled with men, creeping away silently into the night, fleeing from the yacht, and vanishing into the darkness.

What could such action mean? Had every one gone, leaving the vessel totally abandoned, a wreck doomed to go down, unseen, its final fate unknown? Unknown! The word rising to his brain was the answer. There was the crest of the plot. What could be easier, or safer, than this ending? Who would ever know the truth? Who could ever prove anything, even if they suspected? And who was there to suspect? It was a plot infernal.

But if Natalie Coolidge was also prisoner on board, what of her? Wasn't that the very thing most probable? Of course it was; how foolish he had been. These men, recklessly criminal, as they were, would never sacrifice the yacht, and risk their own lives, merely to put him out of the way. He was not important enough for that; he was but an incident. While this was—must be—a carefully arranged plan. The girl then must be the real victim—his own plight arose merely because he chanced to be there, and the villains dare not leave him alive to tell the story.

The certainty of this acted like an electric shock. He must find the girl, and serve her. Surely she must welcome his coming to her assistance now. She would be alone, free to reveal the truth of all this strange mix-up of affairs; perhaps the old trust, the old confidence between them would be renewed. The hope instantly inspired action. His eager eyes searched the narrow confines of the stateroom for some possible weapon with which to assail the door. The stout stool alone seemed available. Swinging this over his shoulder, hampered by the narrowness of space, he struck again and again, with all his strength, until suddenly the lock gave, and the door burst open.

He stepped cautiously forward, with hands outstretched, and his groping fingers came in sudden contact with the cabin wall, which he followed, circling to the left. In this manner he succeeded in finally locating the door opening out on to the deck, and he weaved his way across to the right-hand stateroom door. It was locked, and he tried to force it open. He was not to be so easily deceived. He stepped forward, with hands outstretched, and his groping fingers came in sudden contact with the cabin wall, which he followed, circling to the left. In this manner he succeeded in finally locating the door opening out on to the deck, and he weaved his way across to the right-hand stateroom door. It was locked, and he tried to force it open.

CHAPTER XIV
The Coming of Dawn.

West leaned far out, and could perceive little except a bare, shapeless outline.

"Did you make it? Are you all right?"

"Yes, I'm safe enough. But—but Captain West, I want you to come."

"I'm coming. Watch out now—good! Here goes."

He made the plunge, coming up to the surface close beside the raft, the edge of which he quickly grasped with his hands. He swam steadily, urging the unwieldy raft away from the menacing side of the vessel, driven by the necessity of escaping the inevitable suction when she went down. Gradually the distance widened, until there extended a considerable waste of water between the two. Satisfied that they were far enough away for safety, he clambered cautiously upon the platform, the girl as carefully making room for him on the few dry planks.

There was nothing to say, nothing to do; for the moment at least they were safe, and perhaps morning would bring rescue. Suddenly West straightened up, aroused by a new interest—surely that last wave went entirely over the yacht's rail; he could see the white gleam of spray as it broke; and yes, there was another! Then, almost without warning, the end came. She went down bow first, the stern lifting until West could discern the dark outlines of the screw, and then dropped like a stone, vanishing almost instantly.

"That is the last of the Seminole," West said, feeling the necessity of strengthening her. "But it is nothing to frighten you. We are safe enough here. But you must keep your nerve; we may be afloat for hours yet before we are picked up."

"You are sure we will be?"

"The probability is altogether in our favor," he insisted, as much to encourage himself as her. "This is Lake Michigan in summer time, and boats are plying everywhere. We shall surely be sighted by something when daylight returns."

She was silent a moment, with head again bent forward.

"What do you suppose became of the men who deserted the yacht?" she asked, her voice natural and quiet.

"Ashore, perhaps, by this time. They were certain they had done a good job, and eager to get away safely. Hogan never deemed it possible for us to get away alive. As it was, the escape was almost a miracle."

"A miracle!" softly. "Perhaps so, yet I know you accomplished it. I owe my life to you, Captain West," she paused doubtfully, and then went on impulsively. "Won't you explain to me now what it all means? How you came to be here?—and why those men sought in this way to kill me?"

"You do not know?"

U. S. LAWMAKERS' SALARIES SMALL

HARD TO "GET BY" IN WASHINGTON ON $7,500 A YEAR, SOLONS SAY.

BILL ASKS $2,500 INCREASE

Senators and Representatives Do Not Complain Openly, but Drafts on Their Purses Are Heavy, Including Charity Demands, Loans, etc.

By EDWARD B. CLARK
Washington.—It probably can be taken for granted that most of the members of congress elected last fall are hoping in their hearts that by some fortuitous chance the bill that Representative Upshaw presented to increase the pay of senators and representatives from $7,500 to $10,000 a year will be sanctioned so that they can reap the benefit.

Generally speaking, it may be said the chances seem to be that the incoming congress will withhold its approval of the Upshaw measure, not because it does not want the money but because of fear of criticism from the country.

It may seem strange to men of small salaries to hear that a great many congressmen, who are not spendthrifts by any manner of means, have a hard time living on their incomes, at least while in the city of Washington. As a rule senators and members do not complain openly, but the drafts on their purses are heavy, not only to meet the high cost of living in Washington but to meet charity demands, loan demands and many other kinds of demands.

It was not so many years ago that the senators and members of congress voted an increase in their salaries from $5,000 to $7,500. At the same time there was an increase voted in the salaries of many other officers of government. The excuse was the high cost of living, and as America probably realized, it was more or less a legitimate excuse. The increase passed with barely a word of protest from the country. It may not be so, however, if an attempt is made to tack another twenty-five hundred on to the existing congressional wage.

Some Urge $20,000 a Year.
There are some Americans who have urged that representatives and senators in congress should be paid at least $20,000 a year. Men who have urged this have said the comfortably large salary would induce men of high position and professional attainments to enter politics and thus the country would benefit by better-considered legislation. This argument may or may not be well based. As things are today, the average ability in congress is fairly high, but not exceptionally high. In truth, the judgment of men seems to be that representation in the two houses of congress is that of the average quality of American mentality and American manhood, and that this quality is just what the spirit of our institutions demands.

Some years ago, before the great war, there was a bill introduced for the President of the United States to increase, and with the increase there was the passage of a bill providing for money to pay the President's traveling expenses.

It was Theodore Roosevelt who, while president, urged that an allowance be made to the chief officer of government for his expenses while traveling. Roosevelt, however, was careful to ask that the law granting the money for transportation should not take effect until he had gone out of office.

There have been times when congress showed an evident desire to grab a little something to put down to its own cash account. About fifteen years ago one session of congress lasted until noon of the December day that the new session began. The representatives argued they were entitled to mileage for the new session, although they already had drawn mileage for the previous session, and of course there was no chance to go home and back again between sessions when one merged into the other, as was the case in this instance.

The representatives looked about for someone who would be brave enough to put in a bill providing for mileage for miles never traveled. They had great difficulty in finding a volunteer. Finally, however, they induced a representative who afterwards became vice president of the United States to introduce the mileage bill. It should be said for him that he believed technically the mileage measure was legitimate. He introduced the bill and the house somewhat vociferously approved.

Then came not a murmur but a roar from the country. The representatives were called crafters and other things not quite so polite.

Harding Plans Twenty Speeches.
It is understood that President Harding on his early summer trip through the country will make twenty speeches in twenty principal places. Men close to the administration say that it is the intention of the President to try to create such public sentiment in behalf of American membership in the International Court of Justice that pressure will be brought to bear upon the senate to induce it to sanction the proposal.

It now generally is believed in Washington that the quick transmittal to the senate in the last days of the last session of the Hughes explanation of the International Court proposal was prompted by two things, a faint hope that it might produce action at once, and the larger hope that the people would read the secretary's explanation, and would take it to mean what the administration holds it to mean, that membership in the tribunal does not necessarily mean entrance into the League of Nations, or even the opening wedge for such an entrance.

Of course it is impossible to say what the result of the President's speechmaking will be, but Washington students of past situations which resemble the present one say that generally the people, if properly approached, are much more likely to approve the action of a President than to approve of a disposition to counteract by congress. The President, the argument is, is an individual and moreover, he is the President. Furthermore he speaks, directly and personally, and underlying everything that he says there is the basic appeal of his high office, an office to which the people have chosen him.

Would Go Over Heads of Solons.
Carrying out their argument the administration's friends say that congress almost invariably represents a variety of views, and that because of the conflict of emotions and expressed opinions in the two houses, the President, who has only one emotion and one opinion to express, is more likely to be heeded by the country. Of course, all this means simply an appeal to the people over the heads of senators and representatives. It is said in Washington that this apparently is what President Harding intends to do, and his friends express the hope that with his gift for appealing speeches, and with the prestige of his high position, he will be able to make the impression that he desires and to reap the benefit thereof when congress comes together once more.

The friends of the administration's policy of entrance in the International Court of Justice admit that the first proposal to the senate was discouraging. There was only one Republican who, when the Democrats for reasons of their own proposed to give support to the presidential plan, was willing to vote in behalf of the administration endeavor. Of course the circumstances in this particular case were exceptional, and the Republican senators naturally did not want it to appear that they were following a Democratic lead in the matter.

Woodrow Wilson when he was President was stricken while making a tour of the country on behalf of his League of Nations proposal. He had made only a few speeches of appeal to the people before illness overtook him.

Many Measures Fail.
Thousands of bills failed of passage at the last session of congress. The Sixty-seventh congress died, and every bill died with it. There must be a resurrection of every measure which died and was buried if renewed life is to be given the legislation suggested. When a congress dies proposed legislation dies with it.

