ECONOMY CAMPAIGN

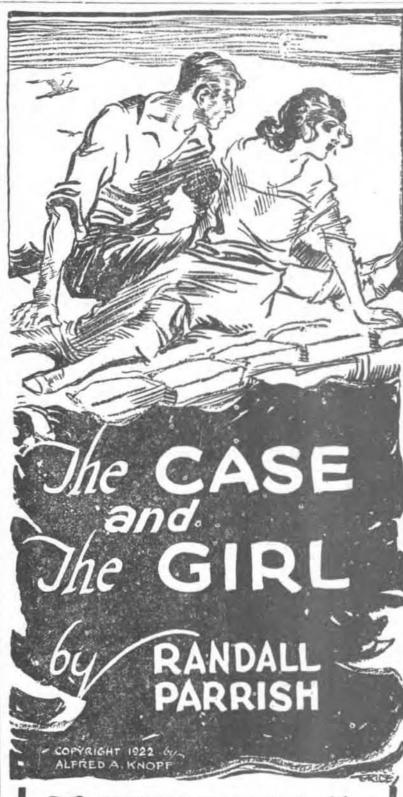

The meeting Tuesday of the county board of supervisors was productive of most drastic campaign of economy. The sheriff's office was the chief point of attack in the campaign, two rangers and one deputy being dropped from the is how he did it: new personnel of the staff. The office has but one outside man besides the sheriff himself, the upper part of the county being left without an officer.

Other county departments suffered, omize. The county engineer was dropped from the payroll, the deputies formerly paid $125 per month were limited to $62.50, the only departments to escape the cut were the treasurer's office and the assessor's force.

It is more than likely that with the new assessment roll the valuation of the county's property under the recent cut in values will reduce Santa Cruz to a fourth-grade county, which will also earry with it a cut in salaries for all county officials.

The immunity of Great Britain from earthquakes is due to its geographical situation. It lies at least 1,000 miles north of the nearest point of the great earthquake "belt," which selsmologists have located and traced right round the globe. The Case and The Girl By Randall Parrish

ADVENTURE CALLS

"So glad to learn you could be out, Judge," she said, the least perceptible hesitancy in her voice. "Permit me to present Judge Cable of the Supreme Court; Captain West, my fiance!"

Surprising to Captain West? Well, rather, inasmuch as it was the first he had heard of it. A young engineer, he had returned from the war with his thirst for adventure still strong. Answering an advertisement for a young man willing to engage in a service of danger he is employed by a handsome young woman, Natalie Coolidge, who takes him to a dinner party and announces her engagement. And thereafter thrills follow fast. It appears that Natalie fears an uncle is plotting to secure her property. Anyway, this uncle is murdered In a day or two-which adds to the mysteries which quickly accumulate. And not the least invsterious is the behavior of the heroine, who seems to have a dual personality.

It's not necessary to go farther with the plot. For this is one of Randall Parrish's action stories -action, action, action! That's all that need be said. His first novel was published in 1904 and he's been writing two a year ever since. And they sell as fast as he can write them. The author was born in 1858 in Illinois, and practiced law in Wichita, Kan., 1879-83. Then he prospected for two years in Arizona and New Mexico, Later he got Into the newspaper business in Denver, Omaha, Chicago and other cities. Then he found himself as a writer of stirring tales.

CHAPTER I

The Lady in the Limousine.

West, still attired in khaki uniform, but wearing the red chevron of honorable discharge on his left sleeve, sat in the club writing room, his feet extract some entertainment from the evening paper. The news was not particularly interesting, however, and It would soon be time for him to serlously contemplate the procuring of sultable employment, the young man ran his eyes down the columns devoted Half way down the first column, under the head of "miscellaneous," be paused and read a paragraph with some interest; then read it over again, emitting a soft whistle between his turned the sheet about rather idly, and

"Well, by Jove!" he said to himself slowly, "That doesn't sound so bad, either; out of the ordinary, at least. Say, Thompson," and he turned to a tall young fellow busily writing at the adjoining desk, and shoved the Hart. This property has attracted a paper under his eyes, pointing at the paragraph which had attracted attention, with one finger, "What do you make out of that, old man?"

The other, rather sober-faced, and slow of speech, read the advertisement word by word, with no change of expression.

