MINE PRODUCTS MORE STABLE

Copper seems to have "turned the corner," and quotations display a higher degree of stability.

In spite of the increasing disappointment in the European situation, 'pool' activity may again be expected to assume greater significance.

Lead is ranging firm close to 7.20 cents a pound, New York delivery, as anticipated. Foreign equivalent is actually stronger, close to 5 1/2 cents a pound.

The zinc market shows further strengthening, New York spot delivery selling up to 7.10 cents a pound. This change is attributed in trade circles to a more reticent attitude of producers, rather than to especial activity of demand.

Gold imported into London last week totaled 855,251 pounds sterling, of which 799,245 pounds was from South Africa. Of the exports, 668,499 pounds, this country received 519,285.

The Mexican banking order that banks must hold a 50-50 gold and silver reserve was characterized by bullion brokers as a stronger influence than the Pittman re-purchase order.

BEWARE OF SWINDLERS

Texas is still suffering from the shock of the revelations in regard to the operations of oil swindlers in that state. Millions of dollars were taken from the people through the fraudulent activities of oil promoters there.

It is almost impossible to sell a man a house, horse, jack-knife, suit or clothes, automobile, watch or any other commodity before he has seen and examined it.

Then why is it that people will buy millions of dollars' worth of worthless securities about which they know nothing and without ever seeing or having advice regarding the properties? It is a mystery.

Why not go to a recognized bond dealer or banker and at least get his opinion before you kiss your hard-earned dollars good-bye in such a fashion?

CANANEA CATTLE CO. MAKES BIG CATTLE PURCHASE

Charles E. Wiswall, president of the Cananea Cattle Co. of Cananea, Sonora, spent Saturday and Sunday in Nogales, where he closed a deal for the purchase of 1000 head of cattle from former governor Francisco Elias of Sonora. The cattle will be placed on pasture on the company's land.

Mr. Wiswall says range conditions in Sonora are good and that losses will be at a minimum.

Among the holdings of the Cananea Cattle Co. is the San Rafael ranch in the San Rafael valley, Santa Cruz county, where the largest herd of registered Hereford cattle in the United States is kept, under the management of Thomas E. Heady. The American unit of the company is called the Greene Cattle Company, and the land on the American side embraces more than 20,000 acres.

People's Forum

To the 70 Per Cent—the Small Cattle Growers of Santa Cruz County: Ladies and Gentlemen—

You will soon be asked to join a cattle association in this county. A hand-picked committee of five has already formulated one for you.

The facts are these: Thirty per cent of the cattlemen of the county will be enabled to make a living if they can secure our help in making this association a success, but we, the 70 per cent, will be in the same fix that we're in now—that of not being able to make a living out of cattle. Seventy per cent of us are too small and always will be too small to make a living out of the cattle business.

Our Forest Service already has refused us any increase. Two of this hand-picked committee has made the statement to me that it's impossible for a man with a family to make a living out of 130 head of range stock and they are right. Our Forest Service furnishes me with the statistics that over 70 per cent of us are 130 head or less.

This true state of affairs is given you for thought, and while we admit we may receive 2 or 3 dollars more per head for our cattle through this association.

We, in the end, will be no better off, for we can't possibly make a living and have no incentive to make it, for we can't grow bigger.

Also, County Agent Gould informs me that all the balance of the county's combined commodities are not big enough for an association. So, by joining this association we deal ourselves out of an association for other commodities.

So I ask you for thought on this subject and ask you to defeat this dog-eat-dog project. Yours thoughtfully,

M. W. EASON, Canille, Ariz.

CAPEHART HELD ON 2 COUNTS

W. P. Capehart, former president of the First State Bank of Patagonia, was held last Saturday afternoon for trial before the Superior Court on a trial bond by Justice of the Peace C. E. Hardy, on two charges of misapplication of funds. One of the charges was preferred by C. L. Northcraft and the other by Robert Ferris of Bain Valley.

The case has attracted considerable attention, owing to the fact that the bank closed several weeks ago and the charges were made following the failure of the institution to surrender notes held against the complainants.

Capehart is in Tucson, and his case will come up at the next term of court.

Hannah, the young colored cook in the Steadman household, had decided to make a change and try her luck in the capacity of cateress, feeling that she would find the work much easier. Shortly afterward she had occasion to return to the house, and as she was leaving her former mistress asked her where she was working now.

"Oh, I isn't workin' nowhere now, ma'am," quickly returned Hannah, coyly: "Ise caperin' for a congressman."

PAINTED A "RARE WHISTLER?"

French Artist Later Finds His Work Priced at 150,000 Francs—Much Litigation in Prospect.

A still life painting ascribed to Whistler and priced at 150,000 francs has been declared by the courts to be in reality the work of a French painter, Stassy. The Frenchman is said to have painted it eighteen years ago in one day on a bet; he then sold it for eighty francs and next saw it as a famous picture with Whistler's name in the corner.

It was the reproduction of the picture in a book on Whistler, in which it was learnedly commented upon as revealing Whistler's peculiar genius that brought about the expose. M. Stassy and a fellow painter named Behin, it was shown in court, painted the same group of flowers, a vase, a jar and a glass of wine on a wicker, with two of their pretty models as judges.

Some time ago, when Behin sold his copy, the dealer indignantly charged that it was merely a copy of Whistler's, and for proof showed him the photograph in the book. Behin told Stassy of his experience and the latter searched until he found the picture, which had traveled at increasing prices from dealer to dealer.