Moving operations still are in progress. Of course in one sense the departure of men disappointed of re-election was a moving spectacle, but the moving which is taking place now is such as is seen in many a city of the country on that moving day of all moving days, May first. Out of the house and senate office buildings personal belongings of senators and members are going daily. The men who failed of re-election will have in their houses some perhaps more or less painful reminders of their active days as national legislators.

Congress, in a way, however, is not defunct. There are several committees of congress which are here and are working. The members on these committees of course are confined to holdover congressmen either of the senate or of the house. One committee is investigating the street railway situation of the national capital. There has been a demand here for five-cent fares, and so a committee of congress, which is really the city council of Washington, will dig into matters to see whether or not, as the petitioners claim, the companies can make money out of five cents a passenger, or whether or not, as the companies claim, they will go into bankruptcy if any such cut in rate is attempted.

Prior to this the story has been told of what the capitol looks like in summer, and what is done to it in the way of cleaning and repairing. There are other things, however, which must be done by the persons who hold executive positions in the capitol. Contracts must be made for supplies for the comfort of congressmen during the coming year. The lawmakers need towels and stationery, and ice, and scores upon scores of other things to keep them contented and more or less happy when the two houses are in session. All these things must be contracted for and be ready for delivery on the dot.

All the documents which bear on legislation, proposed or enacted during the last congress, must be preserved for reference purposes for congresses which are to come. There is an almost appalling number of these documents. It is necessary to separate them into subjects and to index them, and to store them where they may be available for reference purposes in the next congress or the congress thereafter. Of course it is possible to classify most of the bills with reference to the committees which gave them consideration. This helps.

Cost of Education in Colorado.

Denver.—The average annual cost of education per pupil in Colorado public schools, based upon average daily attendance, is $129.08, according to compilations made by the State Immigration Department for use in the Colorado Year Book. The average cost based upon total enrollment in the schools is $91.16. These averages are for the school year ending July 1, 1922, and are calculated from data contained in the records of the state superintendent of public instruction. They are based upon total expenditures for school purposes for the year and may include some expenditures for permanent improvements which are not properly chargeable to the cost of education for the current year. Total expenditures reported for the year were $10,570,543.

Costs in Denver are above the average for the state, being $102.25 and $150.23, respectively. Highest costs, however, are found in rural districts, where attendance is comparatively small. In San Juan county for example, the average cost based upon attendance is $213.03, and in Saguache county, where many of the children are transported long distances to school, and where excellent facilities are provided, the average cost based upon attendance is $228.44. In Park county, where average attendance is very low compared with enrollment, the average annual cost based upon attendance is $263.40, which is the highest for any county. Total school expenditures reported for the county, however, are only $41,032.

The lowest average cost based upon attendance reported is for Baca county, being $41.07. Attendance in this county is rather large compared with the average cost. Total expenditures reported for the county are $142,040. Conejos county ranks next to Baca, with an average annual cost based upon attendance of $63.20. The percentage of attendance here is low in comparison with the total number of children of school age, perhaps because of the very considerable number of Mexican children in the county. The percentage of attendance based upon enrollment, however, is comparatively high.

Average costs of education per pupil has been advancing rather rapidly in Colorado for the past few years, but the increases for the past year were not so great as for several previous years.

America's Farmers and Europe's Buyers.

There are broad indications that the current annual balance of indebtedness of the rest of the world to the United States which must be covered by American investments in foreign countries will be in the neighborhood of one billion dollars for the year 1923.

In 1922, according to the United States Department of Commerce, American investors purchased 709 million dollars of new capital foreign securities, 589 million the first six months of the year and only 180 million the last six months of the year. The fact that only 23 per cent of the total loans were made in the second half of the year is overwhelming evidence that this source of funds for the purchase of American exports is drying up and that the exports of the 1923 crops are likely to be seriously handicapped. Inasmuch as about 50 per cent of the cotton has been finding a market abroad, over 25 per cent of the wheat, and over 15 per cent of pork products, and inasmuch as more than one-half of the total exports are agricultural exports, American agriculture has a vital interest in the clearing up of European affairs.

How are we to arrive at sound judgments and concrete proposals for profitable economic co-operation between the United States and Europe?

For more than two years the farm bureau has maintained that the prosperity of the American farmer is closely linked with the European situation. The farmer must have a foreign outlet for his surpluses. How shall he get it? It is the nation's business to answer that question.

The research department has recently released figures which show that this extreme deflation and continued depression of farming is to a large degree the product of European conditions. It is a familiar fact that we export a very substantial portion of our wheat, cotton, tobacco and pork. European industrial nations, impoverished and demoralized by the war, are unable to keep the industrial machine going at its prewar rate. Consequently they have less manufactured products to sell, their exchanges are depreciated, and their demand for raw farm products reduced.

Prices Ruinously Low.

The exporting nations of Europe, Russia and the Balkan nations, are also demoralized. With their competition a thing of the past the American farmer for the next few years would be in an enviable position, if it were not for the low purchasing power of his European customers. As it is exports are going out in very large volume, measured by prewar standards. But the price at which they must be exported is ruinously low, except in the case of cotton in which two very short crops have created what threatens to develop into a serious shortage.

The crux of the export situation is that much of the export business has been and must be done on credit. That means investments by Americans in European securities now that loans by the United States government are no longer being made. A very large amount of Europe's balance of imports from us in the past several years has been settled by government loans, private investments and trade credits. A summary of the balance of payments between the United States, Canada and Europe prepared by Martin J. Gillen of New York shows that in the last eight years those foreign countries have incurred debts to us to the extent of 40 billion dollars. Ten billion of these debts have been settled through loans from the United States government to foreign governments; several billion more have been invested by Americans in foreign securities and currencies and in American securities held by foreigners; in addition trade credits variously estimated at from two to five billions have been extended by American banks, though it is said by some authorities that these have now been all cleared up. All the world's surplus gold has been used in settling these balances by importations into this country.

Unfavorable Trade Balance.

For the year 1922 Europe, so far as can be judged from published import and export statistics, has an unfavorable trade balance with us of about a billion dollars. Loans of six to seven hundred million dollars and gold imports of around 200 million dollars have figured in the settlement of this balance. If a like trade balance is to be incurred by Europe next year, which will be the case if we are to continue exporting to European nations on the present or a larger scale, the total of foreign investments and gold importations will have to be at least as large as during the past year. But both investments and gold imports have fallen off in recent months. In the three years 1920-22 our net imports of gold were a billion dollars of which four-fifths were in the two years 1920 and 1921. For the same three years our foreign investments were 1,918 millions, about a third of which was made in 1922; but for the last half of 1922 there was a marked falling off, foreign investments in Europe as reported by the Commercial and Financial Chronicle being only $165,400,000, divided between $83,700,000 government loans and $81,700,000 corporate.

Without a revival of American confidence in European securities it is obvious that Europe's purchases in this country are likely to be jeopardized, which will mean slackening export demand for this country's agricultural products.

HIGH MORTALITY OF CHICKS

Knowledge, Care and Good Judgment Required to Bring Little Fellows to Maturity.

There is no doubt about the statement that if the mortality among young chicks could be averted and the per cent that dies brought to maturity, the poultry industry would be one of the largest, if not the largest,

Family of Sturdy Little Chicks, Well Cared For.

In the country. Thousands upon thousands die each year from improper attention to the youngsters after hatching, and thousands fail to hatch from inexperience in handling incubators. To begin with, all eggs should be tested before placing in an incubator or under hens. If this be done only good, strong germ eggs would be used, and those showing defects would be rejected and sent to market for table use. Special attention should be given incubators to see that the thermometer registers just right, and also note that you have the required moisture. Incubators should be started at 101 degrees, 102 second week, and if the hatch is good the thermometer will sometimes go as high as 105 degrees the third week. Those chicks which hatch on the light of the nineteenth day of early on the twentieth will be pretty apt to live, as they were good, strong, 100 per cent fertile eggs. Those that hatch later range in vitality from 50 per cent to 80 per cent. The 100 per cent birds thrive and mature to be standard weight. Those under that die beginning the third day, and sometimes string out for two or three months.

POULTRY SELECTION IS BEST

One of Quickest and Surest Ways of Making Improvement in Flock—Quality Counts.

One of the quickest and surest ways of getting improvement in poultry is through selection. Too many people have quantity, to the exclusion of quality, in mind. If you want increased production, it would be much better to have six producing birds in a pen with a male from a high producing female than to have a breeding pen of 200 females mated to a bunch of males of unknown origin.

VITAMINES FINE FOR LAYERS

Milk and Green Succulent Plant Growths Are Essential for Hens—Sour Milk Also Good.

Laying hens need vitamins, undoubtedly, and other elements which are found in certain specific types of foods such as milk and green succulent plant growths. The use of sour skim-milks has long been recognized as a splendid supplement to the grain and mash. Feed it in open pans, providing free access, if it can be secured at a reasonable price. Use sour-milk buttermilk at the rate of 3 to 5 pounds to 100 hens per day.

POULTRY NOTES

A hungry hen is usually a good layer. . . . Environment is a great factor in egg production. . . . Extreme cold and extreme heat alike affect the flow of eggs. . . . A turkey five months old is as good as raised, but do not be in a hurry about fattening. . . . No flock of fowls can produce a high average egg yield per year per fowl unless there has been bred into that flock the capacity to use large amounts of food, respond to proper care and environment, and form eggs. . . . Nearly all the eggs are laid between the hours of nine o'clock in the morning and three o'clock in the afternoon. . . . The care of the newly hatched chicks is without question the most exacting task that devolves upon the poultryman or poultrywoman. . . . As the seasons vary, the time when chicks may be put on range will vary also. There is danger of getting the chicks out too early unless well protected.

