THE TREND IN FARM LABOR SUPPLY AND DEMAND

Farmers are cutting down hired help. The demand is estimated at only 89 per cent of normal as compared with 95 per cent a year ago, according to a statement issued by the Washington office of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation based on data from government sources. The low purchasing power of farm products has forced the farmer to rearrange his operations. He is coming to depend largely on his own and his family's labor. In many cases the hired man is being dispensed with entirely.

Farm help costs more today than at any other time in the past sixty-one years. Wages demanded are higher than a year ago and rates for 1923 averaged above all preceding years. The peak year in the wage scale was in 1920. That year labor was scarce. According to the accompanying chart, in June of 1920 the supply was but 73 per cent of normal, while the demand was 105 per cent of normal. During the latter half of 1920 and through the first six months of 1921, the labor supply curve took a sudden upward swing, and in June of 1921 it was 95 per cent of normal, while demand had dropped to 87 per cent. Until in June of 1922 the supply curve continued to rise, reaching its height at 105 per cent of normal, while the demand was but 89 per cent normal.

With the beginning of 1923 cityward wages improved. Large industrial centers drew farm help cityward. Farmers had to pay wages out of proportion to what the farm would earn to hold their men. In June of 1923 the demand saw 95 per cent of normal, while the supply curve was sagging to 84 per cent. The latter half of the year demand lessened, due to excessive labor costs and the increasing supply. This year demand has made still further decline, until now it is but 81 per cent of normal, while labor supply, which is gradually increasing, is estimated around 89 per cent.

These were the rulings of Judge Fred C. Jacobs of the United States District Court of Arizona, at Prescott. They were given in the case of E. J. Watts, on trial before the court on an indictment alleging violations of the national prohibition amendment.

Enamoration of the Indians and concentration of endeavors for the betterment of labor conditions so that Mexico may "free itself of the yoke of virtual bondage" was promised by Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, who declared in a statement in Nogales, Ariz., that, if elected, his regime would follow "along the line" established by President Obregon.

Reopening of the port of Nogales, Ariz., to permit traffic across the international boundary line into Old Mexico after 9 p. m., has been authorized at the discretion of Nogales custom officials, according to an official communication received by H. E. Berner, assistant collector of customs at Nogales, from the treasury department at Washington.

Building of the Diamond creek hydro-electric power dam on the Colorado river by James B. Grand, Phoenix engineer, will be enjoined until the project is "otherwise authorized by law," United States District Judge Fred C. Jacobs of Prescott ruled in granting a modification in the phraseology of a permanent injunction recently issued upon application of the government.

Defina Duran, 3-year-old daughter of Jose Duran, ranch worker, came to her death in Nogales as the result of wounds inflicted with a "semi-sharp instrument" in the hands of her father, according to the verdict of a coroner's jury. Duran, a Mexican, who escaped from the state insane asylum last May, was confined to a cell in the county jail at Nogales. He told newspaper men that she was playing on a wooden table when he had been working.

WORLD FLYER FALLS INTO SEA

WADE AND SMITH ARE KEENLY DEPRESSED AT TURN OF EVENTS

Hofn Hornafjord, Iceland.—Lieutenant Erik Nelson and Lieutenant John Harding, Jr., his mechanic, had better luck than their four companions who started with them from Kirkwall on the first lap of the homeward leg of their round-the-world flight, pushing through the heavy fogs off the Orkney Islands and landing in Iceland.

The other four men—Lieut. Lowell H. Smith and mechanic, Lieut. Leslie P. Arnold, and Lieut. Leigh Wade and Seret, A. M. Ogden—became separated from Lieutenant Nelson's plane, the New Orleans, and, fearing a collision in the impenetrable fog, turned back toward Scotland, landing at the starting point, Kirkwall.

The New Orleans covered the distance from Kirkwall—more than 500 miles—in eight hours, nineteen minutes.

Nelson lost the others in the fog soon after they left Kirkwall. Forced into a spin, he flattened out just above the surface of the water and drove on, thinking the others were above him. More than an hour later he sighted Faroe islands and was able to take his course and carry on. He first sighted the Billingsley, and as she was steering into the course of the flight, he took his course from her. He followed the same procedure when he sighted the Reid and Ralright.

"The flight was all right after the first two hours," Lieutenant Nelson said, "but it was nip and tuck at the start."

On Board U. S. S. Richmond.—The machine of Lieutenant Wade was wrecked by an accident while the cruiser Richmond was trying to salvage it.