"Rot," he said solemnly. "Either a Joke, or some scheme on. Why? In-

"In a measure, yes. I've a good mind to answer, and take a chance." "You're a fool If you do, Matt," de cisively, and turning back to his writing. "That is some game being pulled off. Likely as not it means blackmail. Besides there is no ad-

"That's one thing I like about it," retorted the other; "They are in earnest, and taking no chances of having their purpose guessed at. By Jove, don't see how any one can get in bad merely by finding out what it all means."

"Well, do as you please; you would anyhow. Only you have my advice.' West rend the Item again. He had been eighteen months in France, and his discharge from the army had left him bored and dissatisfied with the dull routine of civil life. He dreaded to get back into the harness of a oving cup made of pure copper and prosate existence; even his profession as a civil engineer had someway lost its charm. He had tasted the joy of adventure, the thrill of danger, and it was still alluring. This advertisement promised a mystery which strangely attracted his imagination.

> "Wanted: Young man of education and daring for service involving some personal peril. Good pay, and unusual reward if successful. May have to leave city. Purpose disclosed only in personal interview."

As Thompson had pointed out, this was not signed, nor any address given West crossed over to an unoccupied wording several times, and finally making a clean copy. The answer read:

To Advertiser: Am 26; late captain of Engineers; university graduate, adventurous disposition. Would be glad to consider your proposition. Address, Box 57, University club."

He placed this in an envelope, called a club messenger, and, handing the boy a sum of money, sent him over to the newspaper office.

Two days elapsed before an answer appeared in his box; a small envelope, addressed in a lady's handwriting apparently, and mailed from one of the sub-postoffices. The brief note read: "Box 57, University club.

"Your answer to advertisement makes a good impression, and I am willing to put you to the further test of a personal meeting. If you are in earnest in this matter, and quite prepared to assume the necessary risk, you will be at the northwest corner of Spaulding park at 5:30 tomorrow afternoon. Do not come in uniform, but it will be well to bring evening clothes in a bag. Be sure of yourself, and be prompt.

"Very truly yours, "The Advertiser."

West read this over, again and again, smoking furtously, and endeav oring to weigh each word. The letter sounded honest and sincere; the writer evidently had a purpose in view, and was selecting an agent with great care and secrecy. No hint as to what that object was would be revealed blindly-he must be tried in every way first; thoroughly tested as to both character and courage. Undoubtedly steps had already been taken to do this. The delay in reply would have afforded opportunity for some investigation, as his address would give the necessary clue to his identity. The request for evening clothes, however, rather reassured him; evidently his first plunge into this mystery was not to occur in any stratum of low society; no vast amount of personal danger could be involved in such preliminaries. The advertiser was a woman! This fact also stimulated his imagination, and rendered him the more eager. By Jove! he would see the thing through!

His decision was reached. He would go, but would make every effort to protect himself against any possible treachery. He had a room at the club, and wrote a letter or two before proceeding to dress, arranging for their personal delivery in case he falled to return at a designated time; enrefully examined his service revolve and deposited it in the pocket of the business suit he decided to wear. Satisfied with these arrangements, he dressed rapidly, and then packed his bag, bearing it in his hand as he departed in ample time for the point of rendezvous. A cab took him to the place designated, and he found himself alone in a rather desolate spot, with which he was in no way familiar. He had no knowledge of how he was to be approached, or identified, but his being requested to bring a bag containing evening clothes, somehow suggested riding, rather than walking, and consequently his eyes followed more or less intently the constant stream of automobiles.

He grew restless and doubtful as the moments slipped past. Then suddenly, without the slightest warning, a black limousine whirled in alongship the curb, and came to a stop immediately in front of where he waited. The chauffeur, dressed in plain dark livery, stepped out, and threw open the rear door, without asking so much as a question. Except that the fellow stood there, looking directly toward him, his fingers on the latch, expectantly, West would not have known that he was wanted. Yet it was all so obvious he could not question. Silently be picked up his bag, and stepped forward. He saw no one within, but firm in the bellet that the chauffeur must have his orders, he entered blindly, the door closing instantly behind him. The curtains were drawn, the interior gloomy and indistinct, and the driver had resumed his seat, and started the motor, before West realized that he was not alone. In one corner of the wide back sent, drawn back from any possible observation from without, sat

At first glance he could only barely distinguish the outlines of her figure, dimly discernible against the dark background of the upholstery, but, as his eyes accustomed themselves to the faint light, her features also hecame dimly visible-enough so, at least, to convince him that she was young. Neither spoke for some moments, while the automobile gathered speed, and West had an uncomfortable feeling that the lady was watching him with great intentness. He could only quietly await her explanation of this strange situation. The delay was not a long one. She laughed, nervously perhaps, yet with a sense of humor at the awkward position.