WAS HERE BEFORE COLUMBUS

Claims Put Forward That Danish Navigator Landed on the American Continent in 1476.

Several months ago Dr. Sofus Larsen of the University of Copenhagen reported having discovered among old Portuguese and Danish documents, evidence that John Scolvo or Scolf, a Danish navigator, reached the American continent and landed there in 1476, 16 years before Columbus sailed.

According to Doctor Larsen's account, the Portuguese prince, Henry the Navigator, after his twentieth attempt to reach India by sailing around the lower end of Africa had succeeded, conceived the idea that ships could reach another part of India by sailing northward across the Atlantic. He got in touch with Christian of Denmark, his brother-in-law, and asked him to assist in dispatching an expedition from Denmark in search of a northwest passage to India. Christian fell in with the plan and chose John Scolvo, an experienced, competent sailor, to pilot the ship. Finally the ship reached the coast of Labrador in safety, and found a harbor in what is now called the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

The Reason.

"I make my children mind, or know the reason why?" declared Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge to the guests assembled in the crossroads store.

"Well, what is the reason why?" sarcastically inquired old man Sockery.

SURELY HAD A BUSY DAY

Novelist Must Have Been Kept Fully Employed, Judging From the Result of His Labors.

"English novelists are effete. They go in too much for style. There's a lack of red blood in their work."

"At a dinner in a country inn where we were staying together, I said one evening to an English novelist:

"Well, I dashed off 5,000 words today. What did you do?"

"Oh, I was immensely busy," said he. "I corrected the proofs of my new essay."

"Make any changes?" I asked.

"I made one very important change," he said. "I took out a comma."

"I couldn't help giving a disgusted laugh."

"And is that all you did all day," I said—"take out a comma?"

"Oh, no," said he. After deep reflection I put the comma back!"

Opportunity sometimes looks pale gray, because embracing it means so much hard work.

Hold Converse by Signs

How English Weavers Make Themselves Understood Amid the Deafening Din of Heavy Machinery.

Among Lancashire weavers there is a soundless system of communication which has been in use for generations. Amid the crash of the machinery when no human voice could be heard, the workers converse easily with one another by means of lip movements and signs made by the hands. Knowledge of the weavers' language is a necessity to the craftsman and the little "touters" study it along with their lessons in weaving. Usually the first thing learnt is the time of day. A forefinger crooked and held up, then four fingers held up, signifies a quarter to four. If the crooked finger moves to either side it means a quarter past four. The pupil watches the movements of the lips. At first he can only comprehend their meaning when the words are simple and the movements are exaggerated. In a surprisingly short time, however, he is able to talk to his fellow workmen with perfect ease, during the intervals when the looms do not need all of his attention.

Both Are Still at Large.

"If there were 500 brave men in Petrograd," Carl Radek, the Bolshevik journalist, once said to Lenin, you would be put in jail."

The man who ruled Russia with an iron hand received this sally calmly.

"Some comrades may go to jail," he said slowly, "but on the basis of probabilities it is more likely that I will send you to jail than that you will send me."

For the Man of the House.

Equipping an electrical den for the man of the house is a project that will not require as much money as one may think. These are some of the things that go with it: An electric log fireplace, an electric cigar lighter, a humidifier that clears and perfumes the air of every taint of tobacco smoke, and even in these days the electric cocktail mixer cannot be overlooked. Other articles for the den are a clock that never has to be wound, and an immersion heater which may boil water for a hot drink or for shaving in ten minutes. His couch can be fitted with an electric comfort which covers it entirely, and a softly shaded reading light will surely be a most welcome companion at his shoulder.

ARIZONA FAST GROWING STATE

Reports and a survey of conditions seem to indicate that Arizona is on the threshold of an era of remarkable development.

R. D. Spicer of San Diego says: "Arizona's percentage of increase in population in the last ten years was the largest of any state in the union and it will duplicate its performance in the next ten years."

"There are today 350,000 acres in the Salt River Valley under cultivation. Another 150,000 acres is now in cultivation or about to be placed in cultivation, in the lower Gila valley. Little is heard of the state's timber or lumber industry, though it possesses what is perhaps the largest unbroken stretch of virgin standing pine timber in the United States. The grazing lands of southeastern Arizona are unsurpassed in any part of the country."

"Three or four electric power and light companies are now operating successfully in the state. Cheap power is an essential of the state's future prosperity because the extension of irrigation is largely dependent upon obtaining water through pumping."

Mr. Spicer might have mentioned further that Arizona is the greatest copper producing section of the world and its mines, which employ thousands of laborers, are at present the state's greatest asset from an industrial standpoint. He forgot, also, to mention the cattle-raising industry, which is a great source of wealth.

THRIFT AS BASIS OF FARM LOANS

In the past, state and federal loan agencies have been able to care for only 5 per cent of the loans on farm mortgages, and it is not yet known how much the new act of congress extending farm loans will relieve the situation.

So long as 90 or 95 per cent of the farm loans must be carried by banking institutions and farm mortgage loan companies, the debtor class of farmers are interested in sound principles of thrift in the conduct of this business, so vital to agriculture.

The charge of radical politicians that all the old-established farm-lending agencies have been profiteering at the expense of the farmers are largely unfounded, as private capital in savings banks and in the hands of depositors naturally seeks long-time farm loans, and must do so at low rates of interest.

Insurance companies and private farm loan mortgage companies must compete with individual loans made by thrifty farmers on the lands of their neighbors. State and federal laws that tax private capital, and seek to assess mortgage loans, only raise the rate of interest to the producer from the soil, who must pay both interest and tax on the loan.

The whole question of cheap capital for the farmer comes back to better managed farms and more thrift and economy against the rainy day-period of low-priced crops.

Bankers and farm loan companies would improve their security by a campaign of education to improve the state of farming.

The farmer boy by mere human instinct, wants to get on like other people, and can only do so by being a little better farmer than his neighbor.

"My first wife said if I married again, she'd dig her way out of the grave and haunt me."

"But you did marry again."

"Yes, but I buried her face down. Let her dig!"—Exchange.

GRANDEUR HARD TO PORTRAY

Visitor Asserts View From Summit of Andes Is Such as Almost to Defy Description.

The view from the summit is magnificent in whichever direction one turns, but it is rather more interesting and varied toward the Pacific. That ocean is not over a hundred miles in a straight line from the crest of the divide, but all sight of it is cut off by the intervening summits. The scenery in this, or any other part of the Andes, is on too vast and imposing a scale for a man to come to any adequate comprehension of it. Still more hopeless is the possibility of conveying any effective impression of it to others. You may think you can describe it until you try; then you find that you are but stringing meaningless adjectives and shopworn similes together.

At first you are inclined to be disappointed at your impotency; then you begin to feel small and ashamed that you should have presumed to attempt such a thing; finally, like a man covering up traces of guilt, you hasten to tear up and burn what you have written before some one comes and finds what you have been doing. There are some men who can draw better than others word-pictures of these great manifestations of nature, just as some men can paint better pictures on canvas than can others; but the best descriptions are only sounding brass and tinkling cymbal imitations of the unspeakable grandeur of the originals. Personally I throw up my hands and call myself off at the outset.—Lewis R. Freeman in the Cornhill Magazine.

If you think that football is a rougher game now than it was in the past, read this paragraph written in 1882:

"As concerning football playing, it may be called rather a friendly fight than a play of recreation; a bloody, murdering practice than a fellowly sport or pastime. For doth not every one lie in wait for his adversary, seeking to overthrow him and to pitch him on his nose, though it be upon hard stones, or what place soever it be he careth not, so he have him down? And he that can serve the most in this fashion he is counted the only fellow, and who but he."—Boston Transcript.

HARRASSING BUSINESS

The San Francisco Chronicle says: "The federal trade commission was apparently established on the assumption that such numbers of those engaged in trade were violating the ordinary laws of the land that it was necessary to set up a detective agency to catch them. In a single case the commission has reduced the price which anybody pays for anything, the achievement should be ferited out and made generally known for the credit of the commission."

"The commission is always having lawsuits whose results, either way, have helped nobody but the lawyers. The latest case of this kind is intended to prevent wholesalers of fuel oils from giving retailers pumps and tanks on condition that they should be used only for the oil of the company supplying the apparatus."

"The curse of this nation today is too many officials, boards and commissions trying to run the business of the nation's citizens."

BETTER NOT SAY IT

Bad news travels faster than good news. There is an old saying: "No news is good news." Can a man be converted at a church service and there is not much of a stir, but let a resident be convicted of some crime and the news leaps by word of mouth from one end of the community to the other.

How thoughtlessly unkind we sometimes are when neighbors of ours suffer misfortune! Troubles are bound to come to us all in some shape or form, and what we say about our friends and acquaintances today may apply to us tomorrow. News is no respecter of persons.

We are prone to consider the ways of others, not our own ways, when we should be watching our own step. What folks say of one another sometimes hurts more than anything they could have done. News, either good or bad, flows and becomes exaggerated and distorted with peddling.—The De Leon (Tex.) Free Press.

THE EDITOR'S AND SOME OTHER MISTAKES

We made a mistake in last week's paper, admits an exchange. A good subscriber told us about it. The same day there was a letter in our box that didn't belong to us. We called for 98 over the phone and got 198. We asked for a spoon of No. 50 thread and when we got home we found it was No. 60. The train was reported 30 minutes late. We arrived at the depot 20 minutes late and the train had gone. We got our milk bill and there was a mistake of 10 cents in our favor. We felt sick and the doctor said we were eating too much meat. We hadn't tasted meat for two months. The garage man said the jitney was missing because it needed a new timer. We cleaned the spark plugs and it's run ever since.