Stassy filed suit to recover the picture and have the signature changed, and asked for damages. Experts supported his contention, and the court now has upheld it to the extent of ordering Stassy's signature to replace that of Whistler.

The dealer who last bought the picture, paying for it 100,000 francs, says he will seek redress from the dealer who sold it to him, and continuous litigation on down the line may result.—New York Tribune.

PREFER THE YELLOW PEARL

Oriental Peoples Consider the Colored Gem Superior to the White in Many Respects.

Most persons have placed the lustrous white pearl above all others. The Chinese, however, together with other eastern peoples, prefer the yellow pearl, believing that it preserves both luster and color longer than the white.

This pearl is said to owe its yellow to the fact that the oysters have been allowed to die and putrefy in their shells, the shells opening of themselves on the death of the oyster.

This custom has been ascribed to the fact that the pearl generally lies close to the edge of the shell, and it is feared that many fine pearls would be spoiled if the process of opening the shell with a knife were practiced.

Black pearls are very much valued. The famous necklace of black pearls belonging to the late Empress Eugenie was sold for $25,000.

Pink pearls are much desired among the Buddhists, who employ them profusely in the adorning of their temples. The inhabitants of Ceylon are said to place a pink pearl in the mouth of a dead relative or friend before cremation of the body.

SHEEP IN CATTLE COUNTRY

Exception to Their Presence Under the Circumstances Was Natural to the Beef Producers.

Then out of a clear sky came the smell of sheep; all was o. k. at first, 'cause the cowmen figured there was plenty of range for everybody, even sheep. But soon enough the sheep kept getting thicker and their range poorer, which started the crowding on the cowman's best bits of country, Will James writes in Scribner's. There were a few parleys without the voice of the "smoke wagon" being heard—but sheep and sheep herders don't have much respect for words or rules or country; so they went at it to start spilling it all; and the cowmen went on to finishing what the sheepmen had started, with the result that mostly sheepmen and sheep were missing. The government couldn't do much; they'd had to pinch about four states.

The cattlemen won for a spell and all was hunky-dory again, outside of the damage sheep had done to the range. The dust beds they'd made out of the good grassy "benches" were beginning to show signs of life, the air was pure as ever and cattle were getting fat. The cattlemen were all good folks once more and tending to their business in land that was theirs. They were the first to blaze the trail to it; they made that land a big beef-producing country, it was their home, and naturally they wouldn't allow sheep coming along and leaving nothing of it but the bad odor.

CURED HIS "SWELLED HEAD"

Joseph Jefferson Has Told of Incident That Reduced the Size of His Cranium Considerably.

Successful actors, like other successful people, need to be on their guard against the "swelled head." Joseph Jefferson, known and loved all over the country for his Rip Van Winkle, once told Mr. John Drew how he himself was cured of an incipient case of that malady. Mr. Drew retells the anecdote in his entertaining book of reminiscences:

Mr. Jefferson told me that when he had made his big success with Rip Van Winkle he thought himself fairly important. One night as he was going to his room in the Fifth Avenue hotel a stockily-built man with a grizzled beard got into the elevator with him. "Are you playing in town now, Mr. Jefferson?" he asked.

Mr. Jefferson as he replied in the affirmative rather pitied the man for his ignorance and his total lack of understanding of what was going on in the world. What a simpleton he must be who did not know that "Rip" was having an extraordinary run! When the man reached his floor and got out Mr. Jefferson asked the elevator boy: "Who was that?"

"Why," said the boy, in his turn pitying Mr. Jefferson for ignorance, "that's General Grant!"—Youth's Companion.

Gottland.
The Saga relates that the discoverer and first settler on the Isle of Gottland was a man named Thjelvar. From the same source we learn that the island was then in such an unstable condition that it was submerged in the daytime, and rose to the surface at night, but Thjelvar exterminated with fire the trolls and evil spirits that infested it, and never since that time have the waters broken over the Pearl of the Baltic. The great number of tourists who have rediscovered Gottland in recent years are of a different disposition, and what lures them thither and fascinates them into lengthening their stay are the traces of those weird powers and happenings of olden times. In later years, the early Middle Ages, Gottland was indeed a power to be reckoned with, and it is the combination of ancient fairy lore and an interesting historical past that makes the island so attractive and a favorite spot for tourists intent on exploring strange ground.—Boston Transcript.

Unwritten Page of History.

John Tyler was elected vice president on the same ticket on which William Henry Harrison was elected president, but Harrison had not been in office much more than a month when he was suddenly taken ill and died. Tyler was at his home in Virginia when the news of the death of Harrison reached him. He seemed dazed at its unexpectedness. "You are now president of the United States," said his informant.

Tyler passed his hands across his forehead as though it required an effort to understand the reality of the responsibility which had been thrust upon him so suddenly. One story has it that he was so poor that he had to borrow the money to pay his expenses for the journey to Washington. At all events he hurried there by the first train, took the oath of office and became the occupant of the White House.

Africa Stands High.

Geologists believe Africa is a huge block of the earth's crust, thrust above the ocean's level by some force from deep in the rocks, and held there almost since geologic history began. Africa is a continent practically without harbors. The northern portion is generally low and has at different times been covered by the sea. But the southern peninsula, the true "dark continent," is a high plateau. All around its coasts the shores rise steeply out of the water. Rivers pour down the slopes in rapids, or, in the case of Zambesi, the scarp is sheer enough to have generated a waterfall.