"Quite melodramatic, is it not. Captain West?" she asked, in a decidedly desk, and wrote a reply, changing the | pleasant voice. "I trust it appeals | be well under these circumstances for thoroughly to that disposition for adventure of which you wrote,'

> "Nothing more could be desired, I am sure," he confessed, surprised at her tone, and glancing toward her, "I certainly am left completely in the dark, unable even to clearly distinguish my mysterious companion to dventure.

"And there really is no longer any cension for such concealment." She Ifted the heavy curtain beside her, permitting the grey light to rest upon her face. "I preferred not to be seen at the park for obvious reasons; but here, alone with you, such precaution is quite unnecessary. We are to be cither friends or enemies, so frankness > is the best course." He saw the face of a young woman if twenty-four, or five, with dark eyes and hair, her cheeks flushed with bealth and excitement, her lips smillog. It was a face of unusual attractiveness, not regular, perhaps, in any of its features, yet filled with character, and glowing with life. He liked the girl, and believed in her.

"I can only thank you," he said, rather lamely, "Although I do not understand now how we could ever become enemies. Surely, that is not a "Oh, no, it is far too true. You have ect to learn what I require. Yet that can very nicely said. I take it to mean your first impression of me is not unfavorable?"

She laughed again softly, her eyes still on his face. "Really, I had not anticipated such sincere compliment. No doubt you earned these delightful speeches in France," she answered, a very faint tinge of sareasm in the words. "My name! Why, of course, you do not know what it is. Well, really I am not altogether certain that I do, either. We will therefore compromise on the one I am known by, which will be safer. Allow me, Captain West, to present to you Miss Natalie Coolidge."

She held out frankly a neatly gloved hand, which he as instantly took, and retained in his own, the girl making no immediate effort to withdraw it. "This is very kind of you, Miss Coolidge," he acknowledged, adapting himself to her present mood, "But it ems there is no necessity for me to present myself. Apparently my dentity is already known."

"Otherwise you would not be among those present," she admitted

"Then, I judge you have not acsepted me blindly?"

"No, I love not," earnestly, and now releasing her hand, "I do not think we ever really know any one except through personal intercourse; but I do know who you are, and something of what your life thus far has been

She smiled, again quits at her ease, "The box number at the club was mply sufficient. I have friends there; once possessed of your name and army rank, the department records at Washington furnished all further information. So you perceive, Captain, I am not altogether reckless. Are you Interested in learning what I know?"

"I am; will you tell me?"

"Willingly," and she checked the points off on her gloved fingers. "You are Matthew West, the only son of Judge Robert Peel West, of Atlanta, Georgia. Your mother, who was of the well-known Bullock family, died when you were about fifteen, and her widowed sister has since been the housekeeper. You are a graduate of the University of Virginia, being fourth In your class in scholarship. Your engineering course was completed in Massachusetts, and you later became connected with the Wynni Contracting company, of Chicago, You were here, however, only a very brief time, making but few acquaintances, when the war broke out. You immediately entered the first officers" training school at Fort Sheridan, gradunting with the rank of first lieutenant, and were assigned to a regiment of engineers, among the earliest to sail for France. While there you were wounded twice, and cited once for special gallantry in the rescue of a seriously injured private. Your last wound enused your return to the United States on a special mission, and also won you the rank of captain. Since then you have been honorably discharged, but have made no effort to resume professional work, You are twenty-six, and numeried. Is there anything else you care to

"No, it did not wholly satisfy, but it looked promising. You were evidently courageous, and a gentleman. These qualities were essential; whether in other respects you measured up to my purpose, could only be ascertained through a personal interview. There was no other way." "And now?" he persisted.

"Still encouraging, I must admit, although the test is not yet complete. However, we are now approaching the end of our journey. Before we turn in I am going to ask a favor of youculi me Natulie."

"Natalle; that will be easy." "And also forgive me if I fall in niways addressing you formally as Captuin West. I presume your friends

"Then I claim also the privilege," She bewildered him, left him in wonderment as to what she would do next, but there was scarcely time in which to answer before the speeding Ilmousine turned abruptly into a private driveway, curving gracefully to the front of a rather imposing atone mansion, set well buck from the road.
