NATIONAL GAME CONFERENCE STRESSES ROOSEVELT'S AIMS

NEW YORK.—President Roosevelt's strong ideas for game protection will form the keynote of the Eleventh National Game Conference at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria, New York, December 8th and 9th.

President Roosevelt whose constructive ideas on game protection will form the keynote of the Eleventh National Game Conference Dec. 8th and 9th.

This is in line with Roosevelt's expressed wish that refuges, breeding, feeding and resting grounds should be established to preserve and increase the nation's game supply.

So important to sportsmen is this Eleventh National Game Conference that the railroads of the country have granted to the members of the American Game Protective Association and their families attending the conference a 25% fare reduction.

This reduction is granted to members and their families only, and upon condition that at least two hundred and fifty of those attending the conference shall seal themselves off between certain definite dates.

Complete information may be had by writing to the American Game Protective Association, Woolworth Bldg., New York City.

The association, already numbering thousands of those interested in the country's wild life, expects, because of the intense interest in this conference and the fare reductions limited to members, greatly to increase its membership among sportsmen who, while having the interests of game protection at heart, have never taken a definite part in the work of the association.

According to experts the country is in dire need of game refuges, breeding, feeding and resting grounds where game may increase in spite of the growth in population and the better transportation facilities for sportsmen. One well-known sportsman thus expressed it: "Too many people, unfamiliar with the subject, think that the country's game is doomed."

T. R., whose ideas will find expression at the conference, was an optimist on the future of game in America. But he was not the sort of optimist who sits down, smiles, and thinks everything is lovely.

He knew constructive measures were necessary and, as chairman of the Advisory Committee of the American Game Protective Association, he strove, heart and soul, with all his unbounded enthusiasm, for constructive measures to increase and protect the country's game.

"Sportsmen and conservationists of America realize that now is a critical time in the contest for preservation of wild life, especially waterfowl, the fate of migratory waterfowl is in the hands of Congress and the conference will express the will of the nation as to measures pending before that body and which are vitally necessary to an effective permanent policy. It will be the most important gathering of conservationists and sportsmen ever held in America."

ARIZONANS WANT ROADRUNNER EXTERMINATED

Phoenix.—The roadrunner (or chaparral cock, is a bird that has enjoyed protection in Arizona, due to the fanciful story of old that it kills rattlesnakes by building around them a corral of cholla cactus burrs.

The tale is declared a myth and in its stead is offered the charge that the bird, a species of cuckoo, is a robber of quail eggs and a destroyer of young quail.

Evidence to this effect has come from C. B. Bernatzke of Blythe, and J. P. Stroekner of Quartzsite, who give instances wherein a dozen young quail at a time have been found dead, slain by the sharp bill of a roadrunner.

In the same connection, flockmasters are demanding the destruction of the golden eagle, which is declared to be killing antelope fawns in northern Arizona and to be carrying off young lambs, as well as young mountain sheep.

The porcupine, generally considered inoffensive, now is declared a destroyer of forests, government tests showing that he delights in girdling young pine shoots.

BENSON EXPECTS OIL GUSHER WHEN DRILL REACHES DEPTH

Douglas.—Visitors from Douglas who inspected the operations in the Benson oil field recently found the drilling rig eight miles out of Benson on the Tucson road steadily driving its steel shaft down to levels where, it is expected, oil may be found.

It was said at the well that when operations were resumed, the drill had reached approximately 400. Since then another 100 feet of hole has been driven.

The rig is said to be one of the largest used in the Oklahoma fields.

All equipment is in first class condition and at the rate the drill is going down it should pass the 1,000-foot level within the next two weeks.

Operations are being conducted under the direction of Mr. Metcalf, of Ardmore, Okla. He is said to have driven oil wells in the Oklahoma fields and has expressed the opinion that he will bring in the Benson well as a gusher.

It is said in Benson that another crew of drillers is to be brought from Oklahoma in the next few weeks and a start is to be made at another well near Benson on a second well.

It is understood that the men producing the project have rights on 30,000 acres of land that were selected by a Texas oil operator as most likely to hold an oil bearing stratum.

Estimate of the depths the well will be sunk to reach oil are not available, but the rig and equipment are such that a 4,000 or 5,000-foot level can be reached, according to those who seem to know.

The people at Benson are enthusiastic over the prospects of the well coming in a gusher and business is moving at a more rapid pace as a result than it has for many months.

Exports from Texas, Oklahoma and California have gone over the ground and all have given as their opinion that there is a good probability that oil will be found.

DELIVERY OF CHRISTMAS MAIL BY EARLY POSTING

Washington, D. C., Dec. 5.—Last year, through the generous co-operation of the press, the movies and other advertising mediums, Christmas mailers were induced to dispatch their Yuletide presents earlier in the month than ever before in the history of the institution of gift-exchanging in the holiday season.

As a result, the spectacle of the last-minute rush of former years, with its attendant heartbreaking labor on the part of worried and nerve-worn store clerks and postal employees, was avoided.

This year Postmaster General Newell and First Assistant Postmaster General John H. Bartlett have determined to make an even better record and to banish for all time the suffering undergone in past years by those engaged in the sale or transportation of gifts.

They hope to make "Shop Early" and "Mail Early" a habit with like American people.

Mailing early does not mean December 1 or before, but it everyone could get their holiday tokens in the mail between December 10 and December 20, the postoffice could not ask more.

Particular attention this year will be paid to greeting cards. Despite the success last year, it was noted that the last-minute mail consisted largely of cards. Possibly many of them were returned greetings to friends, heard from on a previous mail, but overlooked on the urgent Christmas list.

Unlike parcels and letters containing money orders, cards, of course, cannot well be mailed "Do Not Open Until Christmas." Therefore, it is possible that the many mailers held them until the last to insure delivery on Christmas Eve.

This class of mailers this year, however, may find their cards undelivered until after Christmas Day.

Believing that the energies of postal employees should not be sapped to the last degree for any avoidable reason, and intent upon securing for them the same Christmas privileges enjoyed by other Postmaster General Newell asks the hearty co-operation of the public.

The last minute, or zero hour, has been moved up so that all postal employees may eat their Christmas dinners at home. Rural carriers will deliver no mail at all on Christmas day and clerks and carriers in the city offices will stop work promptly at noon.

College Women Seeking Most Unusual Profession

NEW YORK.—A new profession practiced almost exclusively by college women of New York has been added to the many fields in which women have proven their presentance.

It is called the profession of "The Obliging Relative" and its successful practice requires the most diverse knowledge, the greatest adaptability and the quickest thinking.

For "The Obliging Relative" must, without notice meet and satisfy the needs of every type of her out-of-town sisters, adopt her money standards to the flat, medium or bulging purse at a moment's notice; be a chaperone, an authority on food, styles, interior decoration, music, babies, the drama, elementary banking and a host of other related and unrelated subjects.

In fact versatility must be the middle name of one who would be successful as an "Obliging Relative." Her duties can best be grasped from an illustration:

Aunt Martha decides to visit New York and her obliging relatives there are called away and cannot meet her or help her to shop easily and wisely, to see the right plays, hear the best music the city is then offering, protect her from overcharging and fraud, select a hotel of just the proper tone to suit, at once, her comfort and her purse.

Up to a short time ago Aunt Martha, being unfamiliar with New York, would have had to give up or at least postpone her visit. Now, however, the new "Obliging Relative" is called in. She is a college woman who knows the city as well as her own bedroom; who is completely at home in its bewildering vastness and noise, its intricate maze of shops, amusements and dancers. She knows just which articles are best and at just which stores. She knows the styles. The hotels for her have been chosen by her quality, price and standards as well. Best of all, she knows the dangers of the city. She guards her now visiting "Relative" from everything from traffic dangers, overcharging and fraud, to indigestion or a cold in the head. With porters and taxi drivers she has the lefty firmness of a Cato. She makes the city visit a delightful, personally conducted tour.

Or, if pretty little Susan comes to town, she guards her from every lawyer, chapman her, shops for her, makes her visit to the city one long vista of halcyon days.

The profession of "Obliging Relative" was organized by the Holmes Electric Protective Company, the famous organization which protects the great banks and the palatial Fifth and Park Avenue residences of New York. The helplessness of many out-of-town women, unfamiliar with the city, was no new story to them. They knew its results from mere clamor for robbery and fatal accidents.

And they chose New York college women for the service which was demanded by the great bank, religious organizations and universities. To make safe, economical and pleasant the New York visit of the out-of-town woman. And as ladies Aunt Martha or pretty little Susan were approached and met by a guide, guard, chaperone and friend. The guide takes the magic lamp of Aladdin; a most attractive modern genie appears and with no more fuss than the usual procedure, leads her to her destination.

68TH CONGRESS RECONVENES FOR FINAL SESSION; CALM REIGNS

Washington, Dec. 4.—With an outward calm viewed generally as only the harbinger of storms that are to come, the 68th Congress reconvened today for its final session. It must give way next March 4 to the new congress, just elected.

The opening was brief and perfunctory. The senate was in session exactly 20 minutes and the house 55 minutes. The only departure from the usual opening routine was the adoption by the house of a resolution for congressional memorial service December 15 for Woodrow Wilson.

Each house adjourned until noon tomorrow out of respect to the memories of members who have died recently after it had adopted resolutions of regard.

Before that, new members had been sworn in and a joint committee had been named to advise President Coolidge that congress was in session. This committee did later in the day.

The executive informed the committee that tomorrow he would transmit the annual budget message and Wednesday would send in his own annual message on the state of the union. They will not be delivered in person, thus obviating the necessity for a joint session.

Facing the necessity of passing more than a dozen annual appropriation bills in three months, congress will get down to business tomorrow. The house will receive the interior department supply measure and begin its consideration Wednesday.