Yes, we made a mistake in last week's issue of the paper.—Exchange.

Thoughts During Danger.

For ages persons who have recovered from great dangers have claimed that in a second all their lives flashed before them. Scientists now prove that these persons have not told the truth. Truthful persons who have been in great danger say that their thoughts are entirely on the danger and their minds have no chance to flash unless on things before their eyes.

THE THRICE-A-WEEK EDITION OF NEW YORK WORLD IN 1923 AND 1924

Practically a Daily at the Price of a Weekly; No Other Newspaper in the World Gives So Much at So Low a Price.

The wide, wide world has become so narrowed by science that news from all around the globe is printed in the current New York World, together with the views of nation builders, master men and leading women everywhere, and particularly in the United States. No other newspaper is better equipped to give the news of the world at the time it is news than the New York World.

The Thrice-a-Week edition of The World is the greatest example of comprehensive journalism in America. It will keep you as thoroughly informed as a daily, which would cost five or six times as much. It is a unique newspaper, published three times a week, for $1 a year. This is the regular subscription price, and it pays for 156 newspapers.

We offer this unequalled newspaper and the SANTA CRUZ PATAGONIAN together for one year for $2.25. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $3. You save 75 cents by this clubbing offer, and receive four papers a week.

The above offer is good for renewal subscribers as well as new ones.

PUTS NEW LIGHT ON HISTORY

Discovery in Sweden Proves That Arts of Civilization Are Older Than Has Been Thought.

A cloak of woolen cloth, believed to be 3,000 years old, has been found in a peat bog in Sweden. The slightly acid water of the peat formation acted as a preservative.

This is the oldest complete garment ever found in Europe, though the British museum has several bits of cloth that are considered still older. But 3,000 years is a fairly respectable age. When that cloth was woven, Homer's father or grandfather was a boy, playing in the streets of some Greek town. The Israelitish monarchy was not yet thought of—Saul, its first king, probably was not yet born. Egypt, rich but defenseless, was verging to decay; but the founding of Rome lay farther in the future than the landing of the Pilgrims now lies in the past. Through most of Europe, bronze, rather than iron, was the chosen metal.

Yet even in that misty distant time, the northern barbarians either wove woolen cloaks for themselves or carried on trade enough to buy them from more advanced peoples.

A good many of the arts of civilization date farther back than our grandfathers dreamed, and were more widely diffused, too.

Transient Value.

Purpose-novels, like advertisements, belong in the temporary department. As certain goods and wares go out of date, and the often eloquent announcements that commended them suddenly disappear; even so the "burning questions" of the hour and age burn out, and the solutions of them presented in the form of fiction fall down with the other ashes. They have served their purpose, well or ill, and their transient importance is ended. What endures, if anything, is the human story vividly told, the human characters graphically depicted. These have a permanent value. These belong to literature. Here I would place "Adam Bede" and "Silas Marner" and "The Mill on the Floss" and "Middlemarch," because they deal with problems which never grow old; but not "Robert Elsmere," because it deals chiefly with a defunct controversy in Biblical criticism—Henry Van Dyke, in "Companionable Books."

GEORGE HORTON

New portrait of George Horton, United States consul general at Smyrna, made upon his arrival in Washington, where he was called to testify before congress regarding the Smyrna disaster.

Early Wood Carving.

Wood carving was common in very early Egyptian sculpture. Some of the most realistic statues of the ancient empire were carved in wood, such as the so-called "Sheikh-el-beled" and his wife, and a number of others. Wood was a convenient ground for polychromatic decoration; that is, treating the carved figure with a thin coating of plaster upon which the artist has placed his colors. This was very popular among Egyptian artists.

In Greece wood carving probably was the earliest form of archaic sculpture. The late Greeks and Romans used it comparatively little, but among the most remarkable works of early Christian sculpture are the carved wooden doors of Santa Sabina, Rome.

War Against Pine Beetle.

A crusade against the pine beetle that has been causing so much destruction in the yellow-pine districts of the Northwest, as to alarm several government agencies and a number of private interests, is reported to have reduced the infestation about 50 per cent during 1922. This work, which is under the supervision of the bureau of entomology, consists of locating and felling all infested trees, and it is expected to result in the saving of over $5,000 worth of lumber during the next three years, over and above the cost of the work. On a million acres as yet untreated, the loss from this pest is now $300,000 a year.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Teeth as Well as Finger Prints.

The unhappy criminal son is likely to have no chance to escape the penalty of his misdeeds. Nor is anybody likely to have a chance to hide his identity for innocuous reasons, since, in addition to the plan for the universal finger-printing, the rogues' galleries of the country are now adding minute descriptions of teeth.

Recently a prisoner on Welfare Island who had been sent up under an assumed name was discovered to be a state prisoner who had broken parole and sent back to Sing Sing to serve out the remainder of a two-year sentence. His teeth revealed his identity.

A Foreign Entanglement.

"My boy writes me that he has joined a Greek letter society at college," remarked the self-made man. "It's the Alpha, Gamma, Lambda or something like that. I'm going to give him a piece of my mind." "What for?" "I don't want any boy of mine joining one of those foreign organizations. And, besides, everybody knows Greece is in a bad way."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

SIGNIFIES TIME OF PEACE

Legend of Halcyon Days Connected With Ancient Beliefs Concerning the European Kingfisher.

Many beautiful legends are connected with the European kingfisher, or halcyon, as the bird was anciently called. An old belief was that the seven days preceding the shortest day of the year were used by the birds to build their nests, which, it was thought, floated off on the water, and the seven days following were devoted to hatching the eggs. During that period, "the halcyon days," the ancients believed, the sea was always calm. That is why the word "halcyon" is used to describe calm, peaceful days.

The power of quelling storms was believed to have been conferred upon the kingfisher by Aeolus, the wind god, who made this dispensation when his daughter, Alcyon, and her husband, Cyax, were changed into kingfishers.

The kingfisher, from a perch sometimes as high as 50 feet above the water, does a sudden dive, seizes a luckless fish in his long beak, flies back to his perch, tosses the fish into the air, catches it again coming down, and swallows it head first.

NOTHING TO BE SORRY FOR

As Is Here Pointed Out, There May Even Be Advantages in Having a Swelled Head.

We often hear a so-called swelled head mentioned as if it were a thing to be deplored. Yet what could give the proprietor more joy than a swelled head? Imagine the satisfaction of waking up in the morning and looking at the sunshine with the thought: "Well, well, there's the old sun up again to do me homage. Good old sun to light up the world mostly on my account. What a great fellow I am! Well, I'll start out now and give a lot of folks a treat by talking with them. No use being a great chap like me and keeping myself all to myself. I'll put on my new clothes and add all the joy I can. Everybody who comes into contact with me is bound to be better for it."

"Why feel sorry for a fellow like that?" asks a writer in Collier's. Who could possibly get more fun out of life? True, he may be gaining his satisfaction on a false premise. But then how many of us can prove that our scheme of life is free from flaws? The man with a swelled head is a joy to himself and a constant source of amusement to his neighbors. Perhaps we should envy him instead of feeling sorry for him.

Curious Feat of a Steeplejack.

In felling a tall tree it is usual to cut through the trunk at the base and then to let the tree fall with a crash, or by means of ropes to ease its descent in a given direction.

At Rose Hill, California, a tall eucalyptus tree, 180 feet high, has been cut down from the top.

A steeplejack was engaged to do the work, and he climbed almost to the top, and began to cut off a ten-foot length. The section had a rope fastened round it before it was cut through, and when it was separated the steeplejack lowered the section to the ground.

Then he proceeded to cut another ten-foot length in the same way, and so on until the whole tree had been felled. The work took nearly a week. The tree was closely surrounded by buildings. If it had been sawn through below there was nowhere for it to fall without doing damage to surrounding property.

Advice to Obese.

Your stomach long having been used to caring for more food than your system needed, is enlarged, and when you eat moderately there are the wide-open spaces longing to be occupied. That is why you still feel hungry and unsatisfied.

Now if you will go on a three-day liquid or fruit diet, not totaling over 500 or 600 calories a day, this will reduce it to its normal size and very much less food than you have been used to will satisfy you. Then you can easily go on your reduction diet as though it were a feast.

For these shrinking days I advise about 100 calories every two or three hours during the day. You will lose from five to ten pounds during this period and it gives you a glorious start. After that it is not wise to lose over two pounds a week.—Health Bulletin.

Not All He Expected.

A youth who had accomplished a good deal in football but little in his studies, was dropped from one preparatory school and immediately invited to enter another. He had been there but a few days when he met a member of the faculty.

"Well," said the professor, "how do you find it here?" "Pretty fair," said the boy. "That's good. Find it smooth going, eh?"

The boy reflected, "Well, I shouldn't like to say that exactly," he remarked. "The field's sort of rough yet in places, etc."—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Mean Trick.

In Boston a young lawyer, who spent most of his time trying to seem busy and prosperous, went out for a while, leaving on his door a card neatly marked:

"Will be back in an hour." On his return he found that some envious rival had inscribed underneath: "What for?"

American Explorers Helped.

The British occupation of Palestine to the present time has proved of greater usefulness to American explorers than to those of the mandatory power. The work at Beisan is only a commencement of American researches in the Holy Land. The famous historical sites of Taanach and Megiddo have been allocated provisionally to two other American universities; while a third university, that of Harvard, has obtained a renewed concession for the site of Samaria, where, previous to the war, they had disclosed imposing Roman ruins of the period of Herod, and earlier remains down to that period in Jewish history when Ahab first established on that site the capital of Israel.