When Mammoths Roamed the Land.

Mastodons and woolly mammoths were once as thick in New York as hens were on the western plains a century ago, according to Dr. Sherman C. Bishop, zoologist of the state museum. Although the mammoths were more closely related to the elephants, the only surviving members of the family, they were the first to become extinct and probably passed off the scene while the mastodons were still thriving. Skeletons of mastodons, more or less complete, and some of them suitable for museum mounting, have been found in about 100 localities in the state, the last one at Temple Hill, Orange county, in 1921. The first was found in Columbia county, not far from Albany, in 1705. These huge mammals are believed to have flourished about the end of the last glacial period, some 20,000 years ago. Their skeletons are found generally in the marsh lands of those early days.

In the wild west everybody used to smoke when a man reached for his hip pocket. Now they crowd around him.

A VICTORY FOR AMERICA MOTORISTS

The Crude Rubber Monopoly weakened when it came into contact with aroused public sentiment. The press of the country today reflects the determination of the American Motorist that tire prices shall stay at a reasonable level—and that America must produce its own rubber.

Firestone

CUTS TIRE PRICES

EFFECTIVE JUNE 11

We announce a 10% reduction in tires and tubes effective June 11. The lowered cost of crude rubber and the special Firestone manufacturing and distribution advantages make this possible.

Firestone factories are organized on a basis of large volume and effective production, prior costs are down but quality is at its peak. Stockholder workmen are daily building many thousands of Gum-Dipped Cords—the best tire Firestone ever produced and, we believe, the leader on the market today.

Firestone Cords took the first four places and eight of the ten money positions in the Indianapolis sweepstakes, May Thirtieth, without a single tire failure.

Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords have set new standards in mileage, traction, comfort and safety. Car owners have expressed their approval of the extra value in Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords by increasing their purchases 104% in the past six months.

We have replaced many expensive branches with warehouses. We now have 108 distributing points which are delivering Firestone tires to the consumer at the lowest cost in our history.

Follow the tide of economical tire buying—equip with Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords—and learn what Most Miles per Dollar means to you today.

NATIONAL PARKS 1922-23

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN
OUR National Parks, 1922-23! These two years are beyond question the most momentous in the history of the system since the creation of the Yellowstone—the first national park in the world—which celebrated its semi-centennial last summer.

The biggest thing of all is that the American people have within these two years seized upon the national parks as a part of their conception of the greatness of America. The plain people now feel toward their public playgrounds somewhat as they feel toward Old Glory—"Hands off!" They passionately desire to defend them and keep them inviolate. That is why the people won a series of brilliant victories in the Sixty-seventh congress against the organized assaults of industrial and commercial private interests. That is why, under the leadership of the National Parks association, the General Federation of Women's clubs and scores of nation-wide organizations all of one mind as to the national parks, they have developed strength to see that congress shall legislate wisely for their playgrounds.

Other things that make these two years momentous are these: 1922 was a record season in attendance; 1923 will undoubtedly set a new record far in advance. The appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1 are larger than ever before and provide for many permanent improvements.

Dr. Hubert Work is now secretary of the Interior in place of Albert B. Fall, resigned. That is a factor in the situation second to none in importance from the viewpoint of the national park enthusiasts. The secretary of the Interior is ex-officio boss of the national park service, has the say-so with Director Mather and is subject only to the nod of the president and the fusing of congress. The National Parks association makes no bones of saying in point that it is glad of the change in secretaries. Secretary Fall was a good friend of outdoor recreation. It says, but he undertook to change the national park policy into one which would turn the system into an aggregation of hundreds of little camping grounds. "Whenever I can find a pleasant place for local people to go and camp," he said, "there I shall have a national park."

Now, the late Franklin K. Lane in 1918 established the national park policy thus: "In studying new park projects you should seek to find scenery of supreme and distinctive quality or some natural feature so extraordinary or unique as to be of national interest and importance." The national park system as now constituted should not be lowered in standard, dignity and prestige by the inclusion of areas which express in less than the highest terms the particular class or kind of exhibit which they represent."

The new secretary has made no official announcement about his policy at this writing, but he knows his way around in politics and he saw what the army of enthusiasts did to Secretary Fall. Certain it is that he stands for efficiency as surely as his last name is Work. He proved that as post-master general. For the rest, he is a Coloradoan who won fame and fortune as a doctor of medicine, a college graduate and a man of affairs. Here, in part, is his public statement of his attitude toward the problems of his department:

I believe that the work done and the problems confronting the government should be placed frankly before the people. So in the conduct of the Department of the Interior there shall be no submerged or camouflaged policies, no issues tucked away behind smoke screens, but an open and frank exposition of all actions deemed essential to the public interest.

And here is Secretary Work's official invitation to us to visit the national parks this summer—mark the second sentence!:

With a lavish hand nature has molded throughout our land the most magnificent and awe-inspiring scenery, surpassing in beauty and grandeur that offered by any foreign country. These spots—our national parks—have been set aside by the American government to be maintained untouched by the intrusions of modern civilization so that you and your children may enjoy them. Roads have been built through deep-cut canyons, across towering mountain ranges, beside rippling streams filled with fighting trout, and into primal forests. Hotels and camps have been erected to provide comfortable accommodations in the most distant and inaccessible places. Free camp grounds have been provided for those who wish to bring their own equipment and camp out. These unspoiled bits of native America are for you. They are the playgrounds and the recreation parks of the people. To visit them and see them is to inspire pride and make more real your love for America. In the name of the government I invite you to be its guest.