The plane probably cannot be used again. The wings of the machine were severely damaged in alighting. The plane drifted about in the rough, windy seas for four hours. It was picked up by a British trawler and taken in tow to the torpedo boat destroyer Billingsley and finally reached the Richmond.

The cruiser, in trying to hoist the plane, badly damaged it. A portion of the lifting apparatus broke, sending down a steel boom weighing a ton, which broke the propeller and pierced a pontoon.

Two laggard and weary men, Lieutenant Wade and Sergeant Ogden, stood on the deck of the Richmond and saw their hopes of completing the flight finally vanish after a 19,000-mile journey around the globe.

New Oil Well at Craig.—What is probably Colorado's largest oil structure and one of the greatest in the country, was proven, according to oil experts, when the Hogan well on the Hes structure, twenty-five miles south of Craig, came in on Sunday, August 3. When the bit penetrated six inches in the Dakota sand and oil rose ninety feet in the casing, the geyser that has followed Senator T. S. Hogan of Montana, owner of the well, was broken.

Coolidge Urged to Take Vacation.—Washington.—Friends are urging upon President Coolidge a brief vacation immediately after the exercise of his formal notification as Republican nominee here August 14, but the executive has failed to reveal any plans for the immediate future. Mr. Coolidge, they point out, has been under heavy pressure during his year of office, being forced to assume the duties suddenly upon the death of President Harding. During the year he has been almost constantly at his desk, while suffering an additional strain in the recent death of his son, Calvin Jr.

Seven Banks to Open.—Topeka.—Seven Kansas banks which have been in the hands of receivers will reopen this month, Carl J. Peterson, state bank commissioner, announced. Mr. Peterson attributed the reopening of the banks to the large returns from this year's crops.

Tribute Is Interrupted.—Berlin.—Communists interrupted a two minutes' silence for soldiers who fell in the World War during a national service held in Berlin in front of the reichstag building.

Bond Firm Accused of Fraud.—Washington.—The federal trade commission issued an unfair practices complaint against Keeler Bros. & Co., of Denver; Columbia Securities Company, of Portland, Ore., and the National Finance Corporation of Arizona, which it said are "owned, dominated and controlled by George E. Keeler and Frank W. Keeler." They are engaged in buying and selling water and improvement bonds of states, counties and municipalities.

THE SNAP

"I'M LOOKING for a three-hour course to fill up my program for next semester," Gregg said to me yesterday. "Do you know any snap course?"

Before I answered him my mind went back to commencement time. We were sitting on the porch talking it over, Frank and I, after the fellows had left. We had been celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of our graduation from college, and we had had three happy days together with the fellows, some of whom we had not seen since the day we parted after our commencement exercises. We had all been struck by the changes which had come to each of us, and naturally each one had swelled with satisfaction whenever some one intimated that he had changed little.

Mac had been in Arizona most of the time, working cruelly hard in the mines; he was bald and seamed and crippled with rheumatism. Pete's hair, which had been a riotous bunch of black curls, was entirely white. Fred, who had been slender and smooth-cheeked, showed a face that was the result of hard struggle and a physique that pulled the scales at twice the amount he could manage when he was a freshman. Ed seemed most like himself, brown-haired, smooth-faced, slender as a boy, he had changed the least of all. Life had been a rather easy routine for him; he had not needed money; he had struggled little; he had developed little ambition; he entered only slightly into the reminiscences and the controversies which sprang up; he had no plans for the future, little thought of the past.

After they were all gone, some way we decided that Fred had gripped us most of all. He had been a wild, untrained, harem-scarem fellow, who cared little for God or for his instructors. He had brought himself to the front; he was the head of a big engineering plant; he had great ambitions for the future, and he was managing his men and his boys in a masterly way; best of all, he had conquered himself, and all the wild passions that seemed to rage through him were under his control. His face showed character and conquest and self-control. You could tell by looking at him that he was strong and dependable. He had tried the hard thing and he had made good at it, while Ed was just as he used to be. He had got somewhere; he had no ambition to get anywhere. He had not sacrificed; he had not suffered, and for him there had been no development. And so, as we thought it all over, we decided that the man who had changed the most had done best. It is struggle that turns the hair gray and cuts furrows into the face and bends the shoulders. All these suggest accomplishment and so are venerable and beautiful.

The man who is looking for the snap, for the soft job, is not likely to get anywhere; a passive, unaggressive existence means weakness and stagnation.