While British universities have been slow to respond to the great opportunity which now lies open, there is, at any rate, much satisfaction to be derived from the increasing activity on the part of American colleges. Harmony and enthusiasm prevail, and the friendly rivalry thus established is a healthy and helpful stimulus.

Contented Cows.

"Hawkins told me about following Corot in the fields when he was painting. One day when the master had made a particularly beautiful landscape, with cows browsing in the foreground, Hawkins objected to the fact that Corot had painted in a pond when there was really none in sight. 'My cows will be in my picture for a thousand years,' he answered, 'and I put in the pond to give them some water.'"—From "Seven to Seventy," by Edward Simmons.

How to Torture Your Wife.

A man whose wife was visiting relatives in another state was getting lonesome, but couldn't get her to cut short her visit and return home. He wrote her a letter almost every day, pleading he was sick, that he couldn't get any good food. She wouldn't budge. Then he had an inspiration, a bunch some would call it, says Capper's Weekly. Before the wife left home she had arranged to have two rooms papered, and had ordered the paper, but was unable to get a workman at the time she had to leave for the visit. The paper came while she was gone. Friend Husband wrote a long letter to his wife, telling her the paperhanger had arrived, but that he (the husband), didn't remember which paper was to go on which room. He had told the paperhanger to go ahead, however, to use such-and-such a paper (naming the dining room paper), on the front room, and the other paper (the front room paper), on the dining room. The missus reached home on the next train.

Egypt Needs Foreign Capital.

The Egyptian government is preparing to offer valuable concessions to American or English capitalists who might wish to avail themselves of an abundance of raw material to establish industries in that country. It is said the government believes Egyptians incapable of developing their country industrially.

A unit for the electrostatic precipitation of solids from smoke, which will save 90 per cent of metals from escaping smoke and eliminate much of the soot and fumes, is to be installed at once at a cost of $50,000, it has been announced.

Use of "check off" funds to unionize "open shop" mines was forbidden by federal Judge George W. McClintock in an injunction handed down in a special session of the United States District Court. The injunction prohibits the international organization of the union from sending money into West Virginia to be used in organization activities.

It has been learned from what it considers reliable sources that Henry Ford had bought a tract of coal and timber land covering about 125,000 acres, in eastern Kentucky. The purchase price is said to be between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000. The tract is owned by the Peabody interests.

In the span of a little more than two generations the United States has assumed the leading position among all nations in the volume and variety of its manufactured production.

The right of the United States coal commission to fix coal prices was upheld recently by the United States Supreme Court in deciding against the J. M. McDonald Coal Company of West Virginia, which was appealed for increased pay for coal under prices established by the commission.

Four new stamps of the complete new series to be issued by the Postoffice Department have been placed on sale at the department philatelic agency. The department said the new stamps would be sent to postoffices only when the present supply in their denominations is exhausted.

States cannot impose taxes on mortgages negotiated by the Federal Farm Loan banks, the Supreme Court held recently. It overruled a decision of the courts in Alabama which upheld a tax of 15 per cent per hundred in accordance with an Alabama law on a mortgage of the Federal Farm Loan Bank at New Orleans, signed by D. W. Crossland of Montgomery county.

President Harding, by proclamation, has designated the week of April 23-25 as Save-the-Forests-Week.

BRIEF ARIZONA ITEMS

Ed J. Moyer, well-known cattleman of near Wilcox, had the misfortune to lose the sight of his right eye. He was taken to Douglas to be placed in the care of a specialist.

The new $20-ton mill of the Gold Roads Mining Company, D. R. Muir, manager, is now ready for operation. Capacity production will probably not be reached for some time.

The recovery of a horse that had been stolen about eight months ago from William Rollins, a rancher living near Benson, and a gallon of mescal were the results of a raid made by Constable Jess Wetn.

Permission to establish and operate an automobile stage line between Phoenix and Yuma via Gila Bend was granted by the Arizona corporation commission to R. H. Hatchell and J. S. Hatchell, both of Phoenix.

The Ray Consolidated Copper Company, W. S. Boyd, general manager, is operating about nine hundred men, employing No. 1 crushing plant, in addition to No. 2 mine and crushing plant. Another crew is at work handling the commercial freight and switching. Capacity is being increased as rapidly as the labor supply will permit.

According to a statement made by General Manager Browning the Magna Copper Company will resume producing early in April. It is delays in connection with the construction work on this mine at Superior which has held that property inactive for months, but it is now believed that the railroad will be ready to operate in April and that this will allow for the speedy reopening of the mine.

After denying a motion for a new trial, a motion for an arrested judgment and a fifteen-day stay of time for giving sentence in the case of John N. Webb, colored ex-serviceman, Judge John J. Sweeney at Prescott sentenced Webb to serve a sentence to extend through the rest of his natural life in the state penitentiary at Florence for the murder January 18 of James Coleman, also colored.

The county board of supervisors at their regular monthly meeting decided to appropriate an additional $5,000, with which to complete the section of the Flagstaff-Sedona highway below Oak Creek Falls now being built by County Engineer Jim Lamport. Mr. Lamport said that with this additional money he could complete the section and that, when this is completed, it will make it possible to comfortably make the trip by auto from this city to the Yavapai county.

Ore has come back into the face of the Verde Central's $10 drift. For a round or two recently the ground was barren, but as two or three similar bars had previously been encountered it was not thought that this one had any particular significance. The ore in the face today is splendid chalcocite, running around seven or eight per cent copper. At no time has the drift looked any better. It has been driven nearly 800 feet into the mountain since ore was first encountered last November.

A crew of workmen is rushing the construction of the buildings on the B. S. B. egg ranch two miles north of Pearce on the Pearce-Cochise highway. The enterprise, which is owned by Messrs. Alfred Barlow, A. Y. Smith and Frank I. Bryant, will be under the capable management of Mrs. Alfred Barlow, whose wide experience in the care of poultry was gained both at Petaluma, Calif., and in the care of a flock of 2,000 which she successfully raised last year. An order for 12,000 White Leghorn baby chicks has been placed with a Petaluma hatchery.

The United Eastern Company, Oatman, Roy Moore, manager, is turning out a large tonnage of ore running from $30 to $38 per ton. This ore is coming from the Big Jim vein on the third, fourth and fifth levels. This brings the monthly average of the mine to $125,000 in bullion.

Valley farmers who had the nerve to plant lettuce last fall are now reaping the profits of their venture. Reports arriving daily from eastern points are to the effect that Yuma Valley lettuce is bringing a premium, and that top prices are being received for the vegetable. Indications are that the farmers will receive $150 to $300 net off their lettuce. One plot of four acres has produced 1,000 crates so far, which seems to be the record. The Gadsden farmers are so well pleased with prospects that plans are now under way to plant several thousand acres in the lower valley to vegetables this fall. Morris & Co., who have been handling the marketing of the lettuce this year, are planning to erect a packing house at Gadsden as soon as the rush of the season is out of the way and get ready for the big crops coming.

Nogales has again led border ports of the district of Arizona in amount of exports to and imports from Mexico for the month of February. Nogales having $843,997 of the total imports and exports of $2,638,833 for the district. Work on the new postoffice, to cost more than $100,000, will be started in the near future.

A jury in the case of William Willbanks, charged with the murder of his brother, Carroll Willbanks, June 7, 1922, returned a verdict of not guilty in the Superior Court at Globe after twenty-eight hours' deliberation.

SAVED LIFE SAYS MRS. WAGENAAR

Portland Lady Fell Off 40 Pounds, but Declares Tanlac Restored Her Fully.

"For nine years," declared Mrs. Ella Wagenaar, 298 Graham St., Portland, Ore., recently, "I was almost a nervous wreck and never knew what it was to feel well.

"I was suffering from a general breakdown and, oh, it's just impossible to describe the pain and misery I endured. My stomach was so disordered I could scarcely retain a morsel of solid food. I lost forty pounds and was so weak I tottered like an infant when I walked. Many nights I never slept a wink, and I had weak spells, when I fainted dead away.

"After spending over a thousand dollars trying to get well, my husband finally persuaded me to take the Tanlac treatment. Well, that was the turning point, for all my troubles are gone now, I have almost regained my lost weight, and I've never enjoyed finer health. I will always believe Tanlac saved my life, and I'm so happy and grateful that I just can't help praising it."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Over 35 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Relieved of Nervousness and Other Distressing Ailments by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Brooklyn, N. Y.—"I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound four years ago, and am making it now for the change of life and other troubles and I receive great benefit from it. I am willing to let you use my letter as a testimonial because it is the truth. I found your booklet in my letter-box and read it carefully, and that is how I came to take the Vegetable Compound myself. It has given me quiet nerves so that I sleep all night, and a better appetite. I have recommended it already to all my friends and relatives."

Remember, the Vegetable Compound has a record of nearly fifty years of service and thousands of women praise its merit, as does Mrs. Englemann. You should give it a fair trial now.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Attorney General Daugherty Announces Harding's Candidacy for the Presidency Again.

CITES REASONS FOR HONOR

U. S. Will Not Recognize Russia While Soviet Agitates for World Revolution Says Secretary Hughes; France's Grip Tightens on Ruhr; Wall Street Jolted by Business Man; Judge Rules Prohibition Act Is Not the Law of the Land.

France is said to possess an air fleet eight times stronger than that of Britain. In your opinion do you think the peace of the world is endangered by France's growing military power, and that the United States should take a more active part in European politics in order to preserve the traditional balance of power?