Director Stephen T. Mather of the national park service is still on the job—another factor whose importance can hardly be overestimated from the viewpoint of the national park enthusiast. For beyond question Director Mather is a rare avist. He's rich, can take the time from his private business and is so fond of the national parks that he worries himself half-sick over them. His salary is a small part of what he gives to the parks each year. He certainly has accomplished a lot in his eight years of service. Even in the most acrimonious debates in congress, somebody usually takes occasion to pay him a compliment, generally referring to him as "the highest type of public servant."

The Sixty-seventh congress (March 4, 1921 to March 8, 1923) was practically one continuous battle ground. A victory for the national park forces with far-reaching results was that in the fight over the bill for the All-Year National park in and about the Mesquero Indian reservation in New Mexico. Senator Bursum of New Mexico got it through the senate. In the house Secretary Fall got it referred to the Indian Affairs committee instead of the public lands committee and in person supported it at the committee hearing. The proposed area, according to its opponents, was everything that a national park ought not to be; even New Mexico rose in revolt against it. The bill died in committee and is said to be too dead to be resurrected.

Another exceedingly important victory was the defeat of the bill of Senator Walsh of Montana for the damming of Yellowstone lake for commercial irrigation purposes. Senator Walsh circulated congress and made speeches in Montana for the bill. The result was the election of a conservation Montana congressman over a dam partisan and the death of the bill in committee. The battle over the Barbour bill for the Roosevelt-Sequoia National park (an enlarged Sequoia) ended in a draw, with the national park forces holding the advantage. They forced Barbour to amend his bill by inserting a clause exempting the park from the control of the water-power commission. The Los Angeles-Southern California Edison company interests through the late Representative Osborne gave notice that they would offer a water-power amendment. "Congressional courtesy" prevented a vote, owing to the illness and death of Representative Osborne.

The Sleep bill, for an Appalachian national park of 5,000 acres of mountain top to be donated to the government, was approved by Secretary Fall. It was fought by the national park forces on the ground that the area was unsuitable. The bill died in committee.

So far, so good, say the national park forces, but there is yet a still bigger battle to be won—the complete safeguarding in perpetuity of all national parks against every economic and commercial use of whatever kind. The American Association for the Advancement of Science passed a resolution defining the issue at its last meeting in Washington. This organization is international, has 12,000 members in the United States and Canada and at its head is Dr. Charles D. Walcott, executive secretary of the Smithsonian Institution. The preamble sets forth that the national parks of the United States constitute a system of "National Museums of Native America"; that the combined national park systems of the United States and Canada if preserved untouched will constitute an "unique continental exposition of inestimable value to science and to the popular education of future generations"; that at the option of a single government official several of the American parks and all but one of the Canadian parks are open to mining and grazing; that the control of water-power in the future American parks has been recently surrendered by congress to the water-power commission, and that interference with the natural condition of these parks will destroy their usefulness to science and education. The resolution calls upon the people of America and Canada "to secure such amendments of existing law and the enactment of such new laws as will give to all units in the international parks system complete conservation alike and will safeguard them against every industrial use either under private or public control at least until careful study shall justify the elimination of any part from park classification."

The General Federation of Women's Clubs passed a resolution to the same effect at its recent mid-annual council at Atlanta. The national park appropriations for the fiscal year beginning July 1 aggregate an increase of $243,210 over those of the current year. In the table that follows the first column of dollars contains the sums set apart for administration, maintenance and protection; the second the sums for permanent improvements; the third the total appropriations for the several parks. The fourth column shows the attendance at each park for the calendar year of 1922.

As to the permanent improvements: General Grant gets $38,875 for a sanitary and water-supply system. Glacier gets $100,000 toward the construction of an east and west road through the park across the Continental Divide; it also gets funds for an administration building at Bolton, the west entrance. Grand Canyon's item includes $40,000 for the Hermit's Rest Rim road and $8,000 for a community building. Mt. of Mesa Verde's $10,000 will go into a water system at Spruce Tree camp. Mount Rainier gets $38,000 for the widening of the Paradise Valley road to permit two-way automobile traffic; $25,300 for a new camp ground at Longmire Springs. Rocky Mountain gets $8,280 for the purchase of land for a public camp ground. Sequoia gets $54,000 for the completion of the Middle Fork road to Giant Forest; $18,000 goes for a water system in Giant Forest. Yellowstone's item provides $25,000 for a sewer system at Yellowstone Lake and $15,000 for additional camp grounds. Yosemite gets $35,000 for an administration building. Zion gets $133,000 through an item in the deficiency bill; it will be used for the building of roads and trails and for a bridge across the Rio Virgin on public lands outside the park.

Visitors to the parks this season will find many and various improvements. Rocky Mountain has been declared an all-year park; an administration building is going up on a site donated by the Estes Park Woman's club. Mount Rainier has a new shelter cabin at 10,000 feet elevation. Travel to the parks is 30 per cent by rail and 70 per cent by private car. Mount McKinley will be practically inaccessible until 1924. The annual cost to the people of the national parks is one cent and one mill per capita. Park visitors in 1922 spent about $85,000,000.