"No," I said to Gregg. "I can't think of any snap courses."

COURAGE

"BUT the things courage can do!" Barrie says, "The things even incompetence can do, if it works with singleness of purpose."

The one thing Carlson wanted was a chance to go to college, and yet there had never been anyone to encourage him. His people were illiterate and unambitious, he had no money, he had never even been to high school, for he was forced to go to work before he was fourteen—hard work, too, that left him bruised and exhausted. And yet always there burned in him the one desire, the one purpose of getting a college degree.

"You cannot meet the entrance requirements," the college officials always replied when he tried through interviews or correspondence to find a way within the academic circle.

"Give me a chance," he begged; and finally, after he was twenty-one and had saved a few dollars, he was given an opportunity as a special student to take up college work.

No one ever knew how he got on. He came and went every day across the campus; he earned his living as other eager students did, washing dishes or waiting tables, or in the performance of simple tasks about the town. He was cheerful and happy in the thought that he was having a chance to accomplish the impossible.

And all the time he was getting on. He was making up his entrance credits, he was passing studies with credit to himself, he was getting nearer and nearer to a degree. He reached his ideal, he got his diploma, and now he is out in the world an honored and a successful engineer. It was singleness of purpose that brought him success in spite of his ill-training and incompetence. It was courage that helped him to accomplish the impossible.

The American Legion

WORK "UNDER FIRE" FOR NEW MEMBERS

Twelve hundred new members secured in the period elapsing between the rising and setting of the sun was the achievement of Oklahoma American Legionnaires recently in a membership drive. Their drive was intensive and along the following lines:

Assembly was begun at 6 a. m. At 8:30 Legionnaires were folding their nappings after a breakfast served by the Auxillary at the Legion home. At 7 the workers went forward into battle amidst the patter of real machine guns and the roar of real cannons. All through the day the machine guns were in operation. Each hour the fire whistle sounded, assembly call was blown and a bomb hurled into the skies, to explode 200 feet above the earth.

On the walls at "General Headquarters" a chart was placed containing a series of trenches. Each man's name was listed in the first trench and his status and line of advance during the day noted by a red thumb tack. When the objective was attained by any Legionnaire he was crowned with an Indian headdress and thrown in as a reinforcement in the salient where the line was weaker. By this plan every Legionnaire's valor under fire was recorded.

Cars were commandeered to seek out prospects living in the country where many an ex-service man was made a Legionnaire by the harter principle of exchange—chickens, eggs and pork in many instances being accepted in lieu of the necessary three bucks membership dues.

Police patrols and fire carts were pressed into service to "bring in" the handcuffed prisoners.

The Legion band and bugle corps played on the streets during the day.

Airplanes were used in distributing literature. One thousand theater tickets were thrown from high buildings.

Booths were maintained at prominent corners where many a thirsting ex-service man was near-beered and pretzeled into the Legion.

Reports of the progress of the drive were radio-broadcast throughout the day.

NEXT BIG FIGHTS

"THE Universal Service Law will be the next big fight of the Legion," was the prophecy of John R. Quinn, national commander of the American Legion, at a dinner given in his honor at Spokane, Wash., recently. The commander of the Legion declared: "Within three years we will have as big a fight on for this measure as we have had for the adjusted compensation. There will be other fights," the fighting commander of the Legion emphasized. "Children are being taught in schools of the country that military training is all wrong; it will be the Legion's policy to fight this anti-preparedness propaganda to the last trench."

"The next war, if there must be a next war, will be fought with every one suffering on an equal basis of sacrifice, and will not be as past wars, a condition of hardship for many and profit for the few."

New Officers Chosen at Georgia Convention

J. R. Fitzpatrick of Columbus was elected Georgia commander of the American Legion at the closing sessions of the sixth annual convention held in Savannah, Ga., recently. The election was made unanimous after Alexander Fawcett of Savannah withdrew from the race. Other officers elected are: State adjutant, M. C. McMullen, Columbus; senior vice commander, H. A. Carithers, Winder; junior vice commander, Leroy Cowart, Statesboro; chaplain, John Hogan, Salvation Army, Rome; historian, Miss Elizabeth Grimes, Atlanta; state treasurer, James A. Bankston, Atlanta. Asa W. Candler of Atlanta was elected national committeeman; Heyward Hosh, Gainesville, alternate national committeeman. Mrs. Boyce Flekin, Jr., was elected president of the American Legion Auxillary for Georgia.