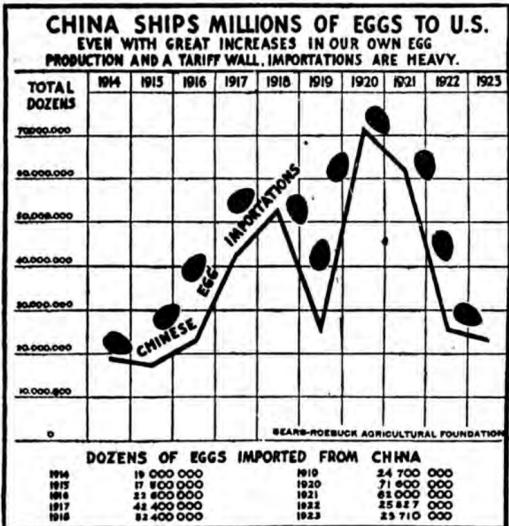

As fast as the appropriation measures are sent to the senate, others will be ready for house consideration. Not all of the time will be given to them, however, as house leaders plan from time to time to call up general legislation.

The program in the senate will be similar, although the Republican steering committee will not map out a definite program until late this week or early next week. Meanwhile the senate will give attention to Muscle Shoals legislation which comes up Wednesday under a special order. The present expectation is that the bill will be sent back to the agricultural committee.

While new legislation of importance will be proposed and take its place on the calendar with much that came over from the last session, there is little prospect of action on many matters other than the supply bills.

CHINA SHIPS MILLIONS OF EGGS TO U.S. EVEN WITH GREAT INCREASES IN OUR OWN EGG PRODUCTION AND A TARIFF WALL, IMPORTATIONS ARE HEAVY.

Chinese hens are laying millions of dozens of eggs to be beaten into American cakes and candies, in spite of the increased height of the tariff wall. Enough Chinese eggs are coming into the United States annually to furnish approximately one dozen for every family. But the Chinese hen does not compete with the American hen in supplying the eggs for the breakfast table.

Of the 23,710,000 dozen coming in last year practically all were in the dried or frozen form, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

The American hen cannot be accused of loafing on the job. In addition to furnishing all the eggs needed for American use, she produces a huge surplus for export. Last year this surplus amounted to 30,000,000 dozen—6,200,000 dozen more than were imported. The American exports were largely eggs in the shell, which sell at higher prices than the frozen and dried eggs from China.

In 1914, just a decade ago, there were 10,000,000 dozen Chinese eggs imported. By 1918 the imports totaled 32,400,000 dozen, and in 1920 the number had climbed to 71,000,000 dozen. In 1922, the year the tariff went into effect, only 23,827,000 dozen were imported. Last year the number was still further reduced, with only 23,710,000 dozen coming in.

Present prices are not especially attractive to imports. The demand is for strictly high quality eggs, the production of which for the home market the American hen monopolizes.

Egypt Likely to Lose Her Independence Because of the Murder of Stack.

EGYPTIAN nationalists who assassinated Gen. Sir Lee Stack, sirdar of the Egyptian army and governor general of the Sudan, brought about a crisis for their country and deprived it of much of the limited liberty that had been granted it by Great Britain.

- 1. Present ample apology for the crime. 2. Bring the criminals, whoever they are or whatever their age, to condign punishment. 3. Henceforth forbid and vigorously suppress all popular political demonstrations. 4. Pay forthwith to his majesty's government $500,000 ($2,300,000).

The two last demands were the hardest for the Egyptians to accept, and Premier Zagloul Pasha rejected them, yielding to the others. The indemnity was paid at once and the Egyptian troops began withdrawing from the Sudan.

There is a shortage of officers and men properly to man the ships. The enlisted personnel is limited to 80,000. Though officers are needed, congress has reduced the capacity of Annapolis to turn out officers by limiting appointments of cadets to three instead of five for each senator and representative.

It is costing $70,000,000 to scrap the ships we are obligated by the treaty to destroy. One of the vessels in this class was the partly completed dreadnaught Washington, the hull of which has just been sunk off the Virginia capes where it was made the target of ships and bombing planes.

Judith of Blue Lake Ranch

POKER FACE

SYNOPSIS.—Bud Lee, horse foreman of the Blue Lake ranch, convinced Bayne Trevors, manager, is deliberately wrecking the property owned by Judith Sanford, a young woman, her cousin, Pollock Hampton, and Timothy Gray, decides to throw up his job. Judith arrives and announces she has bought Gray's share in the ranch and will run it. She discharges Trevors, after shooting him twice in self-defense. The men on the ranch dislike taking orders from a girl, but by subduing a vicious horse and proving her thorough knowledge of ranch life, Judith wins the best of them over. Lee decides to stay, for a while at least. Judith becomes convinced that her veterinarian, Bill Crowley, is treacherous. She discharges him and gets Doc Tripp, her dead father's man. Pollock Hampton, part owner, comes to stay "for good." Trevors accepts Hampton's invitation to visit the ranch. Judith's messenger is held up and robbed of the monthly pay roll. Bud Lee goes to the city for more money, getting back safely with it, though his horse is killed under him. Both he and Judith see Trevors' hand in the crime. Hog cholera, hard to account for, breaks out on the ranch. Judith and Lee investigate the scene of the holdup. A cabin in a flower-planted clearing excites Judith's admiration. It is Lee's, though he does not say so. They are fired on from ambush, and Lee wounded. Answering the fire, they make for the cabin. Here they find Bill Crowley wounded. Dragging him into the building, they find he has the money taken from Judith's messenger. They are besieged in the cabin all night. Hampton arrives in time to drive the attackers off and captures "Shorty," who later escapes from the ranch. Judith tells Bud Lee her financial troubles and he says he'll stick.

Again she paused. Then, her eyes suddenly darkening, she told him what, after all, lay topmost in her mind.

"I have said that if I am given the chance, I can make a go of this. It's up to you, Bud Lee, to help see that I get that chance. An attempt was made to spread the lung-worm through my calves. Now it's the hogs. Do you know what the latest news is from the pens? There's cholera among them."

"Where did it come from?" he demanded. "Tripp's been keeping the health of our stock up right along."

"Where did it come from?" Judith repeated after him. "That's what I don't know. We've been so careful. But where did the calf sickness come from? Bayne Trevors imported it."

The inference was clear. He stared at her with frowning eyes.

"I don't see how he could have done it without Tripp's getting on to it. He hasn't bought any new hogs."

"But you understand now why I wanted to talk to you? If I win out in the thing I have taken on my shoulders, it is going to be by a close margin. I've thought it all out. We can't slip up in a single deal! But, it's up to you to give me a hand. To find out for yourself such things as where did the cholera come from! To see that nothing happens to your horses. To keep your two eyes wide open. To help me find the man, working with us right now, who is double-crossing us, who turned Shorty loose, who is watching a chance to do his knife act again somewhere else. Do you get me, Bud Lee?"

"I get you," replied Lee.

From without, gay voices, calling merrily, interrupted them. Lee went swiftly to the door while Judith finished her coffee and pulled her broad hat a little lower to throw its shadow in her eyes.

"Aho, there!" It was Pollock Hampton's voice. "We saw your horses and thought we'd catch you plenkling. Get a fire going, too! Say, that's bully. Come ahead, Marcia."

Marcia, a long riding-habit gathered in one hand, her cheeks flushed with her ride, her eyes bright as they rested upon the tall form in the doorway, came on behind Hampton. As the eyes of the two girls met, a sudden hot flush flooded Judith's cheeks. She hated herself for it; she wondered just how red her eyes were.

"Say, Judith," called Hampton. "I'm glad as the dickens we found you. Sawyer, the sheriff, telephoned just now. Said to tell you he'd located Quinlan. The funny part of it is that we made a mistake. It wasn't Quinlan at all that tried to shoot you and Bud up the other night."

"How's that?" demanded Lee. "Who says it wasn't?"

"Sawyer. Found Quinlan at a sheepman's place thirty or forty miles south of here. The sheepman swore Quinlan had been with him two weeks, was with him that night."

"A sheepman can lie," grumbled Lee. Judith's brief moment of confusion passed, she ushered Marcia into the cabin.

"I've been simply dying to see this place!" cried Marcia impetuously. "I told Pollock that it was a sure sign he didn't love me any more if he wouldn't bring me. And you and one of the men," her eyes on Judith's, "actually were in here, being shot at! Judith, dear, you are just the bravest girl in the world. If I'd been here I'd have simply died. I know I would."

Perhaps she would. At any rate she shuddered delightfully. She found a bullet-hole in the door and put a pink forefinger into it, giving a second little shiver.

"And now," she cried, going to a chair near the table, "do tell me all about that terrible, terrible night. But do you think we are quite safe here now, Mr. Lee?"

To herself Judith was saying: "Just the type to be Bud Lee's ideal lady!"

When they left the cabin, an hour later, Judith challenged Hampton to a ride and so left Marcia and Bud Lee to follow leisurely.

CHAPTER IX

Poker Face and a White Pigeon.

Mrs. Simpson had made a discovery. It was epoch-making. It was tremendous. Nothing short of that! So, at the very least, Mrs. Simpson was prepared to maintain stoutly in the face of possible ridicule.

One morning, very early, Mrs. Simpson, from the thick curtains of the living room, saw Jose "prowling around suspicious-like in the courtyard." She had sensed Jose's dislike, and thrilled at the sight. She always thrilled to Jose. The half-breed had gone allentily, "sneaking-like," by Judith's outer door. He had paused there, listening. He had gone back to the courtyard, hesitating, pretending that he was looking at the roses! Such a ruse on the part of so black-hearted a villain inspired in the scarcely breathing Mrs. Simpson a vast disgust. As if he could fool her like that, pottering around among the roses.

She, too, sought to move silently in his wake, though under her ample weight the veranda creaked audibly. Still, making less noise than usual, she peered through the lilies. She saw Jose at the base of the knoll, gazing swiftly toward the stables. She saw another man who, evidently, was a third of the "gang," and who, of course, had risen early to creep out of the men's bunkhouse before the others were awake, to meet Jose.

Screening herself behind the lilies, her heart throbbing as it had not done for many a long year, she watched.