ANNOUNCEMENT THAT PRESIDENT Harding is to run for re-election is the outstanding piece of news of the past few days. A statement to that effect was issued by Attorney General Harry M. Daugherty, the cabinet minister who is known to be most closely in touch with the President's personal thoughts, the other day in Florida.

The statement is based on no rumor of dubious authenticity. On the contrary Mr. Daugherty set the stage for his pronouncement by formally calling in the reporters who are trailing Harding on his southern tour and telling them of the decision, right after he had been closeted with the President.

Along with the declaration came a hint as to the grounds on which Mr. Harding will seek re-election. They are four in number, as follows: Taxation, law enforcement, the record of the Department of Justice (indicating that attacks on him are to continue), and the question as to whether this government will continue to hang along the lines as laid down by the Constitution or listen to the policies advanced by foreign theorists.

The first three policies are considered as measures to forestall attacks on the administration by the Democrats while the last issue is aimed at rival candidates who may appear in his own party. Only one serious candidate looms as a rival within Harding's own ranks, according to those close to Mr. Harding, Senator Robert M. LaFollette, the Wisconsin politician who has disputed for the nomination in every fight since 1912. Hiram Johnson, of California, is thought to have been eliminated when his friends and financial backers, William Wrigley, Jr., of Chicago, Alexander P. Moore, of Pittsburgh, and A. D. Lasker, were brought into the Harding entourage after the last election. Mr. Moore now is ambassador to Spain while Mr. Lasker is a member of the Florida houseboat party and chairman of the shipping board.

Harding will open his pre-election campaign this summer, according to present plans, when he will make a speaking tour on a trip to Alaska across the country, going by the northern route and returning by the southern. Speeches in the principal cities with addresses to the farming communities now are being planned.

THERE HAVE BEEN TWENTY-seven presidents of the United States, not including Mr. Harding. Of these eleven only have been elected to a second term, sixteen falling, presumably because of the weakness of their administrations. The list of eleven successful candidates includes Roosevelt, the first vice-president to be elected to the chief office since the days of Martin Van Buren. These figures show that re-election means a hard fight in a majority of cases and President Harding's announcement is not considered by his friends as being any too far in advance of the actual work of the campaign.

ONE of those rare utterances by Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes was made the other day, to a delegation of women seeking to have this country recognize the Russian government, in which he bluntly stated that there seemed little immediate chance for the United States to enter into friendly relations with those at the head of the soviet. His statement was to the effect that Russia would have to show an honest desire to accept its obligations and pay its debts, and to cease antagonizing other governments by fostering social revolutions outside of its own borders before it could be admitted to the concert of nations. He asserted that this government desired to help Russia to its feet but that it must first see a basis of helpfulness. Recent changes by the Lenin regime have been a step in the right direction, declared Mr. Hughes, but they have been so far from being adequate that they could not be considered seriously as the basis for a friendly approach by the United States.

Quoting Zinoviev, Lenin and Trotsky's words where they assert the Russian political situation merely is the beginning of a world revolution, Mr. Hughes baldly stated: "I desire to see evidences of the abandonment of that policy."

FRANCE IS GETTING DOWN TO real business in the Ruhr district these days. Extensive stores of coke were seized at Blumenthal, Westerholt and other places recently, one day's cleanup resulting in 1,500 tons being secured and forwarded to French territory. German miners now are working under the guns of the militia, piling up fuel for the invaders. There is said to be a growing spirit of restlessness among them, due to the fact their pay has not been increased to keep pace with the added cost of living imposed by the French occupation.

An official report by the French shows that they operated 280 trains in one day recently, but the Germans counter by saying that only ten of them were freight. Discovery of eighteen locomotives hidden away by the Germans was also made, while the allies have seized 20,000,000 marks, about $1,000 American money, from the city treasury of Dusseldorf, and some 30,000,000 marks from the postoffice administration building as a reprisal for damage done to military transport lines by German subjects.

In addition a form of curfew has been applied in the occupied district that forbids people leaving the invaded zone between the hours of 8 p. m. and 5 a. m. Workers who live in one district and work in the other are being put to supreme discomfort by the new rule. The events of the week show that France is employing the mailed fist harder than ever in order to enforce its demands, one immediate result being an appeal by the financial barons at Berlin to their government to seek a compromise looking for the evacuation of the occupied territory.

Some recent heavy failures among German manufacturers have occurred, while stocks traded in on the Bourse in Berlin showed a marked decline the past week as a result of the strangling process that is occurring to all German industry. An official pronouncement may be expected any time now from Chancellor Cuno. While many of the financial giants of Germany are understood to have transferred vast amounts of gold to other countries for safe keeping, yet their losses by the destruction of the home factories would be more than they willingly will face, according to French authorities, who are strengthening the pressure nearly every day.

One report from Berlin says that France's terms for withdrawal from the Ruhr district have been made known, semi-officially, to Secretary of State Bergmann. According to the report it is said a total of 47,000,000 gold marks or $11,750,000,000 is demanded as a basis of repayment. France offers, if an agreement is reached, to permit a moratorium of two years. In addition the allies are said to insist that the Ruhr district be internationalized with France installed as the "policing" power. The report emanates from Berlin, which indicates that the demands would not be understated. On the face of them the terms are severe enough, if they have really been made, to alienate many friends of the French government.

LORD BIRKENHEAD, one of the cabinet ministers in Lloyd George's government, addressing the house of commons last week, stated that France has eight airplanes to Britain's one and that it was in a position to blow British industries into the air at any time a disagreement between the two countries reached the stage of war. His remarks were the prelude to an appeal for more funds for the military arm of his government. Students of British politics will gather mostly from his remarks that Lloyd George merely is starting out to undermine the Bonar Law ministry, although there seems little doubt that England is in bad shape, compared with its cross-channel rival, in regard to fighting air-craft.

WALL STREET WAS BACKED UP to the wall the past week by Clarence Saunders, a Memphis man who asserts the big financiers tried to hang the name of "a boob from Tennessee" on him. The financial district of New York has not had such a jolt in years. The deal came about through Saunders' deals in Piggy Wiggy, of which corporation he is president. He quietly amassed nearly all the available stock that was not held by legitimate investors and then bought some 40,000 shares on margin for future delivery. Without warning he demanded the delivery of these shares and the scurrying around by brokers and the gamblers who were the principals in the transactions, forced the New York Stock Exchange to bar trading in Piggy Wiggy to save some big traders from financial disaster. Saunders threatened to force those who have sold to him to pay him $250 a share in lieu of their delivery of the actual stock, a figure that meant ruin to many of the stock gamblers.

The stock exchange charges that Saunders acted in bad faith, to which Saunders retorts that he went into the market for the first time in his life in his Piggy Wiggy deals and that the financial powers let him run, feeling certain he would come a cropper. When he outgessed them, he says they showed themselves poor sports. He further says that brokers, who are practically all members of the New York Stock Exchange, tried to break him up by demanding that he settle in full for all of his commitments and that he surprised them by doing so and demanding the actual stock in return for his cash. He says that threats by the exchange to expunge the stock from its trading list have no fears for him and that as long as he lives he will never head any company whose stock is traded in on the New York board. It is said that he took $10,000,000 at one time to handle Saunders' deals and that the New Yorkers figured he would never be able to control that amount. A few years ago Mr. Saunders was a grocery clerk at $4 a week.

JUDGE WALTER EVANS, UNITED States district judge for the western district of Kentucky, has ruled that drug agents cannot stop and search automobiles for liquor without a specific search warrant. He is reported to have made the curious ruling that "the prohibition law is not the supreme law of the land," a construction that will be novel to many who had thought it had become part of the Constitution of the land as the famous Eighteenth Amendment. More recently Judge John R. Hazel of Buffalo, in the Federal court at Syracuse, N. Y., ruled that prohibition enforcement officers could not enter homes in search of liquor.

On the other hand Federal Judge John M. Kilits, at Cleveland, sentenced Joseph Biener, of Pittsburgh, a liquor law violator who had pleaded "not guilty" and then been found guilty, to the full limit of the law, sending him to Atlanta penitentiary for two years, fining him $10,000 and in addition saddling the court costs on him. Judge Kilits declared that Biener had forced the government to draw a second indictment to secure his conviction and that he would have to reimburse the government for the expense to which it had been put.

NAVY PROBLEMS FACE CONGRESS

"5-3 TREATY" INTERPRETATION
GIVES DEPARTMENTS MUCH TROUBLE.

RANKS STRENGTHENED

CHAIRMAN MADDEN JOINS THOSE WHO FOUGHT PLAN IN LAST CONGRESS.

Washington.—Interpretation of the 5-3 naval ratio negotiated at the Washington arms conference gives promise of being a live subject in the next Congress unless the State and Navy Departments smooth out in the meantime the tangle over the navy's battleship modernization plan.

Those who fought the plan in the last Congress, on the ground that the United States proposed to violate at least the spirit of the treaty by strengthening the older capital ships, found their ranks strengthened by Chairman Madden of the House appropriations committee, who declared he believed the work would be out of harmony with the agreement.

Mr. Madden said that when the House appropriated $6,500,000 for the work it stipulated that the Navy Department should definitely establish its right under the treaty to embark on its program. Navy officers at that time, he said, stressed the strengthening of older ships by Great Britain and Japan and asserted that there would be no violation of the treaty in the plans of the Navy Department.

Inasmuch as Great Britain has denied modernization work attributed to her navy. However, the whole subject has resolved into one of treaty interpretation.

Chairman Madden has announced that in view of the British disclaimer he would protest against the expenditure of the money appropriated by Congress for battleship work on the ground that the action had been taken under the apprehension that other governments had already strengthened their fleets in a similar way.