To Teach Flag Rules in All Texas Schools

Standard flag rules are to be taught in all the schools in the state of Texas, as a result of a campaign waged by the Texas department of the American Legion for the introduction into the schools of a flag etiquette code. Flag etiquette is to be made a part of the course in civics. The state textbook commission authorized the adoption of the flag code following the appearance before it recently of the state commander of the Legion, who submitted the code to the commission along with arguments showing why it should be adopted.

Bread Cleans Watches
Although the custom is very old, few people realize that bread is extensively used in the making of watches, writes S. Leonard Bastin in St. Nicholas. From very early times it has been the practice of watchmakers to employ a dough made by kneading fresh bread with water to remove foreign matter from the parts of timekeepers. Curiously enough, there is no known substance which will so completely free the small parts of a watch from oil and chips of metal as

POULTRY

BROODINESS AMONG HENS IS BIG WORRY

The egg production in many flocks of the heavier breeds is dropping badly due to the excessive number of broody hens. A bird that is penned immediately in the right kind of a broody coop, fed as she should be and not loaf more than 10 days, writes W. H. McNeely in the Dakota Farmer. Take them out of the nest the first night, pen them in a well-ventilated, well-lighted, slatted or wire-bottomed broody coop. Feed them plenty of good egg-making food, green material and fresh water and see that they are released as soon as they lose the notion and they will pay you for the trouble. It is a good idea to have a special color of celluloid leg bands for broody hens and put one on a hen every time she goes broody. Sell the ones that get befecked like Fiji Islanders and use ones without any of these bands in the breeding pens next year.

It takes feed and time to produce chicken blood, so do not allow the mite to steal part of your income. A thorough spraying or painting of the roosts and nests in the poultry house with some good coal tar disinfectant will pay dividends. Lice are irritants and keep the hen so busy fighting them that she has no time to work, so better kill them, too. Applying sodium fluorid powder, a pinch in fluffy feathers below vent, one under each wing and between body and legs and one on the back of the head should rid the hens of all lice but it will not kill the eggs. Repeat in about ten days when the eggs will be hatched and no more laid. Another way to accomplish the same thing is to mix one ounce of sodium fluorid with each gallon of warm water and dip each chicken, making sure that the feathers are all soaked to the skin. This must be done early on a warm, sunshiny day so that the hens will be dry before night. Repeat in ten days.

Brooder Pneumonia Will Cause Loss of Chickens

Heavy loss of young chicks is often due to brooder pneumonia, a disease caused by dusty or moldy litter, musty feed, or severe exposure. Brooder pneumonia is sometimes associated with bacillary white diarrhea as the symptoms of the two diseases are much alike. The diseased chicks often breathe with difficulty, the lungs are usually diseased, and are found, upon opening dead birds, to be of a dark color and rather solid instead of light pink color and fluffy. About the only remedy is to remove the cause. Clean sand is probably the best floor covering for the brooder during the first two weeks, followed by a litter of some kind. Be especially careful that the litter is free from dust or mold. Clover chaff if not dusty, or bright clean straw may be used.

Standardized Product Is Gaining in Popularity

It does not require any special knowledge or marketing skill to sell a standardized product but not even an expert can market, in a satisfactory way, an ungraded product. Farmers and egg producers should keep in close touch with the movement now under way looking toward the grading and standardizing of eggs on a basis that will lessen the losses incident to the marketing of that product. If a good standardized quality of eggs is put upon the market it will tend to increase the consumption of eggs and therefore strengthen the demand and consequently result in better prices and more profit to the producers.

Poultry Notes

Overfeeding is the common cause of loss in young turkeys.
Caponize the cockerels and produce heavy roosters for winter.
A cornfield is an ideal place for growing chicks and they will continue to thrive in hot weather.
Keep the poultry, as well as all other living things on the farm, on good terms with you by keeping on good terms with them.
An egg is 65 per cent water in content. This alone indicates the importance of fresh water supply to the laying flock.
Little turkeys are somewhat delicate at first—but after they are six weeks of age they are really more hardy than chickens.
Nests should be arranged so the fowls can get into them readily without being obliged to jump down upon the eggs in the nest.
"Pip" is simply a cough or sound indicating obstruction of the nostrils. A drop of eucalypti injected into each nostril often serves as a remedy.
Ducklings require artificial heat or the brooding of a mother hen for two or three weeks. Their coops should be kept clean, something easier to say than to do.