Jose and the other man did not meet. Jose stopped. The two exchanged a few words too low for Mrs. Simpson to hear at that distance. But she made out that the other man had something in his hand, something white. A pigeon! For, suddenly released, it fluttered out of the man's hands and, circling high above Mrs. Simpson's head, flew to join the other birds cooing on the house-top!

"A carrier-pigeon!" gasped Mrs. Simpson. "Taking a message to the other cutthroats!"

From that instant there was no doubt in her mind. This fitted in too well with her many suspicions not to be the clew she had sought long and unceasingly.

Jose went on, the man from the bunk-house went back to it, and Mrs. Simpson fled to the house and hastened excitedly to Judith's room. Judith, rudely awakened, came hurriedly to her door in her dressing-gown, her eyelids heavy with sleep. When she heard, she laughed.

"You dear old goose!" cried Judith joyously. "I just love you to death. You put fresh interest into life!"

Despite Mrs. Simpson's earnest protests, Judith begged her and pushed her out again, saying that since she was awake now she would want her breakfast just as soon as she could get it. The housekeeper shook her head and retreated heavily.

"You've got to show some folks a man cutting their throats," she muttered to herself, "before they'll believe it. It is a carrier-pigeon and I know it. And that Black Spanish—ugh! He makes my blood curdle, just to look at him!"

"Carrier-pigeons!" laughed Judith, as she began a hurried dressing. "The dear old goose! And poor old Jose. She'll get something on him yet. I wonder why she—"

Suddenly Judith broke off. She was standing in front of a tall mirror, still only half-dressed. As she looked into the bright face of the smiling girl in the glass, a sudden change came. Pigeons! Doc Tripp had said that Trevors had got them; had remarked on the incongruity of a man like Trevors caring for little cooling birds. It was rather odd. Carrier-pigeons—carrier—

Judith whipped on her dressing gown again and, slipperless, her warm, bare feet pat-patting upon the cold surfaces of the polished floors, she ran to the office.

"Send Jose to me," she called to Mrs. Simpson. "In the office. I want him immediately."

A warm glow came into Mrs. Simpson's breast. With a big kitchen poker behind her broad back, she hastened out to call Jose, Judith, at the telephone, called Doc Tripp.

"Come up immediately," she commanded, "prepared to make a test for hog-cholera germs. Doc. No, I am not sure of anything, but I think I begin to see where it came from and how. Hurry, will you?"

To Jose she said abruptly:

"Go down to the men's quarters, Jose. Tell Carson and Lee to come right up." And as Jose turned to go, she added carelessly: "Seen any of the men yet?"

"SI, senorita," answered Jose. "Poky Face is up."

"Poker Face? All right, Jose. The others will be about, then."

Jose took little more time for his errand than for his elaborate bow. Carson and Lee came promptly, Carson a score of steps in advance, for Lee had tarried just long enough to wash his face and brush his hair; Carson had not.

"Tell me," demanded Judith, looking at her cattleman with intent eagerness, "what do you know about Poker Face?"

"One of the best men I've got," answered Carson heartily.

"Square, you think?"

"Yes. If I didn't think so he'd have been on his way a long time ago."

"How long has he been here? Who took him on?"

"Trevors hired him. About the same time he hired me."

Bud Lee, entering then, wondered what new thing was afoot. He glanced down and saw a bare foot peeping out from the hem of Judith's heavy red robe; he saw the hair tumbled in a glorious brown confusion over her shoulders. She was amazingly pretty this way.

"I want you two men to just stick around until I send for you again," said Judith, her eyes upon Carson alone, a little pink, naked foot suddenly withdrawn and tucked somewhere under her in her chair. "And keep your eyes on Poker Face. Keep him here, too, Carson. By the way, did any of you boys come in late last night? Or early his morning?"

"Why, no," answered Carson slowly. "An' yes. None of the regular boys, but a man from down the river, looking for a job. Heard we was short-handed. Blew in early. Just got in a few moments ago, Poker Face said."

Quick new interest flew into Judith's eyes.

"Keep him here, too!" she cried. "And I'll give you something to do while you wait; bring me all the pigeons you can get your hands on—white ones. Shoot them if you have to. And be careful you don't rub the dust off their feet."

Carson's eyes went swiftly to Bud Lee's. In Carson's mind there was a quick suspicion: The strain of life on the ranch was proving too much for the girl, after all.

Judith, reading his thought, turned up her nose at him and, seeking to keep her feet hidden as she walked by sagging a little at the knees, went to the door. Turning there, she saw in Lee's eye the hint of a smile, a very approving, admiring smile.

"Impudent!" she cried within herself. Looking very tiny, her knees bent so that her robe might sweep the floor, she continued with all possible dignity to the hallway. Once there, she ran for her room, her gown fluttering wildly about her. In her room, though she dressed hurriedly, she still took time for a long and critical examination of two rows of little pink toes.

"Just the same," she said to the flushed Judith in the mirror, "they are very nice feet—Bud Lee, I'd just like to make you squirm one of these days. You're altogether too—oh, seat, Judy. What's the matter with you?"

In less than half an hour Doc Tripp, showing every sign of a hurried jolter, robe into the courtyard. He came swiftly into the office, bag in hand, Judith, waiting impatiently for him, lost no words in telling him her suspicions. And Doc Tripp, hearing her out, swore softly and fluently, briefly asking her pardon when he had done. "I'm a Jackass," he said fervently. "I always knew I was a fool, but I didn't know that I was an idiot! Why, Judy, those d-d pigeons have been sailing all over the ranch, billing and cooing and picking up and toting cholera germs. Any fool can see it now. I might have known something was up when Trevors bought the infernal things. It's as simple as one, two, three. Now this other jasper, pretending to look for a job, brings on some more of them, so that the disease will spread the faster. Let me get my two hands on him, Judith. For the love of God, lead me to him."

But, instead, she led him to the dozen white pigeons which Carson brought in.

Tripp, all business again, improvised his laboratory, washed the pigeons' feet, made his test, with never another curse to tell of his progress. Judith left him and went into the courtyard, where, in a moment, Carson came to her.

"You better tell me what's up," he said sharply. "I know something is. That new guy that came in is darned hard to keep. Just as quick as I grab a shotgun an' go to shooting pigeons he moseys out to the corral an' starts saddling his horse."

"Don't let him go!"

Carson sniled a dry, mirthless smile. "Bud is looking out for him right now," he explained. "Don't worry none about his going before we say so. But I want to know what the play is."

Judith told him. Carson shook his head.

"Think of that?" he muttered. "Why, a man that would do a trick like that oughtn't to be let live two seconds. Only," and he wrinkled his brows at her, "where does Poker Face come in? We ain't got no call to suspicion his in on it."

"You watch him, just the same, Carson. We know that somebody here has been working against us. Some one who turned Shorty loose. Maybe it isn't Poker Face, and maybe it is."

"He plays a crib game like a sport an' a gentleman," muttered Carson. "He beat me seven games out'n nine last night!" And, still with that puzzled frown in his eyes, he went to watch Poker Face and the new man. To have one of the men for whom he was responsible suspected hurt old Carson sorely. And Poker Face, the man with whom he delighted to play a game of cards—it was almost as though Carson himself had come under suspicion.

"You're going to stick around just a little while, stranger," Bud Lee was saying quietly to a shifty-eyed man in the corral. "Just why, I don't know. Orders, you know."

"Orders be d-d," snarled the newcomer. "I go where I please and when I please."

He set a foot to his stirrups. A lean, muscular hand fell lightly upon his shoulder and he was jerked back promptly. Lee smiled at him. And the shifty-eyed man, though he protested sharply, remained where he was.

A thin, saturnine man whose lips never seemed to move, a man with dead-looking eyes into which no light of emotion ever came, watched them expressionlessly from where he stood with Carson. It was Poker Face.

"No," Poker Face answered, to a sharp question from the persistent Carson.

"Sure, are you?"

"Yes."

At last word came from Judith. Carson and Lee were to bring both of the suspected men to the house, Doc Tripp, wiping his hands on a towel, his sleeves up, bestowed upon the two of them a look of unutterable condescension and hatred.

"You low-lived skunks!" was his greeting to them.

"Easy, Doc," continued Judith from her desk. "That won't get us anywhere. Who are you?" she demanded of the man standing at Lee's side.

"Me?" demanded the man with an assumption of jauntness. "I'm Donley, Dick Donley, that's who I am!"

"When did you get here?"

"Four an hour ago."

"What did you come for?"

"Lookin' for a job."

"Did Carson say he hadn't anything for you?"

"No, he didn't. You're askin' a lot of questions, if you want to know," he aded with new surtness.

"Then why are you going in such a hurry? Don't you like to see anyone shoot pigeons?"

Donley stared back at her insolently. "Beesuss! I didn't fall for the crowd," he roared bluntly. "An', if you want to know, because I didn't banker for the job when I found out who was runnin' it."

"Meaning me? A girl? That it?"

"You guessed it."

"Who told you I was running the outfit?" she demanded suddenly, her eyes hard on him. "You must have found that out pretty soon! Who told you?"

Donley hesitated, his eyes running from her to the other faces about him, resting longest upon the expressionless, dead-looking eyes of Poker Face.

"What difference does it make who told me?" he snapped.

"Answer me," she commanded. "Who told you?"

"Well," said Donley, "he did. Poker Face told me."

"Who told you that his name was Poker Face?" Judith shot the question at him.

Donley moved a scuffling foot back and forth, stirring uneasily. That he was lying, no one there doubted; that he was but a poor liar after all was equally evident.

"You ain't got no call to keep me here," he said at last. "I ain't gona' to answer questions all day."

"You'll answer my questions if you don't want me to turn you over to Emmet Sawyer in Rocky Bend!" she told him coolly. "How did you know this man was called Poker Face? Did you know him before?"

Donley's eyes went again, furtive and swift, to Poker Face. But so did all other eyes. Poker Face gave no sign.