Senator Nicholson Dies.

Denver.—United States Senator Samuel D. Nicholson died at his home, 1559 Logan street, a few days ago. His condition had been considered hopeless since his arrival home, when he suffered a relapse. The senator was conscious most of the day before his death, and suffered great pain at times until given opiates to bring relief. During the evening he fell into a semi-comatose state. At times when he was awakened to take small drinks of malted milk given to bolster up his strength, which had dwindled steadily, he showed that his mind was still clear and invariably he recognized the friends and relatives at his bedside.

Piggly Wiggy Head Hits Wall Street.

Memphis.—Clarence Saunders, president of the Piggly Wiggy Stores, Inc., who declared he had cornered its stock to the consternation of Wall street brokers, said he was not going to back down in his determination to show "Wall street the people are running this country." Saunders asserted he was considering a plan by which he could involve the United States Senate in an investigation of the operations of the New York stock exchange, through which he was enabled to buy more stock than had been issued.

Shows Tremendous Gain.

New York.—Consolidated net income on the American ship and commerce corporation for the year 1922 totaled $1,797,610, as compared with a loss of $1,045,584 in 1921, as was disclosed in the company's annual report made public recently. Aggregate net income of the corporation and its subsidiaries showed a profit of $2,545,770 in 1922 as against a loss of $711,445, the year before.

Seven Arrested Under Blue Laws.

Findlay, Ohio.—Arrest of seven men, including Walter K. Richards, manager of two motion picture theaters, and six of his operators on charges of violating the state Sunday amusement law failed to bring about the permanent closing of either theater.

Irish Rebel Chief Taken.

Dublin.—General Biffin, one of the chief Irish leaders, has been captured by Free State troops operating from Sligo, according to an official army report.

Two Filers Are Killed.

Kokomo, Ind.—Lieut. Gilbert T. Baker of Frankfort, Ind., and Private Earl Thornburg of Whittier, Calif., were burned to death when their airplane caught fire, after falling at Flagley field at Kokomo. The plane was just beginning to take off when it was turned over by a gust of wind. One of the wings punctured the gasoline tanks and the plane broke into flames. Spectators were unable to liberate the aviators who were pinned beneath the machine.

Easter Out-of-Doors

EAGLE ROCK, LOS ANGELES

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

CHRISTIANITY has two great anniversaries each year—Christmas and Easter. Yesterday all of Christian faith celebrated the birth of Jesus. Tomorrow they celebrate the resurrection of Jesus. "Death is swallowed up in victory" on Easter Day. "If any man would come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me."

So said Jesus to His followers before He went to His death on Calvary. Later they saw Him flinching beneath the weight of the cross as He went forth from Pilate's judgment hall along the Way of Sorrows to Golgotha. Still later they saw Him dying on that cross. And finally they saw Him risen from the dead on Easter Day.

To Jesus' disciples the cross symbolized the power of imperial Rome over those who offended against her. Rome stood for material achievement, for oppression. Jesus stood for spiritual things, for love, for human freedom and brotherhood.

To the Christian of today Easter is a celebration of the belief that Rome was wrong and that Jesus was right. And he knows that he must carry the cross, as well as cling to the cross.

Man instinctively yearns for life beyond the grave. "Till death do us part," reads the marriage service. There are some who would have it so that not even death can part them. Wrote Robert Browning:

O, thou soul of my soul, I shall clasp thee again,
And with God be the rest!

Many feel that if there is to be no future life for them then is this earthly life a hideous iniquity, a prodigious failure. Wrote Tennyson:

Thou wilt not leave us in the dust;
Thou madest man, he knows not why,
He thinks he was not made to die;
And Thou hast made him. Thou art just.

It seems inconceivable that man should toil upward with sweat and travail until a Lincoln could say, "With malice toward none, with charity for all" and then should come annihilation. Wrote Darwin:

It is an intolerable thought that man and all other sentient beings are doomed to complete annihilation after such a long-continued and slow process.

So the Christian of today sees in Easter the answer to the ages-old question: "If a man die, shall he live again?" This is an old, old earth and man has lived long upon it—so long that he celebrated Easter ages before Jesus died upon the cross and rose from the dead. The Easter that man celebrated before Christianity came was an instinctive expression of his joy that winter was over and spring was on the way. To him the sun, if not God himself, was light and warmth and springing life. So at or near the vernal equinox early man celebrated the change in the seasons that renewed his slender lease on life and comfort.

Man instinctively turns to a god, if not to the God. In the beginnings of the race man saw God in light and darkness; heard God in the thunder and the wind; felt him in the manifold manifestations of nature. Perhaps most of all early man saw God in the sun that drew nearer in the spring and gave light and heat and food. So it is no wonder that modern man rejoices as of old at the coming of spring. He would sing, if he could, with Bliss Carman:

Well I know
The sun will shine again and spring come back
Her ancient, glorious, golden-flowered way,
And gladness visit the green earth once more.

For many a city man does Berton Braley speak when he sings of the tunes of the first street piano of the spring:

They build me a vision of meadows Elysian,
Of brooklets that babble and breeze that croon,
And wistful and tender young spring in her splendor
Comes dancing to me on the wings of a tune.

Russell Mott, a poet of long ago, spoke for all nature lovers when he wrote:

Godde help alle good adventures
Who love strange roads see wells,
Whose pyssonne ys a city street,
Whose counting-house a colie;

Send them a safe deliverance,
That each may lyte his fyre,
With only the starrs for guides
Inne the lunde of hys desire.

So it is that out-of-doors on Easter morn offers a lure for many that no church can equal. Easter morn at sunrise, should you be in Los Angeles and one of those lured by the out-of-doors, hasten to Eagle Rock park. You will find many others going your way and you will come to a vast crowd on Eagle Rock, surmounted by a cross and

CENTRAL PARK, NEW YORK

Worshiping God in His holy temple, with naught between the worshippers and His blue heaven. And if the resplendent sun seems in some sort god to you, fear not that it is disloyalty to the true God. It is but the instinct of prehistoric ages working in you. And He will not be offended.

And if you be in New York city and the lure works on you, make your way to Central park very early Easter morn. For there on the Mall shall you find a great concourse of fellow-worshippers to whom the lure was equally strong. Who will lead the worship I do not know, except that it will be some worthy leader. Last Easter morn he was the Rt. Rev. Herbert Shipman, suffragan bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese, former army chaplain.

Now, does the lover of Mother Nature, Up in the mountains, high in the Rockies, Seeing a moving blue in the aspens, Hearing a twitter sweetly familiar, Say to his comrade: "Lo, the first bluebird! Spring is upon us—springtime, with Easter. Winter is ended. Jesus is risen. Let us go worship where shows the snow cross High on the mountain, Holy Cross Mountain."

This Easter a few hardy spirits, able-bodied and in love with the out-of-doors, will worship on the slope of the Mount of the Holy Cross in the Colorado Rockies. Around them will be stream and lake and forest and natural scenery unsurpassed. And above them, boldly drawn in everlasting snow against the naked granite of the great peak, will be the Holy Cross in glistening white.

Next Easter morn there will be many more worshippers and thereafter the number will yearly increase. For under the Holy Cross on the slope of the mountain has been established a devotional center in the form of a camp. Thousands have come under the spell of the mountain's giant cross and thousands have asked for this devotional camp. So it is being established and developed, for the benefit of all. Both Protestants and Roman Catholics are interested. All are invited to come and worship at a shrine with, as John Masfield says,

A beauty perfect, ripe, complete,
That art's own hand could only smutch
And Nature's self not better much.

Dr. Johnson wrote that the mountains were so much hopeless sterility "dismissed by nature from her care." But Dr. Johnson was wrong. All the world loves the mountains—or would, if it knew the mountains. And they are indeed lovely in the spring. Wherever there is water there are aspens and their tender green is charmingly offset by the darker green of the evergreens. Light and distance paint the scene with the gorgeousness of a painter's palette. Distance turns the greens into lilac, mauve, blue and indigo. Gorges, deep and dark, take on purple shades. The shadows cast by moving clouds make fascinating changes in the color scheme. The sunset skies are startling in their crimson and golds. And down in the mountains is a thing of beauty and therefore a joy forever. The naked granite of the high peaks blushes ruby red under the first rays of the sun and if a peak is snow-crowned the beauty is enhanced. As the shadows lengthen or shorten on the forested slopes there is an ever-changing play of color.

Yes; Dr. Johnson was wrong. As John C. Van Dyke says in "The Mountain," "Mountains are the spots where we get once more back to nature's heart after a lifetime spent in the dreary London of the world."

The Mount of the Holy Cross (12,978) is world-famous because of its cross of snow that forms the crowning touch of its majestic beauty. The upright of the cross measures about 1,200 feet and the beam about 200 feet. Its snow is everlasting and may be seen for many a mile. The mountain itself can be seen on a "fair day from Longs peak, a hundred miles to the north.

Holy Cross gives its name to the Holy Cross National forest, which is under charge of the forest service of the Department of Agriculture. The Mount of the Holy Cross has hitherto been little visited because of its comparative inaccessibility. In 1916, however, the forest service constructed a new trail up the side of the mountain, so that it is now possible to ride on horseback to within a mile of the summit. The starting point of this trip is Red Cliff, and the intervening distance to the peak, 12 miles, can be covered in from five to six hours under favorable weather conditions. Near the foot of the peak, where the trail leaves Cross creek, a shelter cabin has been constructed for the convenience of visitors essaying the climb. The trip from the cabin to the summit may be made on foot in from two to three hours. The vast panorama of snow-clad mountain peaks, evergreen forests, and rolling valleys which greets the eye after this arduous ascent is one of impressive grandeur.