AUSTRIA OFFERS LOAN TO AMERICA

SYNDICATE HEADED BY J. P. MORGAN TO HANDLE ISSUE MARKETED RECENTLY

AMOUNT NOT EXCESSIVE

PUBLIC OFFERING OF $25,000,000 AUSTRIAN GOVERNMENT BONDS PART OF INTERNATIONAL LOAN

New York.—Public offering of $25,000,000 Austrian government bonds, a part of an international loan of $125,000,000 to the Austrian republic, was made in the United States by a syndicate of bankers headed by J. P. Morgan and Co.

The issue, which consists of twenty-year 7 per cent sinking fund gold bonds, will be offered at 90 to yield investors 8 per cent. The bonds are guaranteed as to principal, interest and redemption payments by the governments of Great Britain, France, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Belgium, Sweden, Denmark and Holland, and are secured by a first charge on the gross receipts of the Austrian customs and tobacco monopoly.

"The importance of the Austrian loan which was issued recently," J. P. Morgan, head of the banking firm of J. P. Morgan and Co., said in announcing the offering, "lies in the fact that the attitude of American investors to this loan will show they are interested in helping those nations of Europe which are prepared to help themselves toward the reestablishment of their credit."

"Last year at the bankers' conference, held at Paris, I stated that it was my opinion that if the security to be given was clearly good and the investors of other leading nations would cooperate to the extent that they felt themselves able to do, I believed that the American market would participate in an important extent in the rehabilitation in the European financial situation. At that time these conditions could not be satisfied. Now, however, for the first time, a loan is offered which fulfills both conditions."

"The amount, while large, is not excessive, and every present indication justifies my confidence that we shall find the American investing public in accord with us in our belief that the new Austrian bonds are a good investment and that the extension of this credit is an important step on the road to peace and normal conditions."

Treasury Will Seek Loan

Washington.—The treasury has announced it would seek a loan of $150,000,000 to round out its financing for the current fiscal year, ending June 30. The new certificate of indebtedness will mature in six months and, it is expected, will be retired largely by tax receipts in the next two quarterly payments. The interest rate will be 4 per cent, slightly lower than previous offerings of government securities have paid. The new issue will enable the government to conclude the refunding of its short dated debt, begun in 1921, and no further financing will be necessary, it was stated officially, until the middle of September.

Five Lives Lost in Kansas Floods

Kansas City.—At least five persons are believed to have lost their lives as a result of floods in Kansas recently. Virtually every stream in the state was out of its banks. Many cities over the state reported that the losses in their particular neighborhood would run into hundreds of thousands of dollars. Two casualties were reported at Arkansas City, which suffered the worst flood in its history. The body of one unknown youth was seen floating down a swollen stream and an aged woman, marooned in her home, shot herself through fear that she would be drowned.

France Asks Great Britain's Help

Paris.—Premier Poincaré's note on the subject of German reparations was delivered in London a few days ago for presentation to the British cabinet. It expresses the hope that Great Britain will join France and Belgium in telling Germany that passive resistance in the Ruhr must cease. "It says if Germany complies France will be disposed to consider with her allies a solution of the reparations question, provided the discussion keeps within the limits of the French proposal of January."

OUTFITS FOR THE OUTDOORS;

BUOYANT ORGANDIE FROCKS

EVERY one of those in a while civilized woman longs to "get away from everything" and to live for a time in the wilderness—or at any rate, in the open. The very best thing that she can do for herself and her family when a surfeit of duties and obligations has got on her nerves, is to answer the call of the wild, to get everything that usually occupies her mind off of it, to forget even the business of dressing up and to live outdoors until she is refreshed.

In answer to a demand for outfits that one can hike, climb, ride horseback, motor or camp out in, there are service suits that are guaranteed to do their part well. They are comfortable, sturdy affairs that leave one unhampered to scramble up steep grades, climb about or ride in and enable one to spend a vacation blissfully unconscious of clothes. There is a sufficient variety in them to be interesting and even where utility is the all-important point in designing, the element of style is not forgotten. Women may look trim and well set up in these service suits while they accomplish things in

There are many lovely colors and combinations of color with white in the season's patterns in organdie, swiss, voile and printed crepes, that make up a large part of the little girl's outfitting.

With all the printed materials, plain organdie plays a prominent part, supplying trimmings and accessories, often

Rail Valuations Discussed by "Progressives"

Victor Told Mussolini a Joke

Ordinarily the lens catches Premier Mussolini "on parade," looking as stern and "old Roman" as he possibly can, but this time King Victor Emmanuel, his mustache uplifted by a broad and most unregal grin, must have told a good one just as the camera snapped, for the apostle of Fascism is smiling most humbly.

Montenegro Honors American Woman

Count Jovan Plamenatz, prime minister of Montenegro and the official representative of King Michael the First, conferring the order of a knight grand officer of King Daniel I upon Miss Cassidy E. The order was conferred on Miss Mason for her "eminent services rendered to the cause of education and as a mark of appreciation for her noble sympathy for the suffering population of Montenegro." Miss Mason was ennobled by the late Queen Dowager Milena. This was the first time in five hundred years of that country's history that a woman or foreigner was so honored.

FORESTRY DISPUTE NEVER DIES OUT

PRESIDENT HARDING MAY GET TRUTH ON CONSERVATION WHEN IN ALASKA.