"Yes," answered Donley, taking refuge at last upon the solid basis of truth.

"Did you know this man?" Judith asked then of Poker Face, turning suddenly on him.

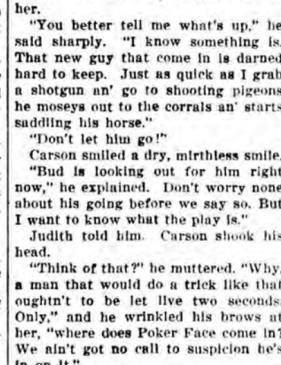

"No," said Poker Face.

Donley, having guessed wrong, flushed and dropped his head. Then he looked up defiantly and with a short, forced laugh.

"Suppose I know him or don't know him," he asked with his old insolence, "whose business is it?"

But Judith was giving her attention to Poker Face now.

"Where did you get that white

"Wouldn't Have Been Afraid, Not Bein' a Hawg!"

pigeon you turned loose this morning?" she asked crisply.

"Caught it," was the quiet answer.

"How?"

"With my han's."

"Why?"

"Just for fun."

"Did you know that pigeons could carry hog cholera on their feet?"

"No. But I wouldn't have been afraid, not bein' a hawg."

Donley blurted. Poker Face looked unconcerned.

"Take that man Donley into the hall," Judith said to Lee. "See if he has got any pigeon feathers sticking to him anywhere, inside his shirt, probably. If you need any help, say so."

Very gravely Bud Lee put a hand on Donley's shoulder.

"Come ahead, stranger," he said quietly.

"You go to h—!" cried Donley, springing away.

Bud Lee's hand was on him, and though he struggled and cursed and threatened he went with Lee into the hallway. Tripp, watching through the open door, smiled. Donley was on his back, Lee's knees on his chest.

"I'll tell you one thing, stranger," Bud Lee was saying to him softly, as his hand tore open Donley's shirt, "you open your dirty mouth to cuss just once more in Miss Sanford's presence and I'll ruin the looks of your face for you. Now lie still, will you?"

"Connect me with the Bagley ranch," Judith directed the Rocky Mountain operator. "That's right, isn't it, Doc?"

"Yes," answered Tripp. "That's the nearest case of cholera."

"Hello," said Judith when the connection had been established. "Mr. Bagley? This is Judith Sanford, Blue Lake ranch. I've got a case of hog cholera here, too. I want some information."

It looks as if Poker Face might know something about the hog cholera. Is he the traitor at the ranch?

Lost Talent

A great deal of talent is lost in the world for the want of a little courage. Every day sends to their graves a number of obscure men who have only remained in obscurity because their timidity has prevented them from making a first effort; and who, if they could have been induced to begin, would in all probability have gone great lengths in the career of fame. The fact is that, to do anything in this world worth doing, we must not stand back shrinking and thinking of the cold and danger, but jump in and scramble through as well as we can.—Rev. Sydney Smith.

FLAMES SWEEP BIG OIL FIELD

WATCHMAN DIES OF SHOCK AS $1,000,000 BLAZE SPREADS IN OIL CAMP

13 DERRICKS BURN

OIL FIELD NEAR LOS ANGELES IS SCENE OF DISASTROUS CONFLAGRATION

Los Angeles, Calif.—One death and property damage approaching $1,000,000 were caused by a fire that broke out in the Santa Fe Springs oil field southeast of here. Thirteen derricks with adjacent pump-houses and storage tanks were destroyed.

The fire originated in the boiler-house of a derrick belonging to the Bellevue Oil Syndicate, oil company officials said, with the breaking of a fuel oil feeder line. The fuel line immediately burst into flames at the break, and within a few minutes the blaze was spreading from the Bellevue property to adjacent derricks, which in that section of the field stand almost shoulder to shoulder.

The companies which suffered loss in the fire included, aside from the Bellevue syndicate, the Mohawk Oil Company, the United States Royalties Company and the McIntyre and Cox properties.

The man who lost his life was not burned to death, according to physicians, but died of heart disease, aggravated by the shock and excitement of the fire. He was J. Mills, 67 years old, a watchman, stationed close to the Bellevue derrick.

The oil field fire companies, assisted by firemen from all nearby communities, abandoned attempts to save the twelve derricks immediately surrounding the Bellevue and concentrated their efforts to preventing a disastrous spread of the flames to other sections of the field.

British Guns Guard Sudan

Cairo, Egypt.—Wherever Egypt turns its stare into the throat of a cannon. For the first time since agitation seized the country over Britain's reprisals for the murder of Sir Lee Stack, Sudanese governor general, artillery fire was used on the natives a few days ago. Big guns tore down a house in Khartoum, wherein the mutinous Sudanese troops who killed three doctors in attacking a hospital had barricaded themselves. Fourteen natives were killed and those of mutimers not killed were captured by the English troops. That was only one of the milder reports of violence that seeped through slashed telegraph wires from Khartoum.

Photos Transmitted by Radio

London.—What is claimed to have been the first demonstration in sending photographs by wireless from England to the United States was given at Radio House a few days ago. A new system developed by R. H. Ranger of the engineering department of the Radio Corporation of America, was used. There was no receiving demonstration because the new receiving apparatus has not yet reached here. The Ranger apparatus for sending arrived two weeks ago and has been tested successfully each night since. Sixteen photographs were transmitted in eight hours.

Nebraska Wins Stock Judging Awards

Chicago.—A team consisting of five men from the University of Nebraska was awarded first honors in the collegiate live stock judging contest of the twenty-fifth international live stock exposition. The Cornhuskers, in competition with teams from twenty-three other state universities and agricultural colleges throughout the United States and Canada in the world's premier stock show, came out with a final score for all classes of 4280 out of a possible 5000 points. The score was the composite of the five men for individual competition in horses, cattle, sheep and hogs.

Puzzle Wave Hits Princeton

Princeton, N. J.—The cross word puzzle wave has swept across faculty and students of Princeton University to the department of philosophy, where Prof. Warner Pitt has offered a prize to the student who can devise a puzzle capable of two separate solutions. Such a problem, Professor Pitt asserts, would have a great psychological value.

Congress Opens Short Session

Washington.—With the session between the regular and irregular Republican organizations still further widened, the Sixty-ninth Congress, which already has established a precedent as the best parliament in the nation's history, reconvened here for its short and final session. In the three months intervening between March 4 and the adjournment, the Congress will be called on to act through some extraordinary general legislation in addition to the usual appropriation bills and other legislative proposals of all classes.

Behind the Scenes

A certain actor-manager, notorious for his overbearing, blustering manner, was bullying his property man about some property bricks required in one of the scenes in a pantomime.

"Sir," belittled the tragedian, "do you think any sane man would be deceived by such a palpable imitation of a brick as that?" at the same time giving the one indicated a tremendous kick.

A howl of mingled rage and pain followed.

"That's all right," responded the nondescript dealer. "They'll sell. I set the styles around here in that."

TEAMWORK FOR OUR TOWN

In every city, town and hamlet we may find strong competition in business, differences in politics and religion, social rivalries and personal antagonisms...

But there is one common ground on which all should be willing to meet, laying aside personal grievances and prejudices...

In other words, no matter how much we may disagree and fight among ourselves, we should stand up for our town against all opposition.

Development of a strong community spirit is essential to community advancement and no personal feelings should be permitted to stand in its way.

Loyalty and teamwork are the things that count.

EXTENDING AIR MAIL SERVICE

Air mail service plans call for the inauguration of an eight-hour overnight delivery between New York and Chicago. Business houses in these cities can then save one to two days in their correspondence...

The development of the air mail is of great importance in a country as vast as the United States. The tractless forest of the eighteenth century, under the slow communication and difficult transportation of that period, would not have become the great west of today.

The air mail is in its infancy. It should be expanded until every section of the country is in close touch. Air transportation—mail, passenger, and freight—will develop rapidly, and when fully established will do for states what the automobile has done for towns and cities—place them closer together.

NEWEST WONDERS

Dr. John J. Abel of Johns Hopkins university has developed an "artificial kidney," a device which can draw all the blood of an animal or human being from a vein, pass it through a sort of filter to remove poisons or other impurities, then return it through an artery without removing the vital corpuscles.

Astronomers at the Dominion Observatory, Victoria, B. C., have just computed the distance from the earth to the "Plaskett twin stars" to be 52,000,000 billion miles.

Brooklyn now has the world's largest steam-electric generator, capable of producing 67,000 horsepower.

Recently the sending of pictures by telegraph was put to a new use, when Chicago police identified a criminal by means of a fingerprint sent by wire from New York in four minutes.

Philadelphia has a new 300,000,000-candlepower searchlight, which is used for signaling traffic along the entire 12 miles of Broad street in that city.

The giant searchlight is mounted in the tower of the city hall.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

HINTS FOR GOOD DRIVING

Obey the signal of any person leading, riding or driving one or more horses or other animals. In overtaking animals on a highway proceed with caution. When coming out of a garage drive with more than ordinary care.

Never turn a corner at a high rate of speed. Never turn around abruptly. Never unexpectedly change your course.

Learn to drive in a straight line always. If you must change your course make clear with hand signals what you intend to do.

Paris, the busiest city in the world, has the largest traffic problem in the world. According to a tally kept by the police in Paris recently it was found that between the hours of 8 and 7 p. m. more than 104,000 vehicles pass the crossroads at the Place de la Concorde.

WATCH YOUR HEADLIGHTS

There are anti-glare laws to prevent this. Make sure you are obeying the law. The number of accidents due to glaring lights has become so frequent that most communities today have adequate laws regulating the use of lights.

TUCSON OIL FIELD MAY BE DEVELOPED

Tucson—Drilling has been resumed at the Colplizer ranch, near Benson, for several months of idleness, the work in charge of the Montgomery Drilling Company of Oklahoma, contracting to the Whittier Southern Oil Company, sinking to 3500 feet. Two crews are employed.