THRIFT IN PUBLIC EDUCATION

The recent session of the National Education Association at Washington, D. C., emphasized the importance of thrift, teaching economy in school administration and introduction of universal savings systems.

Arthur H. Chamberlain, chairman of the National Committee on Thrift Education, advocates courses of study on these lines in the school systems of Our Country.

General introduction of school savings, deposit systems, with millions of small depositors drawing interest, are to be introduced in the common schools and colleges.

Progressive banking houses are taking up this matter on practical lines to counteract the tendency of children learning to spend money before they have acquired earning ability.

The morality and stability of character, to say nothing about individual honesty and saving habits, of the child can be conserved by such systems for the welfare and prosperity of the individual, the family and Our Country.

Zen of The Y.D.

A NOVEL OF THE FOOTHILLS

by Robert Stead

AUTHOR OF "THE COW PUNCHER," "THE HOMESTEADERS," "NEIGHBORS," ETC.

COPYRIGHT BY ROBERT STEAD

"A suit for a fellow about my size," he explained. "He's visitin' out at the ranch, an' he hefts about the same as me. Put in one of them Hereford shirts on a collar."

Y.D. tucked the package surreptitiously in his room and awaited the day of Zen's marriage with mingled emotions.

Zen, yielding to Transley's importunities, had at last said that it should be Christmas day. The wedding would be in the house, with the leading ranchers and farmers of the district as invited guests, and the general understanding was to be given out that the countryside as a whole would be welcome. All could not be taken care of in the house, so Y.D. gave orders that the hay was to be cleared out of one of the barns and the floor put in shape for dancing. Open house would be held in the barn and in the bunkhouse, where substantial refreshments would be served to all and sundry.

Christmas day dawned with a reasonable nip to the air, but the sun rose warm and bright. As the hour approached Zen found herself possessed of a calmness which she deemed worthy of Y.D.'s daughter. She had elected to be unattended as she had no very special girl friend, and that seemed the simplest way out of the problem of selecting someone for this honor. She was, however, amply assisted with her dressing, and the color of her fine cheeks burned deeper with the compliments to which she listened with modest appreciation.

At a quarter to the hour it was discovered that Y.D. had not yet dressed for the occasion. He was, in fact, engaged with Landson in making a tentative arrangement for the distribution of next year's hay. Zen had been so insistent upon an invitation being sent to Mr. and Mrs. Landson, that Y. D., although fearing a snub for his pains, at last conceded the point. He had done his neighbor rather less than justice, and now he and Landson, with the assistance of a well-filled stone jug, were burying the hatchet in a corner of the bunkhouse.

"Dang this dressin'," Y.D. remonstrated when a message demanding instant action reached him. "Landson, hear me now! I wouldn't take a million dollars for that girl, y' understand—and I wouldn't trade a manny cayuse for another!"

So, grumbling, he found his way to his room and began a wrestle with his "store" clothes. Before the fight was over he was being reminded through the door that he wasn't waiting, and everybody was waiting. At the last moment he discovered that he had neglected to buy shoes. There was nothing for it but his long ranch boots, so on they went.

He sought Zen in her room. "Will I do in this?" he asked, feeling very sheepish.

Zen could have laughed, or she could have cried, but she did neither. She sensed in some way the fact that to her father this experience was a positive ordeal. So she just slipped her arm through his and whispered: "Of course you'll do, you silly old duffer," and tripped down the stairs by the side of his ponderous steps.

After the ceremony the elder people sat down to dinner in the house, and the others in the bunk-house. Zen was radiant and calm; Transley handsome, delighted, self-possessed. His good luck was the subject of many a comment, both inside and out of the old house. He accepted it at its full value, and yet as one who has a right to expect that luck will play him some favors.

Suddenly there was a rush from outside, and Zen found herself being carried bodily away. The young people had decided that the dancing could wait no longer, so a half dozen hustlers had been deputed to kidnap the bride and "carry her to the barn, where the fiddles were already strumming. Zen insisted that the first dance must belong to Transley, but after that she danced with the young ranchers and cowboys with strict impartiality. And even as she danced all this representation of the countryside, that one upon whom her thoughts had turned so much should be missing.

She found herself watching the door. Surely it would have been only a decent respect to her—surely he might have helped to whirl her joyously away into the new life in which the past had to be forgotten. . . . How much better that they should part that way, than with the memories they had!

But Dennison Grant did not appear. Evidently he preferred to keep his memories. . . .