SOME THINK IT IS OVERDONE

William Russell Dudley's Interesting Story of the Life History of a Great Tree in the Converse Basin, California.

By EDWARD B. CLARK

Washington.—There are officials in Washington who believe in proper conservation of the national resources of the country, but who say they would like to find out once for all what proper conservation is. In Washington, as presumably elsewhere where people talk about the subject, there seems to be no middle ground of opinion on this subject. It is a case of "save everything" on the one side and "destroy everything" on the other side.

Forestry has been the cause of row after row in the government service. The stories of some of the disturbances which tree conservation has kicked up are too well known to need repetition, but the hard facts seem to be that the rows are likely to be continued indefinitely into the future. Mention a tree even casually in Washington and it instantly becomes necessary to get under cover in order to avoid controversy or something worse.

Probably President Harding would not go to Alaska this summer if one part of its domain were not producing great forests of trees. If one were to believe all that he hears about tree conservation and the general subject of Alaska trees, he could learn in five minutes on the one hand that greedy corporations want to cut down every stick of timber overnight, and on the other hand that the forestry service is determined that no one, for whatever purpose, shall be allowed to take out of Alaska so much as a silver or a chip of its forest growth.

Too Much Conservation?

While forest conservation has been the cause of recurring rows in the government ever since the Ballinger-Pinchot affair, it can be said that in the earlier days it was much easier to understand the reasons for the difference of opinion between the two schools of thought on the general forestry matter. Then it seemed to be a case, so far as the foresters were concerned, of a willingness to allow timber to be cut so long as its cutting was restricted and care in lumbering methods was exercised. The foresters wanted to save and to use at the same time.

Now if some of the partisans in the Interior department in its recent controversy with the Agriculture department are to be believed, the foresters are overdoing the matter of conservation. This may not be true, and as a matter of fact anything which is said on this general forestry subject in Washington should be studied and "proved up" before belief in it is expressed. In this one government matter "you never can tell."

Trees are interesting for other reasons than for the rows that they kick up in the government service. Some trees are more interesting than others. Perhaps a little extract from an article on a tree by William Russell Dudley, after he had made a study of the great growths in the Converse basin, California, may prove the point of interest.

Story of a California Tree.

Mr. Dudley wrote of the remarkable recuperative power of some of the great trees in the basin after they had been injured by a fire, and then he continued:

"Among a number of similar cases the most instructive record of these ancient forest fires was observed in a tree of moderate size—about fifteen feet in diameter, five feet from the ground. It was 270 feet in height and 2,171 years old.

"The history of the tree was as follows:

"B. C. 271 it began its existence. The first year of the Christian era it was about four feet in diameter above the base. A. D. 245, at five hundred and sixteen years of age, a burning three feet wide occurred on the trunk. One hundred and five years were occupied in covering this wound with a new tissue. For 1,190 years no further injuries were registered. A. D. 1441, at 1712 years of age, the tree was burned the second time in two long grooves, one and two feet wide respectively. Each had its own system of repair.

"One hundred and thirty-nine years of growth followed, including the time of covering the wounds. A. D. 1580, at 1851 years of age occurred another fire, causing a burn on the trunk two feet wide which took fifty-six years to cover with new tissue. Two hundred and seventeen years of growth followed this burn. A. D. 1727, when the tree was 2,088 years old, a tremendous fire attacked it burning a great scar eighteen feet wide. One hundred and three years enabled the tree to reduce the exposed area of the burn to about fourteen feet in width."

It was not many years ago that it was found by the scientists that a great tree which had been felled for commercial purposes had begun its existence five hundred and twenty-five years before Christ.

Great Services Unrecognized.

Secretary of War Weeks, in a report made at San Diego, Cal., said:

"I wish it were possible for the War department to promote one, two or three officers each year for outstanding conspicuous service."

The secretary has no illusions. He probably knows, as other officials of government know, and as the victims of indifference know, that so long as present day propaganda against the army and navy and against the safety of the country is allowed to continue unchecked and almost unchallenged, no man who dared all to do his duty can hope for any recognition.

Army officers and navy officers say nothing about these things. Those who have earned recognition and never have been given it necessarily are silent. Their comrades, who know what the deserving have done, cannot speak publicly because their words would be construed as criticism of congress and would subject them to punishment for daring, American citizen-like, to speak their minds.

There are on the retired list today army officers who commanded armies during the World war. Their rank as army commanders should have been that of general, but they were denied while on active service the right to a rank which all other countries gave to army chieftains. When these officers retired from active service, having reached the age limit, congress denied to them the additional grade on the retired list which it had granted to every retiring officer who had seen service in other wars.

Pershing the One Exception.

The only American soldier who came out of the World war with a fixed rank higher than that of a major general is John J. Pershing. Bullard and Liggett, who were lieutenant generals temporarily during the conflict, are today major generals, one retired and the other still active.

Joseph T. Dickman, accounted by some the greatest soldier which we sent to France, is today on the retired list as a major general. He commanded successfully a division, a corps, and an army, and commanded them all while holding the rank of major general, for although his achievements won him recognition and promotion of command, he was denied the promotion in rank. So it was that as a major general he commanded an army, and when the day came for his retirement congress declined to give to him an additional grade.