Announcement has been made that drilling is to be resumed at once by the Nogales Oil and Gas Company on its well in the Elgin district, 34 miles northeast of Nogales. An Oklahoma driller has been employed, it is reported.

F. L. Copening of Los Angeles, who has leases on large areas of land in the San Simon and San Pedro valleys, lately accompanied David Gustavsen, a geologist, over his holdings. The latter states that the field is one of great promise and expresses belief that oil should be struck between 2300 and 3320 feet.

SENATOR WHEELER REMAINS IN DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Washington—There is to be no effort at this time to formally read Senator Wheeler of Montana out of the Democratic party.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, so announced this week in response to inquiries whether senate Democrats would follow the lead of the Republicans who have excluded from party councils Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, with whom Senator Wheeler was associated on the independent presidential ticket.

Senator Robinson said that there was no occasion for calling a conference of senate Democrats, that there would be a meeting only of the steering committee to fill vacancies on standing committees of the senate.

STATE AGREES TO SLAYING OF 1000 DEER IN KAIBAB

Phoenix—Upwards of 1000 deer will be killed by hunters in the Kaibab national forest, north of the Grand Canyon, under a co-operative agreement entered into between state and federal officials, it has been announced.

Official orders are now being drawn descending an order issued November 20, calling a halt to the issuance of hunting permits by the U. S. forest service as the only practicable method of preventing starvation among the deer in the west end of the Grand Canyon game preserve because of overproduction.

The conference endorsed the proposed drive by George McCormick, Cochise county cattleman, of some 5000 deer from the north to the south rim of the Grand Canyon, which will be undertaken from the east end of the game preserve, not to be interrupted by the shooting of deer at the west end.

Georgia raised and marketed 30 million pounds of tobacco during the season just closed, which brought an average of 21.82 cents, putting more than six million dollars into the pockets of the farmers.

BOOST FOR LOCAL ROAD MAN

Recently the Patagonian mentioned the compliments of George Posses of Wisconsin, nephew of the local barber, the Arizona and New Mexico roads. We have since learned that Mr. Pussler stated that on his trip from his home in Antigo to Patagonia he found the best roads in Arizona and New Mexico, the best section of road being from the Cochise county line to Patagonia in Santa Cruz county.

Men are more convincing than women, declares a Danish professor, who attributes this to the fact that the annual crop of stories about squirrels gathering golf balls is now due.

W. H. Collier of Vaughn is in charge of this section of highway, and many compliments have been paid to his maintenance work.

Bright Outlook for Sheep

PER CAPITA PRODUCTION OF SHEEP HAS DECLINED DURING PAST 25 YEARS

The sheep industry presents one of the bright spots in the present agricultural outlook, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. The number of sheep in the United States has been increased for two years, but is still far from being back at wartime or pre-war figures.

The United States produces only about 10 per cent of the world's total wool crop, but consumes 25 per cent of it. World carry-over stocks of wool have been shrinking for four years and are now low. World production last year was 66 million pounds below the previous year.

The prices of both wool and lambs have been strong the past two years and the outlook for reasonable profits in sheep is excellent for several years to come.

The Literary Spotlight

BY MARION ELLET

A Tremendous Novel of City Nomads by Edwin Balmer. "HAT ROYLE GIRL" by Edwin Balmer, a novel beginning in the December issue of Hearst's International, is a romance of any crowded district in any great city. It tells of nomad life, but not of the nomads of Bokhara or of Bagdad. It is a story of urban gypsies who migrate from house to house in the great American cities, "renting a kitchenette apartment with precarious delicatessen for three months or recklessly for six." "Lawless nomads, here today, gone tomorrow, lacking birth, lacking breeding, lacking education, training and self-control." Scarcely picturesque subjects, perhaps, but Balmer has found in them color and glamor and romance.

He has told a tremendously moving story of a girl who, albeit, a part of this half-world sordidness, epitomizes all the spirit and the clean cut fitness that should spring from generations of culture. There is also a boy whose tempestuous, erratic genius expresses itself in "mooning out" jazz melodies and in coaxing music from a cheap orchestra in a clubber dance hall, but it expresses itself none the less. Balmer has chronicled the metropolitan Main Street.

"Old Youth"—A Woman of 30 Seeks Romance. DOES one ever live twice? Does one every really get a second chance to recapture youth? According to Coningsby Dawson in his latest novel beginning in the December number of Good Housekeeping, there comes a time, usually in a woman's late thirties, when she is apt to stumble suddenly upon the discovery that she is "going to wither without once having been splendid."

"Old Youth" is the story of a woman who for ten years after the death of her husband lived the life of a recluse and at thirty-six years of age began to long for a romance of her early youth. Eve Green-sleeve was consumed with hunger for the unexpected, for love and adventure and for those things she thought she had outgrown; but there were obstacles in the path of recapturing these old delights. Eve's husband had left a family as well as a fortune, and a money whose pet obsession was that of keeping Eve a widow and a nun, and incidentally making a fortune out of her.

"Old Youth" is a sympathetically and charmingly told story and one that takes cognizance also of a man's yearning for second youth, that "desire to feel young; that mostly comes when youth is vanished."

A Refreshing Story of a Refreshing Young Hero. IF YOU'RE going to die don't die in the dressing room. Wait till you get on the stage. Do it right! So "Jackie" apostrophized himself while his knees were doing a "castanette rattle" before the performance which was to decide his fate. Jackie had sporting blood and he didn't care for people who died before the light began.

Single-Wheeled Motorcycle Carries Rider on Inside of Rim

A single-wheeled, spokeless motorcycle has been invented in Italy. Engine and seat are held on a frame within a large outer revolving wheel which passes over pulleys. Power is applied directly to the outside rim, the single wheel affording the traction and carrying the load. The rider's feet are close to the ground so that he can easily retain his balance in case the vehicle should tip. It is guided by a regulation steering wheel.

No Eggs Boiled on the Planet Mars Temperature Tests Prove

Owing to the rare state of air on the planet Mars, it has been shown by a government scientist, water there will boil at a much lower temperature than on the earth. To determine the degree of warmth of the distant sphere, the experimenter directs a ray of the planet's light upon two thin wires, thus setting up an electric current which is measured by delicate instruments. The temperature of Mars, according to the scientist, is from twenty to forty degrees cooler than that of the earth. This would make it impossible to boil eggs on the planet.

PIGGY WIGGLY MOVES TO NEW LOCATION, OPPOSITE CITY HALL

The Piggy Wiggly Nogales Company has moved to more commodious quarters, opposite city hall. This grocery firm has made wonderful progress since opening up for business in the county seat. Its prosperity is due to the fact that it sells groceries on a narrow margin of profit, depending upon a volume of business and quick turn-over for its income.

SHERIFF BROWN CAPTURES TWO FLEEING SHOPLIFTERS

Two Mexicans, having in their possession stolen goods from three Nogales stores, were captured this week by Sheriff Harold J. Brown while attempting to make an entrance into Mexico with their loot, which consisted of dry goods, shoes and other articles. The men plead guilty to a charge of shoplifting, and were given 60 days each in the county jail by Justice C. L. Hardy.

ARMY OFFICER WEDS NOGALES GIRL

Lieut. E. M. Byles and Miss Bertha Campillo were married in Nogales Wednesday, after which the young couple left for California to spend their honeymoon. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Campillo, well known Nogales residents. Lieutenant Byles is attached to the 25th Infantry, stationed at Camp Stephen D. Little, where he has been in service for several years.

R. P. WILL ACCEPT RAIL BOARD'S WAGE AWARD

Tucson.—In a telegram received here from San Francisco, William Sprout, president of the Southern Pacific railroad, said the company would accept the wage award of the federal railroad labor board, which Saturday granted engineers a 5 per cent increase in wages. He also expressed the belief that the men would accept the award.

It has been discovered that wives are also useful in opening garage doors.

Thirty Thousand Acres of Trees Used Yearly for Toothpicks

Approximately 30,000 acres of trees are necessary for the manufacture of the toothpicks used yearly in the United States alone, according to government estimates. Maple and hickory are the chief kinds of wood used, although sweet and yellow birch are employed in some localities. After being felled, the logs are sawed into bolts, twenty-eight inches long. These are then steamed and cut into strips of veneer or thin sticks which are divided into ribbons, three inches wide. Eight or ten of these are run through machines that clip them into splinters of regulation toothpick size and shape, and they are then boxed, each containing 100,000 about 1,500. Michigan, Maine, Ohio and Oregon are the principal sources of the supply.

Preserving Leaves in Specimen Book

The common method of preserving leaves by pressing them with a flatiron rubbed on wax may be improved by the following way: Paint the underside of each leaf with linseed oil and iron it immediately; then paint and iron the upper side in the same way. This treatment gives the leaves sufficient gloss and keeps them pliable. It is not necessary to press and dry the leaves beforehand, although this may be done if desired. The tints of the leaves can even be preserved by painting the upper side with the oil and placing them, without ironing, between newspapers and under weights to dry.

Using a C-Battery

The C or C-tras battery is a very useful adjunct to the audio-frequency amplifier, as it not only improves the operation of the set but also reduces the drain on the B-battery. However, if the B-battery has a potential of under 45 volts, the C-battery is unnecessary; for a 60-volt battery the C-voltage should be about 3 volts, and for a 90-volt B-battery the C-battery should have a potential of 4 1/2 volts, and be connected with the negative toward the grid.

Repairing Leaky Spark Plugs

Spark plugs having a removable center wire sometimes leak compression at this point. Often the reason is that the insulator has slipped away where the flange on the wire seats against it. This trouble can usually be remedied by slipping a thin brass washer, of the same kind as that used on top of the plug, over the center wire and drawing it up against the porcelain. As such washers are too large for the use, they must first be trimmed down with tinners snips.

Effective Churn Plunger

The work of churning is hastened considerably by using a plunger with two blades that revolve in opposite directions. The plunger is a wooden rod with three holes drilled through it in the lower part for wooden yugs. Two square blocks, drilled to fit on the plunger rod and just wide enough to fit loosely between the pins, are attached as shown. Slots are sawed diagonally in these blocks to receive the blades, which are cut from heavy galvanized iron. The plunger is worked up and down in the usual way.

WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

WORLD'S LARGEST MOTORISTS' ORGANIZATION

The American motorist going to England for the first time or the tenth time is always interested in the activities of The Automobile Association, which was founded in 1905, by a small body of motorists, as a protective measure against what was described then as the unreasonable police activities on many of the roads between London and the South Coast of England. The Association is now the largest motorists' organization in the world today—but it is still primarily an organization specially equipped for assisting members on the road.

In return for about $10 a year, a motor car member is given the following service:

Free assistance by Automobile Association patrols, who will be found on 20,000 miles of main road in Great Britain.

Free legal defense in proceedings under the Motor Car Act and Roads Act, in any Court of Summary Jurisdiction in the United Kingdom.

Free use of roadside telephone booths at any hour of the day or night.

Free help day or night from the mechanics in charge of road service outfits.

Christmas and the Bible

Worship of the Magi (Painting by Burne Jones)

All Peoples Reading World's "Best Seller"

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN
THE Bible is the world's Book of Books at all times. And at this season the Bible is "The Christmas Book" without compare. For the Bible is the fount and inspiration of Christmas and the Christmas spirit. Here is the wondrous story of the birth of Christ and the adoration of the "Three Kings of Orient" (Magi, wise men), as told in St. Matthew, Chapter II:

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, saying, where is He that is born King of the Jews, for we have seen His star in the East, and are come to worship Him.
When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.
And they said unto him, in Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet, And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a governor, that shall rule my people Israel.
Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.
And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child, and when ye have found Him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship Him also.
When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the East, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was.
When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.
And when they were come into the house, they saw the young child with Mary His mother, and fell down, and worshipped Him; and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto Him gifts; gold and frankincense, and myrrh.

The Bible is the Book of Christmascide. It is the Book of Sunday. It is also the Book of Every Day. For the Bible is the Best Seller, year in and year out all over the world. The presses cannot keep pace with the demand.
Why this demand? Why do the millions of earth in this Twentieth century buy and read this old book when new and important and up-to-date books are turned out every day of the year and every hour of the day? How is it that widely separated peoples are adopting a book and a literature in a foreign tongue? The Bible is itself the best answer to these and similar questions. To a young American it might be said that he must read the English Bible because he cannot afford to be ignorant of it. Ignorant of its contents, he will be unable to understand much of the best of English literature, and unable to appreciate much of the greatest in art and music. The most important reason, however, is that his ignorance of the Bible will deprive him of the greatest source of moral strength and inspiration. Part of this argument, of course, is hardly applicable to Asia or to Africa.

Nevertheless, it is not sentiment and not pietistic or sectarian zeal that keeps the Bible press going day and night. The law of supply and demand is working here, as everywhere. And anything that is continually sought for and purchased is worth its price to the buyers or the demand will die down and out. There is that in the Bible for which the hearts of all peoples cry out.

And there is no doubt whatever that the Bible is the world's Best Seller. There are believed to be about 1,000 tongues in use among the peoples of the world. The Bible, as a whole, or in part, is now published in 770 of these languages and dialects. The whole Bible has been translated into 158 of these languages; the New Testament into 42 other languages; portions in each case (at least one complete book of the Bible) into 42 other languages; and brief portions into 48 other languages. The principal organizations engaged in the translation of the Bible are the British and Foreign Bible society and the American Bible society, of which Edwin Francis Hyde (portrait herewith), a New York banker, is now president.

A wealthy Italian paid $250,000 for a famous Bible the other day. A New Yorker recently paid $50,000 for the "Mazarin Bible." About the same time the American Bible society announced that it had received an order for 1,500,000 copies of the Scriptures to be sold for one cent apiece. The range between the prices tells a story. In spite of the light fiction tonnage annually thrown on the market, the Bible is still supreme as the Best Seller. In eight years the sale of a popular American novelist's books, the second best sellers, has reached 10,000,000, whereas in the same period more than 250,000,000 copies of the Bible have been sold. At the present rate of distribution the whole world may be supplied before the end of the century. Of last year's total about one-fourth was the output of the American Bible society, which, since its birth, 108 years ago, has issued almost 100,000,000 volumes of Scriptures. For the second time in its history the society last year exceeded the 7,000,000-copy mark, an increase of 2,500,000 over the previous year.

In the United States circulation of Scriptures was almost doubled last year, as compared with the previous year. Through the Massachusetts Bible society alone a quarter of a million copies in 42 languages were distributed. But this country falls several hundred thousand short of the Chinese demand. The American Bible society issued there two and a half million Bibles last year, an increase over the previous year of more than half a million. In fact, one-half of its 7,000,000 volumes went to the Orient. In country after country the figures have risen for the American society alone. Similar accounts come from the British and Foreign Bible society, the Bible Society of France, the Belgian Gospel mission, the Evangelical Society of Geneva and many others. The circulation of Scriptures through the American Bible society represents the services of 3,000 persons, about three-fourths of whom labor in foreign lands.

The purchase in New York for $90,000 is the record high price for a Gutenberg Bible, the first book printed from movable type. The buyer is Carl H. Forzheimer, specialist in Standard Oil securities. The copy is known as the Mazarin Bible because it came from the library of Cardinal Mazarin. Henry E. Huntington, at the Hoe sale in 1911, paid $50,000 for a Gutenberg Bible on vellum. Mr. Forzheimer's copy is on paper.

The copy bought by Mr. Forzheimer is America's only perfect copy of the first issue of the Gutenberg Bible in an old binding. It adds another copy of the Gutenberg Bible to New York's literary treasures. There is a copy in the New York Public library, in the library of the General Theological seminary, and a copy on paper formerly belonging to J. W. Ellsworth. An imperfect copy was bought a few years ago by Gabriel Wells, who sold separate leaves at $150 each to libraries and lesser collectors in order that they might have specimens of the book. The Mazarin copy is the only perfect copy in the United States which is in old binding. The wonderful thing about this Gutenberg Bible is that although it was the first book printed with movable type it is a perfect specimen of printing. It is one of the handsomest books in the world. It is in two volumes, in which the Gothic print, in black, not the least faded by centuries, appears in double columns. The Gutenberg Bible was printed during the period between 1450 and 1455. It is not known definitely how many copies were printed, but 300 is accepted as a probable estimate.

There are many kinds of Bibles. Greek Codexes, manuscript Latin Bibles and Hebrew rolls; the Roman Catholic Bible and Donay Bible; the King James Bible; the English Revised Bible; the "Standard" Bible of the American revision committee. Man is ever busy studying the earliest texts and making new translations and revisions. One of the latest translations is that made by Dr. Edgar J. Goodspeed, professor of New Testament Greek at the University of Chicago (portrait herewith). It is made from the earliest Greek manuscripts and is written in language familiar to average American readers. Compare Doctor Goodspeed's translation with the corresponding verse as given in the beginning of this story.
"Then Herod secretly sent for the astrologers and found out from them the exact time when the star appeared."

hotel in Chicago refused to accept the Bibles from the glitcheous for its guest rooms on the ground that the patronage would be of such a high type that they would not be needed. But soon the patrons "of such high type" made so many complaints about the absence of Bibles in the rooms, that the management found it necessary to supply them. Moral: People do not get either too high or too low in the social scale to find comfort and inspiration in its pages.

The Italian purchase is the record high price for a Bible. By this purchase Italy has recovered one of her most famous art treasures—the Bible of Borsio d'Este, duke of Ferrara—through the generosity of Signor Treccani, a wealthy citizen of Milan. The book was produced in the fifteenth century, and has long been regarded as a remarkable example of the art of the Italian renaissance. It was taken from Italy sixty odd years ago, and finally found its way into the hands of a Paris dealer. Signor Treccani paid 5,000,000 lire, or $250,000, for the book.

Duke Borsio d'Este was fortunate enough to live in peaceful times, and so was able to devote himself to the development of the fine arts. The court of Ferrara, which had always been noted for its gay and splendid entertainments, acquired under his rule new fame as an artistic and intellectual center. Artists, sculptors, poets and men of science and literature flocked to Ferrara and were welcomed at court, and aid and support were given to all who showed talent or genius.

This was a century when artists did not consider it a loss of time to spend many years in completing one work of art and rendering it perfect. Thus one sees marvelous works of patience and talent in the manuscripts of the time, most of which were painted and illuminated by monks, who often passed a whole lifetime illustrating one book or manuscript.

Duke Borsio d'Este had a special preference for the art of illumination and miniature painting, and he called to his court two of the best-known artists of the time, Taddeo di Nicolo Crivelli and Franco di Giovanni di Russi di Mantua, and having taken a house in Ferrara, where they might work undisturbed, confided to them the important task of illustrating the Bible. The book is composed of two volumes in parchment, one containing 311 pages, the other 293, and these are covered with about a thousand illuminations and miniature paintings illustrating the episodes of the Scriptures. The ornamental borders are a fantastic mixture of animals and flowers in color. The artists were employed seven years, from 1455 to 1462, to complete their great work.

The ancient binding in cloth of gold, with silver ornaments and gilt clasp, was substituted in the eighteenth century by another gorgeous binding, but of inferior artistic value.

Until 1859 this Bible was the gem of the ducal collection of art at Modena. In that year Duke Francesco V. was exiled to Austria and took the Bible with him, together with other famous Italian works of art. The book afterward fell into the hands of Archduke Francesco Ferdinando, who sold it to the Emperor Francis Joseph. The emperor treasured it as a sacred object until his death, when Charles I. took possession of it. Finally the hard necessities of life compelled him to sell the book to an antiquary in Paris. Signor Treccani never failed to follow the wanderings of the Bible and as soon as he discovered that it was in the hands of the Paris dealer he went to that city. It appears that an American banker, after the contract was signed, offered another million, but Signor Treccani refused to consider the offer, declaring that he intended the book as a gift to Italy, to which it really belonged.