When at last the night had worn thin and it was time for the bridal couple to leave if they were to catch the morning train in town, and they had ridden down the foothill trails to the thunder of many accompanying hoof-beats, the old ranch became suddenly a place very quiet and still and alone. Y.D. sat down in the corner of the big room by the fire, and saw strange pictures in its dying embers. Zen. . . . Zen! . . . Transley was a good fellow, but how much a man will take with scarce a thank-you! . . . Presently Y.D. became aware of a hand resting upon his shoulder, and tingling from its fingertips came something akin to the almost forgotten rapture of a day long gone. He raised his great palm and took that slowly ageing hand, once round and fresh like Zen's, in his. Together they watched the fire die out in the silence of their empty house. . . .

CHAPTER X.

Grant occupied himself with the work of the ranch that winter, spring and summer. Occasional news of Mrs. Transley filtered through; she was too prominent a character in that countryside to be lost track of in a season. But anything which reached Grant came through accidental channels; he sought no information of her, and turned a deaf ear, almost, to what he heard. Then in the fall came an incident which immediately changed the course of his career.

It came in the form of an important-looking letter with an Eastern postmark. It had been delivered with other mail at the house, and Landson himself brought it down. Grant read it and at first stared at it somewhat blankly, as one not taking in its full portent.

"Not bad news, I hope?" said his employer, cloaking his curiosity in commiseration.

"Rather," Grant admitted, and handed him the letter. Landson read: "It is our duty to place before you information which must be of a very distressing nature, and which at the same time will have the effect of greatly increasing your responsibilities and opportunities. Unless you have happened to see the brief dispatches which have appeared in the press this letter will doubtless be the first intimation to you that your father and younger brother Roy were the victims of a most regrettable accident while motoring on a brief holiday in the South. The automobile in which they were traveling was struck by a fast train, and both of them received injuries from which they succumbed almost immediately.

"Your father, by his will, left all his property, aside from certain bequests to charity, to his son, Roy, but Roy had no will, and as he was unmarried, and as there are no other surviving members of the family except yourself, the entire estate, less the bequests already referred to, descends to you. We have not yet attempted an appraisal, but you will know that the amount is very considerable indeed. In recent years your father's business undertakings were remarkably successful, and we think we may conservatively suggest that the amount of the estate will be very much greater than even you may anticipate.

"The brokerage firm which your father founded is, temporarily, without a head. You have had some experience in your father's office, and as his solicitors for many years, we take the liberty of suggesting that you should immediately assume control of the business. A faithful staff are at present continuing it to the best of their ability, but you will understand that a permanent organization must be effected at as early a date as may be possible.

"Inability to locate you until after somewhat exhaustive inquiries had been made explains the failure to notify you by wire in time to permit of your attending the funeral of your father and brother, which took place in this city on the eighth instant, and was marked by many evidences of respect.

"We beg to tender our very sincere sympathy, and to urge upon you that you so arrange your affairs as to enable you to assume the responsibilities which have, in a sense, been forced upon you, at a very early date. In the meantime we assure you of our earnest attention to your interests.

"Yours sincerely,
"BARRETT, JONES, BARRETT,
"DEACON & BARRETT."
"Well, I guess it means you've struck out, and I've lost a good fortune," said Landson, as he returned the letter. "I'm sorry about your loss, Grant, and glad to hear of your good luck, if I may put it that way. What do you reckon she's worth?" he asked, after waiting as long as his patience would permit.

"Oh, I don't know. Possibly six or eight millions by this time."

"Six or eight millions? Jehoshaphat! What will you do with it?"

"Look after it. Mr. Landson, you know that I have never worried about money; if I had I wouldn't be here. I don't care for the money, but any son-of-a-gun who takes it from me is a better man than I am, and I'll sit up nights at both ends of the day to beat him at his own game. Now, just as soon as you can line up some one to take charge I'll have to beat it."

Grant put his affairs in order as quickly as possible, and started for the East with a trunkful of clothes. But even before he started one thought had risen up to haunt him. He crashed it down, but it would insist. If only this had happened a year ago. . . .