On the retired list today is Col. Wilds P. Richardson, who commanded the American troops at Archangel, Russia, where his army superiors said he performed one of the great achievements of the war. He was specially selected for this duty because of his knowledge of northern peoples. His campaign, his superiors say, was brilliant. In fact it was one that saved a situation. Congress declined to make Richardson a brigadier general on his retirement although he had held that rank during the World war. Only one or two instances have been given of neglect of the American people to recognize even in a small way the service which devoted men rendered them. To men who know the circumstances in these cases the neglect seems nothing short of gross.

Congress Listens to Propagandists.

Responsibility for this refusal of congress to give the slightest recognition to army men who have won it probably is directly attributable to the activities throughout the country of various organizations which are striving to put the United States into a complete state of disarmament. Certain propagandists seemingly hate not only the army and navy but the individual men thereof. It seemingly is a fact that congress has paid closer attention to the campaigning activities of these half Russian societies than it has to any plea which has been made to it by the voice of sturdy patriotism.

Years ago Theodore Roosevelt, while president, called attention to the fact that it virtually was impossible for the commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States to reward by proper promotion the high deed of any officer of either service. At that time President Roosevelt wanted to promote Capt. John J. Pershing to a majority. Under the law he could not do it. Therefore, he did the only thing that he could do in recognition of Pershing's service in the Philippines. He made him a brigadier general, promoting him over the heads of hundreds of his fellow officers. This president at that time could name anybody he chose to general rank. This was his sole authority in the matter of promotion.

Survivors of Stone Age.

Considering that Australia is the only part of the world where a race of the genuine Stone age can be studied, it is impossible to help agreeing with Sir Baldwin Spencer, the first living authority on the aborigines, that it is a thousand pities the investigation was not begun earlier of the manners and customs, as he told the members of the Australasian Association for the Advancement of Science at its recent meeting at Wellington, had governments and savans, and the general public interested themselves in the matter before the race went so far as they have done on the road to extinction.—Adelaide Chronicle.

His Holy Spanking.

When I was a small boy mother took me out for a walk and I insisted on going up and down the post office steps. I would not obey her. She looked for a place to give me a good spanking. Seeing a church door open, she marched me in there and had administered a good sound spanking in one of the pews before she discovered that people were praying there.—Exchange.

SAVED HER LIFE, SAYS MRS. ROWE

No One Thought She Would Live Long, but Tanlac Restored Perfect Health—Gained 34 Lbs.

Another great achievement is added to the remarkable Tanlac record. Mrs. George Rowe, highly esteemed resident of 610 South High St., Albuquerque, N. M.

"My present good health, if not my life, is due to Tanlac, and so far as I'm concerned, I firmly believe the medicine did save my life. About eight years ago, after the birth of my baby, I was completely broken down in health. I was little more than skin and bones and was so weak I couldn't do any of my housework. I had no appetite at all, was so nervous I couldn't sleep, and felt blue and despondent all the time. Words simply cannot describe the condition I was in, and no one thought I would live very long.

"Well, I really don't believe I would be here today were it not for Tanlac. Shortly after I started taking it my appetite improved, I was feeling stronger, so I kept on taking it until all my strength and energy returned and my health was completely restored. I gained thirty-four pounds in weight and have felt like a new person ever since."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

WHY TAKE LAXATIVES?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature itself.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and has secure regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

As Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, it cannot gripe and, like purgative, it is harmless and pleasant. Nujol is used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

GRAZING REGULATION REVISION TO BE URGED

Committee Representing Live Stock Growers to Confer With Officials

Denver.—The committee of six members appointed at Ogden, Utah, last March to represent the live stock growers of thirteen western states at a conference with the government forestry service will meet at the Brown Palace hotel on June 23, two days before the session with the foresters. The purpose of this advance meeting is to allow anyone who has complaints or suggestions to make in regard to the grazing regulations in the national forest reserve to present his case. This will put into the hands of the committee the necessary information with which to meet the government officials two days later.

The conference on June 25 will be for the purpose of revising the manual that regulates the grazing of sheep and cattle in the public forests. This original manual, which was formulated exclusively by the government about twenty years ago, never has been revised, and there have been many changes in conditions since then, besides certain weaknesses in the old manual that have been discovered by experience, that make a revision imperative. In carrying out this work the stockmen have been allowed a representation, to present their angles of the grazing question, and the cattle and sheep drovers as well as the wool growers, acting through their various state organizations, selected the committee of six.

The members of this committee are: Richard Dillon, chairman, Sedalia, Colo.; Fern S. Hildreth of Arizona and Vernon Metcalf of Nevada, representing the cattle drovers, and F. R. Marshall of Utah, Worth Lee of Idaho and M. B. Otero of New Mexico, representing the sheep and wool growers.

All persons who have anything of interest to say on the grazing question should communicate with Chairman Dillon at Sedalia or the Colorado Stockgrowers' Association, Live Stock Exchange building, Denver, and should be prepared to meet the committee at the Brown Palace hotel on June 23.

Dies from Blow of Pitched Ball

St. Louis.—The Arlingtons won their ball game from the Mount Pleasant, 3 to 2, but it cost the life of Charles Olenander, 14, second baseman for the victors. He died several hours later from a fractured skull.

Tram Slides Down Hill

New York.—A runaway trolley car killed 12-year-old Margaret McLaughlin and injured three other persons when it rolled backward to the foot of a hill at 125th street and Amsterdam avenue and crashed into a five-story tenement house. The car and lower floors of the building were wrecked. The child was playing in the street when the car struck her. Slippery rails caused by a heavy rain were believed to have caused the accident. The car had just reached the top of the hill when it started its backward slide.