MAKING GOOD IN A SMALL TOWN

Real Stories About Real Girls

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN

RUNNING A RABBITRY

RABBITS, it is true, don't furnish eggs! But, otherwise, in the advantages they raising offers, they closely parallel that other friend of the small town or country girl—the chicken.

And the larger varieties resemble turkey, rather than chicken, in the quantity of meat they develop. So reasons a little high school girl I know, who has been running her back yard bunny farm for three years.

"You don't have to bother much about experience, special education or expense, when you go into the rabbit raising business," she declares, "all you need is a corner of your own back yard. In fact, it costs less to produce rabbit meat than it does to supply chicken for the table."

An empty dry goods box was what this girl used for her first hutch, but she was careful to keep it clean and dry. She had a sliding screen door on the front of the box to provide ventilation; small holes at the top, she said, will provide the necessary air with even less trouble. At night and during storms, she carried the hutch into an empty shed. The rabbit raiser must make sure of some such sheltered place she can take her rabbits when necessary.

She should secure animals that are large and of sound, hardy stock. The Belgian hare is best for food purposes, because of its great weight, rapid development and superior meat quality.

The rabbit raiser may feed her creatures anything from the garden that would otherwise go to waste. She will have to store green food for them during the winter.

She should not handle young rabbits. She should write to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., asking for bulletins No. 496 and No. 1310, which will give her complete information about the business and prevent her making any bad mistakes.

At four months, the little rabbits, which should now weigh about six pounds, are ready for market. The rabbit raiser should try to sell them to a poultry dealer. If the rabbits are to be sold alive on the market, all that is necessary is to crate them. But when they are to be delivered dressed, they should be carefully packed, so that they will not arrive in a messy condition. Dressed rabbits which come to the buyer in an unattractive condition are the worst of advertisements.

DOLL-DRESS SET STYLES ON "MAIN STREET"

BRINGING Fifth Avenue to Main Street, via the doll-dressing room, has been "the making" of one young girl whose only capital was her originality.

"Heavens! what can any girl do in a dinky little town like this?" was her first thought when she finished school and began to look around for "something to do." But one day, Jenn, now official doll-dresser for a little Oklahoma town, happened to notice her little sister's doll, Little Sister had it tied up in a sort of pillow-slip looking garment of her own conception, and Jenn thought, "why not give the doll a decent dress?"

"Well, I made her a real 'Paris creation' while I was at it—I'd had a brief trip to New York just after school was out," Jenn confided to me. "The result was so chic that it not only pleased little sister, and made her playmates want their dolls dressed likewise, but also interested the mothers. In a short time, I had a small business that has grown steadily."

Jenn makes complete costumes for her patrons' dolls. Stockings, from discarded silk hose; little shoes from old kid gloves; miniature silk vests, step-ins, doleful nightgowns, party dresses, wraps and hats are all "made-overs" from discarded clothes. They are carefully made, and the tiny label "Joanne" in each miniature hat, for her prices are reasonable.

When Jenn says no advertising is necessary, the girl who wants to dress dolls professionally may advertise in the local paper; or telephone all the women she knows who have children of the doll-crazing age.

Her biggest business will, of course, be before Christmas time, but there are plenty of birthdays throughout the year. A spring style show, too, will stimulate business.

To further supplement her business, the doll modiste may turn instructor in snick season. She could take a class of little girls once a week, teaching them how to make their own doll clothes. A busy mother will welcome the opportunity to see that her children leave to sew and trim. The modiste-instructor should let the children make clothes for any kind of doll they like—the baby doll, the child doll, the character doll, the grown-up doll.

THE AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department supplied by the American Legion News Service)

"FIGHTING JOE" IS NATIONAL CHAPLAIN

"Fighting Joe" is the title which has been bestowed by general consent on Rev. Joseph Lonergan of Durand, Ill., recently elected national chaplain of the American Legion. And the title is not airy tinsel, either. It has a background.

For it harks back to kid days when as a boy with two fists who knew how to use them and Father Joe sometimes found employment for them in ways other than earning money by working on railroad tracks to go to college. The story goes back to the time when he was a famous football star, "the miracle halfback" at St. Victor's college.

The nickname recalls a baseball career culminating in a batting average for his last year of .448, rather a big league average. It carries a picture of Father Joe, the ecclesiastical student at Montreal, tying up his presidential sash above his knees and sliding bases like Ty Cobb. It is reminiscent of the young priest at Aurora, Ill., who appeared in the pulpit one day with a bulging black eye—fruit of too strenuous endeavors to show his eighth-graders in the school league he organized how to take 'em hot off the bat.

Then comes the time when Father Joe took up his work with the Eighty-sixth division organizing at Camp Grant. He was without military status and without salary, but he carried on. While there he lectured to all officers at Camp Grant on the necessity of religion. Shortly afterward he got a commission as first lieutenant chaplain, and began his extraordinary activity in the fighting game. It was he who spoke at Camp Grant's greatest day, July 4, 1918, when he addressed 50,000 of the division gathered there. A sentence stood out, which was flashed over the country: "A man never became a man until he got a good punch on the nose."

Then the Argonne and the Vosges. Father Joe says that when the shooting was close he became Dugout Joe, "but the boys don't say that. They think he's all man. The chaplain reorganized a band for the Twelfth engineers, "the band with a personality," chosen by the French mission to accompany them when they took over Alsace and Strassburg from the Germans. He was transferred to the Ninetieth division and remained with them until he was discharged. Membership in the American Legion followed soon and then his election as department chaplain for Illinois in 1922. In 1924 he was unanimously named national chaplain. That's the story of "Fighting Joe" Lonergan, whose record at the front with the men endeared him to all veterans and makes him a very popular "padre."

Legion Posts Aim to Cut Down Fire Loss

"The source of America's largest and most preventable waste is fires, and American Legion posts and departments throughout the country are taking up the problem with an aim to appreciably cut down the loss annually of millions of dollars from fire," declared Legionnaire J. H. Dubony, He and W. S. Atkinson are leading the department of Oklahoma's move for fire prevention. Both are leaders in the Oklahoma Fire Prevention association. The American Legion department of California, has been active in fire prevention in the redwood forests on the coast the past year.

Prize for Student

It's time to reward the studious lad with the bulging satchel, as well as the campus hero of building heaps, declared the A. A. Mountain post of the American Legion of McMechen, W. Va. Accordingly, they offered a substantial cash prize to the high school student whose scholastic record is best during the year.

They Will Appear in "Uncle Sam's Follies"

Lots of pretty clerks and stenographers in the government service are rehearsing for the musical review known as "Uncle Sam's Follies" which will be produced in Washington in December. In this picture Miss Grace Tucker, the star, is on the piano with the directors.

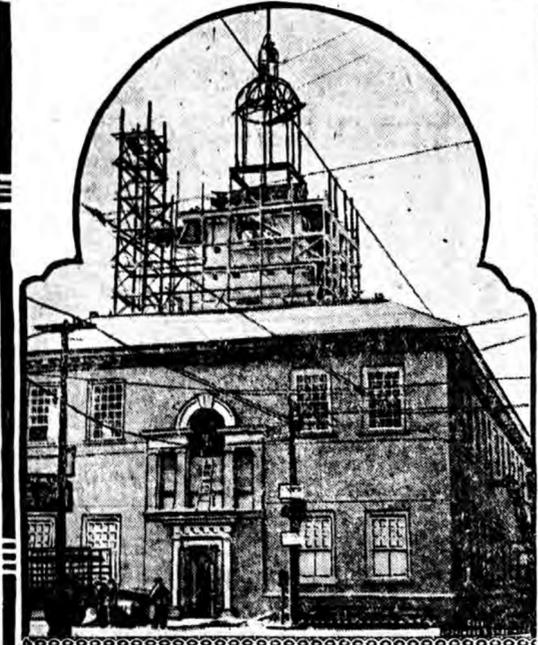

Teaching Them How to Levy Tax

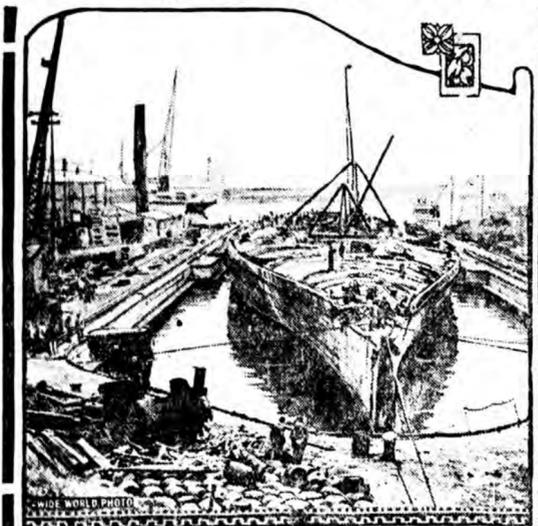

Uncle Sam is preparing the way for the returns on the 1924 income tax by giving instructions to the office and field employees of the internal revenue department. The Chicago school is being held in offices in the Federal Reserve Bank building. The complications in the new law make it necessary for employees to be familiar with it before time for filing comes. In the photograph Mrs. Mabel G. Reinecke, collector of internal revenue for Chicago district, is shown at a blackboard, giving practical illustrations of the law.

POULTRY

BREEDING MALE IS OF BIG IMPORTANCE

With poultry, as with everything else, like produce like, poultrymen, realizing the truth of this, are now making the final selection of their breeders for the coming spring, ever bearing in mind that what they select now will be multiplied in numbers next year.

First of all, says E. E. Cray, assistant specialist in poultry husbandry of the New York State Agricultural college, remember that the male is more than half the flock. The cheapest male is the one with a pedigree record, stamina, and body conformation; the most expensive male is the scrub which you usually get when exchanging with a neighbor. Remember that egg production must be bred in, in order to be fed out.