Grant reached his old home city late at night, and after a quiet cigar and a stroll through some of the half-forgotten streets he put up at one of the best hotels. He was deferentially shown to a room about as large as the whole Landson house; soft lights were burning under pink shades; his feet fell noiselessly on the thick carpets. He placed a chair by a window, where he could watch the myriad lights of the city, and tried to appraise the new sphere in which he found himself. It would be a very different game from riding the ranges or roping steers, but it would be a game, nevertheless; a game in which he would have to stand on his own resources even more than in those brave days in the foothills. He relished the notion of the game even while he was indifferent to the prize. He had no clear idea what he eventually should do with his wealth; that was something to think about very carefully in the days and years to come. In the meantime his job was to handle a big business in the way it should be handled.

He turned the water into his bath; there was a smell about the towels, the linen, the soap, that was very grateful to his nostrils. . . .

In the morning he passed by the office of Grant & Son. He did not turn in, but pursued his way to a door where a great brass plate announced the law firm of Barrett, Jones, Barrett, Deacon & Barrett. He smiled at this elaboration of names; it represented three generations of the Barrett family and two sons-in-law. Grant found himself speculating upon a name for the Landson ranch; it might have been Landson, Grant, Landson, Murphy, Skinner & Peter. . . .

As a result of his interview it was arranged that Mr. Jones, second luminary of the firm of legal lights, should take Grant's affairs under his particular care until the young Westerner felt safe in his new saddle. When Grant, accompanied by Jones, finally appeared at the office of his father's firm he was received with a deference amounting almost to obsequiousness. Murdoch, the chief clerk, and manager of the business in all but title, who had known him in the old days when he had been "Mr. Denny," bore him into the private office which had for so many years been the sacred recess of the senior Grant. Only big men or trusted employees were in the habit of passing those silent green doors.

"Well, Murdy, old boy, how goes it?" Grant had said when they met, taking his hand in a husky grip.

"Not so bad, sir; not so bad, considering the shock of the accident, sir. And we are all so glad to see you—we who knew you before, sir."

"Listen, Murdy," said Grant. "What's the idea of all the sirs?"

"Why," said the somewhat abashed official, "you know you are now the head of the firm, sir."

"Quite so. Because a chauffeur neglected to look over his shoulder I am converted from a cow puncher to a sir. Well, go easy on it. If a man has native dignity in him he doesn't need it piled on from outside."

"Very true, sir. I hope you will be comfortable here. Some memorable matters have been transacted within these walls, sir. Let me take your hat and cane."

"Cane? What cane?"

"Your stick, sir; didn't you have a stick?"

"What for? Have you rattlers here? Oh, I see—more dignity. No, I don't carry a stick. Perhaps when I'm old—"

"You'll have to try and accommodate yourself to our manners," said Jones, when Murdoch had left the room. "They may seem unnecessary, or even absurd, but they are sanctioned by custom, and, you know, civilization is built on custom. The poet speaks of a freedom which 'slowly broadens down from precedent to precedent.' Precedent is custom. Never defy custom, or you will find her your master. Honor her and she will be your slave. Now I think I shall leave, while you try and attune yourself to the atmosphere of these surroundings."

So this was the room which had been the inner shrine of the firm of Grant & Son. The quarters were new since he had left the East; the furnishings revealed that large simplicity which is elegance and wealth. A painting of the elder Grant hung from the wall; Dennison stood before it, looking into the sad, capable, gray eyes. What had life brought to his father that was worth the price those eyes reflected? Dennison found his own eyes moistening with memories now strangely poignant. . . .

"Environment," the young man murmured, as he turned from the portrait, "environment, master of everything! And yet—"

A photograph of Roy stood on the mantelpiece, and beside it, in a little silver frame, was one of his mother. . . . Grant pulled himself together and fell to an examination of the papers in his father's desk.

Grant's first concern was to get a grasp of the business affairs which had so unexpectedly come under his direction. To accomplish this he continued the practice of the Landson ranch; he was up every morning at five, and had done a day's work before the members of his staff began to assemble. For advice he turned to Jones and Murdoch, and the management of routine affairs he left entirely in the hands of the latter. He had soon convinced himself that the camaraderie of the ranch would not run in a staff of this kind, so while he was formulating plans of his own he left the administration to Murdoch. He found this absence of companionship the most unpleasant feature of his position; it seemed that his wealth had elevated him out of the human family. He wavered between amusement and annoyance over the deference that was paid him. Some of the staff were openly terrified at his approach.

Not so Miss Bruce. Miss Bruce had tapped on the door and entered with his personal correspondence to me. I worked at this desk in the corner, and had a private office through the door there into which I slipped when my absence was preferred."

She had crossed the room, and instead of standing respectfully before Grant's desk, had come around the end of it. Grant looked up with some surprise, and noted that her features were not without comprehending qualities.