Dr. Baker
the well-known specialist on refraction of the Eye, will be at COMMERCIAL HOTEL, PATAGONIA Monday, June 18th

The same critical examination for the purpose of fitting glasses taught and recommended by the highest acknowledged authorities.

CHILDREN'S EYES
The extreme careful attention given children's eyes that we give each and every case that comes under our care.

Children Welcome
LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA.

AN HOTEL reflecting the comfort of competence, the solidity of substance, the good taste of refinement. Attractive for women alone and to the "whole family." Service, not unlike a well-appointed, generously conducted home, without ostentation. Safely patronized and recommended. Commercial-residential.

Location central and convenient. Modern European. Rates reasonable. GARAGE ADJACENT. Patronage Appreciated. You've tried the rest. No wry the "BEST!" William BEST Clark, Proprietor.

"BRAIN STORMS"
and joy of all joys, Tom Stines is to deliver one of his clever little toasts to the ladies.
... will be enjoyed in the dining room at the bank upon the ... clock on June 31st.
... of overworked gonns ... trying to make this affair a howling success is composed of ranking members of the I O U Club and they wish to state that they must know in advance how many will attend and that notice must be accompanied by the price of plates required. (Only checks on the local bank accepted.) They also state that there will be no plates set at the last minute for those who are "in" because they have nothing else to do.
All together no for the big feed. What are you doing June 31st? Don't begrudge her the time of her life; we want to meet her.
(Signed) The Terrible Four.
P. S.—Mr. Beechler says he will come if someone will mind the kids. Don't push; take your time; watch your step; keep in line.

AROUND ABOUT TOWN
Chester—Byrket, do you understand the law of compensation?
Byrket—No; what is it?
Chester—It's like this: When an arm is lost he is twice as strong in the other, or when he loses the sight of one eye he can see twice as far with the other one. Have you never noticed that, Byrket?
No; I've never noticed that, Chester; but I have noticed that when a man has one leg shorter than the other that the other is almost always a little longer.
Bud was puzzled over the word "phenomena." His father's explanation was: "Do you see that cow, Bud? Now, that is not a phenomena. Might be if she lived until July. Do you see that eagle? Well, that is no phenomena. Do you see that bird? That is no phenomena. But if that cow should sit on that eagle and sing like that bird that would be a phenomena."

Fessler says: There is only truth for the deluded mortal who tries to work on day schedule and at the same time cover the bright lights with the night shift. He winds up as the principal attraction at a day-after-tomorrow where the of his old-time "You" wear white gloves.

Tom says: It is the steady pull of all together that wins. Let's try it.
Mrs. Even—"Mrs. Fraser, how did that naughty boy of yours hurt himself?"
Mrs. Fraser—"That good little boy of yours hit him on the head with a brick."

Ye gods, whispered Doc; she has eyes fit for a Venus. Yes, said Buck, and feet fit for a mud-turtle.
These mining engineers running around here sure know a lot, says Pat Downey, if the contents of 1,642,349 of their heads were placed in an iron kettle and boiled down there would be left about a half pound of calves' hoof jelly.

It is reported that Wesley Montgomery has taken his examination as a prescription pharmacist and passed with very high honors.
Chester Brodine is circulating a petition asking that burros be muzzled. It appears that these vicious animals have a ravenous appetite for straw bales and seat cushions.

Mr. Biggs—"Ralph, tonight give the most hay to the cow that gives the most milk."
Ralph—"Then, daddy, I'll have to give that hay to the pump."
The talk about town is that Mrs. Ginhoad is contemplating spending the warm weather in Randsburg, Cal. When asked to confirm the rumor, she said that it must be so, as all she had left to spend was warm weather.

The editors of your paper are puzzled over who is the "Patagonian Steve," as mentioned in the last Patagonian. Perhaps it was entirely a typographical error, and the correct copy read "Stewed Patagonians."

FLAG DAY
One hundred and forty-six years ago yesterday (June 14) the Continental Congress of the United States ordained that a banner of thirteen stars, alternating red and white, and white stars on a field of blue, should be the national emblem. Since that time the flag has been carried by our forefathers and several generations in none of which were the stars and stripes of years have not dimmed the glory of the

A Queen of Spain once burned up because no noble was there to open the door for her. That she could open the door herself was a thought that never occurred to her.
The self-reliance of American women is a universally recognized trait, and they know what they want—and get it.
One of the chief things a housewife wants when shopping is good values at low prices. She finds both in our merchandise, so she buys here. Self-reliant women are buying at our 371 Stores.
Knowing that carrying her own parcels eliminates delivery costs, which, in turn, means lower prices, she is perfectly ready to do her own delivering. More self-reliance.

THE LARGEST CHAIN DEPARTMENT STORE ORGANIZATION IN THE WORLD

gleaming red, the immaculate white and the deep blue of the field.
It was not until 1898 that the Congress of National Patriotic Societies called for the commemoration of June 14 as Flag Day, when from every home and from every public park and building the colors "born of conflict" should be flown in the winds.
The red is for the fires of freedom, lit so long ago still light our way.
The white is memory of the heroes who made us what we are today.
The blue is for the noblest of heroes, leading every bill and every plan and every star on the stars and stripes. That's the story of our flag.
Why is it that we look at you when they are all so busy working for a boy's head always on the ground end.