In ascending Holy Cross to the foot of the cross the visitor passes through five different and distinct tree zones. Timberline is at 11,500 feet. And all the way up are flowers; in season the alpine meadows above timberline are most gorgeous of all with their myriad blossoms in miniature. In Rocky Mountain National park, a hundred miles to the north, have been collected and identified 289 species of flowers, 21 species of trees and flowerless shrubs and 50 species of ferns, grasses and rushes.

At Easter time on the eastern slope of the Colorado Continental Divide the flower of flowers is the pasque flower. Pascha is the Greek form of the Hebrew pesach, from pasach—to pass over. As Easter is the Christian equivalent of the Jewish Passover the flower is well named. It is one of the buttercup family and a cousin to the anemones—wind flowers. It grows in clusters that often number eight or ten blossoms. The flower stands eight or ten inches from the ground. Often the star-shaped blossoms are almost 2 1/2 inches across. They range in color from almost purple to almost white, with a fascinating variety of shades, all of which may occur in the same cluster. In the mountains a fall of light snow corresponds to the spring rain of the plains. In my commonplace book I find this, under date of Easter Sunday:

"A foot or so of light snow fell last night. At 10:30 this morning I took a broom, a basket and a long knife and started out to gather my Easter flowers.

MOUNT OF THE HOLY CROSS, COLORADO

"Easter flowers! Certainly, I know an open space near my log cabin where were growing thousands of pasque flowers and many buttercups and here and there a violet. I had wandered among them before the snow came, enjoying their beauty to the full.

"I plodded off through the snow to the 'Kit Carson Corner'—close to the camp of that famous frontiersman on a beaver-trapping expedition in the Fifties. There I began sweeping off the snow in zigzag fashion. Soon I found pasque flowers in such numbers that I grew hard to please. I filled my basket with the largest and most perfect. They were none the worse for the snow. But buttercups and violets were forlorn. The next the snow was all gone and the field was brilliant with pasque flowers, unharmed by their nature."

I could not seem to regain my strength and was really not able to do my housework. I knew I needed a good tonic and builder and remembered how my folks used to regard Dr. Pierce's remedies in my girlhood days, and then I decided to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Despite heavier costs of production and mailing expense, due to "zone" postage rates, Sunset maintains a fair subscription price of $2.50 per year; but its western newspapers to offer it attractive club combinations. Subscribers are given the benefit of a "Western" Editorial section of the West, a home-makers' section, the Book Corner, The Home Bureau, the Guide Post (for tourists) and interesting—unusual stories of unusual (western) people; besides a high quality of fiction and special articles.

You may not soon again have the opportunity to get this high-class magazine at a reduction. By special arrangement with the publishers of Sunset we are offering it in combination with the Patagonian (for a limited time only) at a saving of $1.50 per year for the two publications. ### PRODUCERS AND BUYERS GET TOGETHER AT PHOENIX

"The greatest get-together meeting of producers and buyers ever held in Arizona."

This is the description applied to the buyers' and sellers' conference of purchasing agents, wholesalers, manufacturer and farm organization representatives held in Phoenix recently as a follow-up to the statewide "Trade at Home—Buy Arizona Products" campaign. Attendance at the conference has been placed at 250 for the morning and afternoon sessions.

The meeting was noteworthy for the comments brought out on Arizona products, as well as for the personal contact brought about between producers, distributors and consumers. Everyone present agreed that the standards of all Arizona products have been raised materially during the last year, while increases in the consumption of Arizona products have ranged from 25 to several hundred per cent.

Equally interesting were the declarations of purchasing agents and dealers that they are giving, and will give, preference to Arizona products, quality and price being equal.

Need of standardization in the farm products of the state was strongly emphasized at the conference in talks by such men as A. B. Ballantyne, director of the agricultural extension service of the University of Arizona; C. S. Brown, president of the Arizona Farm Bureau Federation; G. M. Bridge, president of the Yuma County Farm Bureau; W. P. McCormack, western purchasing agent for the Fred Harvey restaurant and dining car system; C. R. Adamson, Cochise county agricultural agent, and several purchasing agents and wholesalers. Before agricultural prosperity can be restored to Arizona, they declared, the farmers must employ uniform grading and uniform packing of their products. They must get into quality production, fill orders on the spot, and establish their ability to meet all demands for both quality and delivery. This is one of the biggest services farmers' organizations can render.

Producers at the conference displayed great interest in reports as to how mining companies of the state have increased their purchases of Arizona products. Most of the purchasing agents present had something to say along this line, and all emphasized that when they do buy outside products they do so because the necessary conditions cannot be met in the state.

The conference was featured by a number of exhibits arranged by Arizona manufacturers. Informal talks were made by a score of buyers and producers.

APPROPRIATION FOR CITIZENS' TRAINING CAMPS CUT DOWN

Advance information of the army appropriation act shows that the budget for citizens' military training camps has been materially reduced. This has made necessary a reduction in the number of men that can be accepted for training at the camps this summer. The quota for the Eighth Corps area, which includes the states of Texas, Oklahoma, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona, has been reduced from 3600 to 2800.

Under this quota the allotment to the camps in the corps area has been changed, as follows: To Fort Sam Houston, Tex., 1100 instead of 1600; to Fort Sill, Okla., 1000 instead of 1200; to Fort Logan, Colo., 500 instead of 600. The assignment of 200 students to the camp at Fort Huachuca, Ariz., is the only one that remains unchanged in the corps.

Due to this reduction of almost 25 per cent, it is expected that many more applications will be received in the corps area than can be accepted. It is therefore advisable for young men who desire to attend the camps to make request for application as early as possible. If applicants are otherwise qualified, their acceptance will be determined by date their application is received.

For information or application blank write to C. M. T. C. Officer, 8th Corps Area, Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

ARMY AND NAVY UNION PLANS MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM

The Army and Navy Union of Nogales, at its regular weekly meeting, Monday night, appointed Captain Beatty chairman of the committee on arrangements for the Memorial Day program, which will be under the auspices of the Union, as has been the custom for several years. Captain Beatty acted as chairman of last year's Memorial Day ceremonies, and has announced a program for this year more elaborate than ever before, and says all patriotic and secret societies will be asked to take part in the program.

PIONEERS' REUNION APRIL 10-11

Men and women who helped mold from "bits of sand" the present-day happy, prosperous commonwealth called Arizona will gather in Phoenix Tuesday and Wednesday, April 10 and 11, for the third annual pioneers' reunion, complimentary to the pioneer men and women of the state.

There is but one qualification. That is that a person must be a resident of Arizona 31 or more years. Any man or woman who came to the state 25 or more years ago is eligible to share in the reunion program, and a hearty and cordial invitation is extended to each and every such person.

The event, as in former years, is being sponsored by the Arizona Republican. A portion of the program—a goodly portion, too—has been set aside for story-telling. Old-timers of the state will recount incidents that helped make Arizona history. These reminiscences were features of the first two reunions, and it is expected that they will be equally as interesting this year.

And there's going to be an old-fashioned dance. Pioneers have come to look upon this as one of the outstanding features of the reunion. It's an institution in Arizona now.

The quadruple, the square and the barn dances will be on the program.

G. A. MARTIN CHOSEN DISTRICT GOVERNOR OF ROTARY CLUB

G. Allen Martin, managing editor of the El Paso Herald, was elected district governor of the Rotarians at the convention held in Tucson last Friday and Saturday.

HIGHWAY APPRAISERS HERE

Frank Joiner, L. C. Penhoel and John Granville, highway engineers, who are appraising the highways and equipment for the state, passed through Patagonia Wednesday. The gentle men mentioned, especially Frank Joiner, are old-time road builders and have national reputations. It

The Green Glass "Snake."

What is frequently referred to as the "green glass snake" is not a snake at all, but a lizard.

An eminent naturalist, Dr. R. W. Shufeldt, says, in a contribution to the Journal of Heredity, that the glass snake sometimes attains a length of more than three feet. It ranges over most of the eastern United States and is very abundant in Florida. Marshy soil is its favorite habitat, wherein it burrows for earthworms and larvae of insects. Why this curious lizard (its section of which reveals rudimentary thigh bones) should have come to disguise itself as a snake nobody can say. It is beautifully colored in shades of green, with a dark streak along its back, and the "feel" of its glossy surface is like that of porcelain or smooth glass. Its most remarkable characteristic is the reptile's ability to shed its tail when desirable, such as when chased by some other snake or beast.

Matador's Life Not All "Pie."

A bullfighter, "matador," draws from $2,000 to $10,000 a fight, but has to pay his own men or "cuadrilla," about four in number. Before killing the bull he "dedicates" it to some prominent spectator and takes an oath to kill the bull or let the bull kill him. He must go through (technically) as long as he can stand on his feet. No one of his men can interfere between the bull and matador unless matador is on the ground helpless. A spectator entering the ring would cause a riot and the crowd would demand their money back. A bullfighter is an outcast or declassé from upper social strata, and could never meet socially an upperclass girl. A bull that charges and goes a horse must be killed; if one matador is laid out, another must take up the task of killing the bull, or "rain checks" must be issued.—Adventure Magazine.

Willeox—Many idle copper properties preparing to resume activities.

is a matter of business for the state to get a dollar's worth of good road for every dollar expended, and those conversant with road building problems in the United States believe that such investigations and examinations are a good investment and will return many dollars for every one spent along this line.

These men must make a report to legislative committees, and they could not give out any detailed information. Their complete and detailed report will be available, however, to those interested in good roads within the next 20 or 40 days.