The good producer has body type of capacity measured by its length, depth, and width of body, a lean face free from wrinkles, and a large, prominent eye. The head should be well balanced, broad and deep, with every line denoting strength. The skin should be soft and pliable and the shanks smooth and flat. Above all, the breeder should show no signs of sickness, but its personality should denote health, vigor and interested activity.

Only use those birds for breeders which have completed at least one year's production and which were culled vigorously during the period. Remember that you culled to eliminate the poor producers so that you would not breed from them, and then decide how many poor birds you would produce if you were to breed from the pullets which you now have.

The comparative number of males and females varies with the breeds, as follows:

- Leghorns.....1 male to 15 females
- Aeneas.....1 male to 15 females
- Rocks.....1 male to 10 females
- Wyandottes.....1 male to 10 females

Give the breeders plenty of exercise, allowing them out in the yards when the weather permits. Keep the litter dry and deep and the house well supplied with fresh air.

High fertility and stronger chicks will result if the breeders are not forced. It is best to keep them below 50 per cent production; 12 per cent animal protein in the mash is sufficient.

Scaly Leg in Fowls Is Very Easy to Eradicate

Scalies on the legs of fowl are caused by a small parasite which burrows under the small scale-like covering of the legs and once safely imbedded, multiplies rapidly, thus causing the upraising and enlarging of the scales until they become unsightly and, if allowed to progress undisturbed, will result in lameness and irritation.

Treatment for scaly leg is very simple and once thoroughly eradicated, there is little fear of a return provided the quarters are kept clean. First clean the houses well and burn all trash. Give roost poles a thorough cleaning with any sort of crude oil or with common kerosene, being sure that every part is reached. Now catch all fowls infected and dip their legs into a vessel filled half-full of a mixture of lard and kerosene, equal parts. Hold in mixture five minutes.

One treatment usually effects a cure. If not, the treatment may be repeated in four or five days. Sometimes it is necessary to rub the mixture in with a soft brush, or with the fingers; the main point being to see that the oil reaches all parts of the scales. This destroys the parasites, after which the scales drop off and the legs become smooth and natural.

Early Hatches Favored

A late hatched chick will never develop as rapidly, economically, or reach maturity in as short a time as earlier hatches. Most of the late stock will always appear rather immature, never attain sufficient size, and will not start laying early enough to hit the market of high egg prices. With late hatched birds a proper feeding method will help but cannot work the miracle of making something worth while out of nothing.

Good Egg-Laying Mash

A good laying mash can be made of 100 pounds each of ground oats, ground corn, middlings, bran and meat scrap. If you have plenty of sour milk to feed the hens, reduce the meat scrap one-half. Equal parts of cracked corn and wheat makes an ideal fall scratch grain ration. You can obtain a very practical bulletin on poultry feeding by addressing the Michigan Agricultural college experiment station, East Lansing.

Few Pullets Too Fat

In order to properly produce, a pullet should be in prime condition. The fear of having hens too fat has been drilled into all of us so long that we are beginning to feel about the same in regard to pullets. There are more pullets that are poor producers because of improper condition than there are those that are too fat in the fall. Sometimes it seems that one could be safe in stating that a pullet going into winter quarters cannot be too fat.

CAPTURED A PRINCE

LATE IN STARTING

"Uncle Billy" Barber of Paulding county, Georgia, is ninety-nine years of age and has been the "model man" one hears about all his life. He had never taken a drink, never smoked and had never been inside of a street car, ridden in an elevator or seen a movie. He has been attended by a physician but twice in his life and that for wounds received in the Civil war. He recently arrived in Atlanta, and is determined to see all of the things he missed heretofore.

OLDEST MAN IN WORLD

Above is shown Zorah Agrah of Constantinople, whose age is authenticated by birth records as being 120 years. He recently celebrated his birthday and is now looking for a young wife. She must be, he declares, younger than sixty-five, the age of his fifth mate. Agrah is a Kurd by birth and clearly recalls events in the Turkish capital of more than 120 years ago. He has been a "hannal" or porter for nearly a hundred years and continues at his work despite his age.

Famous Forts in U. S. History

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

Scene of Last Battle in the Revolution

In the summer of 1781 a Virginia hunter came to a high bluff overlooking the Ohio river, and, impressed by the beauty of the spot, he took "Tomahawk possession," built a rude shack and remained there for several months. Ebenezer Zane was his name and the next year he returned, bringing with him several of his friends and their families to make a settlement.

When Lord Dunmore, the governor of Virginia, decided in 1774 to make war on the western Indians who had been attacking the border settlements, he ordered several companies of militia to rendezvous at the Zane settlement and build a fort as the base for his military operations. Accordingly a typical frontier stockade was erected here by Maj. Angus McDonald, with Ebenezer Zane and John Caldwell supervising the construction, and it was named Fort Finestie, in honor of Dunmore, one of whose titles was Viscount Finestie.

When Dunmore's campaign ended successfully he left a garrison of 25 men at Fort Finestie, who held the post until June, 1775, when the Revolution broke out and the frontiersmen took possession of it for the Continental congress. In 1777 the fort was enlarged and renamed Fort Henry, in honor of Patrick Henry.

From that time on Fort Henry saw some stirring events. On August 31, 1777, it was attacked by 350 Shawnee, Mingo and Wyandot warriors, and during this attack Betty Zane made her famous dash across the bullet-swept clearing to carry back in her apron the powder so desperately needed by the defenders of the fort.

Again on September 10, 1782, the Indians, aided by a force of British rangers from Detroit, swept down upon the post, but again the frontiersmen beat off the attack. This was virtually the last battle of the Revolution and the war, which was opened by a shot from a little four-pounder on the walls of Fort William and Mary in New Hampshire, ended with the sharp crack of a frontiersman's long rifle at Fort Henry in West Virginia.

After the Revolution the sight of Fort Henry was a welcome one to thousands of emigrants who floated down the Ohio in their quest for homes in the West, for it was the symbol of the conquering pioneer, the outpost of white civilization which had successfully withstood all the savage assaults launched against it. When the frontier days were over the settlement around Fort Henry continued to grow and today it is the important city of Wheeling, W. Va.

The Key to Ownership of the Ohio Valley

It was the keen military mind of George Washington that first saw the strategic importance of the spot where the Monongahela and the Allegheny rivers join to form the Ohio, and it was at his recommendation that Governor Dinwiddie of Virginia in 1753 ordered a fort built there to hold the country west of the Appalachians for the English. Hardly had Dinwiddie's party begun to work on the fort when the French appeared, drove them away, demolished the crude stockade and built on its site Fort Duquesne, named for the governor of Canada.

Thus began the great struggle between the French and English, known as the French and Indian war in America and the Seven Years' war in Europe, and control of this outpost on the American frontier was destined to be the principal factor in deciding whether England or France was to control the Ohio valley, and with it North America. It was against Fort Duquesne that General Braddock set out in 1755 on the expedition which ended so disastrously almost within sight of the fort and three years later Major Grant and his Highlanders, the advance guard of General Forbes' army, met a similar disaster while reconnoitering before it. But Forbes, unlike Braddock, did not scorn the advice of George Washington, and he reached his goal.

When he arrived at Fort Duquesne on November 15, 1758, he found that the enemy had left it a smoking ruin. The next year Gen. John Stanwix rebuilt the post and named it Fort Pitt, in honor of the great English minister. It was soon needed, for in 1763 the storm of Pontiac's war broke over the western frontier, and when one British post after another went down before the scalping knife and torch of the savages, Fort Pitt alone, although besieged for several months, held back Pontiac's warriors from driving the English into the sea. It was to Fort Pitt's relief that Col. Henry Bouquet was marching when he won his brilliant victory over the Indians at the battle of Bushy Run and this fort was the base for his later campaign, in which he smashed the power of Pontiac's confederation.

During the Revolution Fort Pitt was held by the Americans and at the close of the war it became the starting point for thousands of settlers who poured into the Ohio country. Around it sprang up a little settlement, and today the great city of Pittsburgh, marks the site of Fort Pitt, the key to the Ohio valley.

"Work" in Heaven

Dr. Charles Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard university, in a recent address on "Religion for the Modern Youth," said: "I have never seen any description of heaven which was even tolerable." Doctor Eliot intimated that he had no belief whatever in heaven as a place of refuge from pain or rest from monotonous drudgery. "Joy in work is my ideal of happiness here or hereafter," he added, and repeatedly discounted the idea that heaven and idleness would have anything in common.

Dispute Over Seed Wheat

F. S. Johnston, a farmer at Morton, Wash., is pointing with pride to a wheat crop which he says originated from seed taken from a burying place in the Nile valley. He says he started his experiment four years ago and that the grain from his present crop is "white and very hard, the straw short and the heads prolific." Some scientists dispute the claim, saying that seed so long dormant, as it must have been if it came from the tomb, would not grow.

75% of disease avoided through internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons are formed in the accumulated food waste, and reach all parts of the body. The first results, headaches, biliousness, a feeling of "heaviness", etc., serve as warnings of graver diseases to follow if this intestinal poisoning continues unchecked.

This is why intestinal specialists state that constipation is the primary cause of three-quarters of all illness, including the gravest diseases of life.

Physicians Advise Lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste, and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless. Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

Right in His Line

A great many people who are not farmers have taken up land in Western States. An old-timer rode over to the outfit of one newcomer and asked him what he had been doing before he came west.

"I was a wrestler."

"How much land have you declared on?"

"One hundred and sixty acres."

"Well, you got something to wrestle with now, bo," averred the old-timer, as he gave his steed a resounding whack.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Fancy Work

"Sam, what's a farmerette?"

"Well, Bill, a farmerette's a farm woman, but not a regular, honest-to-goodness farm woman—the ette part of it means something kind o' fancy, you know."

Supposed to be kitchen, but just a fancy kind o' clothes closet with a little gas-stove in it. * * * But what good's a farmerette?"

"Why, Bill, I reckon the place for the farmerette is in the kitchen ette."—Farm and Fireside.