"How do you think you're going to like your job?" she asked.

Grant swung around quickly in his chair. No one in the staff had spoken to him like that; Murdoch himself would not have dared address him in so familiar a manner. He decided to take a firm position.

"Were you in the habit of speaking to my father like that?"

"Your father was a man well on in years, Mr. Grant. Every man according to his age."

Grant looked at her keenly. Whatever her words, he had to admit that her tone was not impertinent.

"You appear to be a very advanced young woman," he remarked. "I am a little surprised—I had hardly thought my father would select young women of your type as his confidential secretaries."

"Private stenographer," she corrected. "A little extra side on a title is neither here nor there. Well, I will admit that I rather took your father's breath at times; he discharged me so often it became a habit, but we go to have a sort of tacit understanding that that was just his way of blowing off steam. You see, I did his work, and I did it right. I never lost my head when he got into a temper; I could always read my notes even after he had spent most of the day in death grips with some business rival. You see, I wasn't afraid of him, not the least bit. And I'm not afraid of you."

"I don't believe you are," Grant admitted. "You are a remarkable woman. I think we shall get along all right if you are able to distinguish between independence and bravado." He turned to his desk, then suddenly looked up again. He was homesick for some one he could talk to frankly.

"I don't mind telling you," he said abruptly, "that the deference which is being showered upon me around this institution gives me a good deal of a pain. I've been accustomed to working with men on the same level. They took their orders from me, and they carried them out, but the older hands called me by my first name, and any of them swore back when he thought he had occasion. I can't fit in to this 'Yes sir,' 'no sir,' 'Very good, sir,' way of doing business. It doesn't ring true."

Quick Witted, but—

Afraid to breathe, almost, the returned reveller crept quietly into his bedchamber as the gray dawn was breaking. Sitting on the edge of the bed, he cautiously undid his boots. But, with all his care, his wife stirred in bed, and he presently was all too well aware of a pair of sleepy eyes regarding him over the edge of the sheet.

"Why, Tom," yawned the little woman, "how early you are this morning!"

"Yes, my dear," replied Tom, stifling a yawn. "I've got to go to Montreal for the firm today."

And replacing his footgear the wretched man dragged his achings limbs out again into the cold and heartless streets.

Frocks of Eyelet Embroidery; Adds Charm to the Costume

LOVELIER than the loveliest are the exquisite allover eyelet embroidery frocks which lend their colorful charm to the summer landscape. Small wonder is it that untidy wavers between choice of an allover lace frock and one of eyelet embroidery.

Evidently stylists who create from this exquisite material are guided by the thought that "beauty unadorned is adorned the most." The exclusive elegance of the eyelet fabrics is all-sufficient, relying for its best display on the simplest designing. That is why the highly fashionable eyelet embroidery frock is nothing more or less than a one-piece slip. Of course, it may have a few bandings of lingerie are falling to play up to the rules and by-laws of the fashion game. Oh, yes, you might include in the above list one's night-dress envelope pocket-book, and even one's crope de chine or fine batiste nightgown is daintily monogrammed according to style decree.

Madame Mode insists that somewhere, somehow most costumes, especially of the sports-wear type, bear the stamp of her approval in the form of hand-worked or machine-stitched hieroglyphics which at least look like a monogram. Of course we all know that the camouflaged monogram is simply for decorative purposes; not even the learned scholar who trans-crepe, as the model in the picture shows, but some are made without a vestige of trimming.

The batiste straight-line frock, the season's most fashionable type, by the way, is recommended to the home dressmaker who is calculating on buying as few yards as possible of handsome eyelet allover for "just one more" midsummer frock to add to her wardrobe.

One can purchase choice batiste all-over done in black on white, or in pastels of green, orchid or blue on white. Also solid shades are obtainable and pure white is the standard-bearer of them all.

The last word in midsummer fashions is the knee-length tunic of eyelet embroidery, either white or cream, worn over a black satin skirt or slip. The lutes inscriptions of past centuries can decipher the monogram motifs of the modern stylist. For all that, we have taken quite a fancy to these monogram effects, and they are playing a prominent part in the embellishment of our wearing apparel.

Indicative of the monogram mode is the handsome frock pictured to the right, which displays a cleverly designed motif. Of course it "doesn't mean anything," none of them do, they simply "make believe" one's initials. However, they play a decorative part and that is the idea. This girlish frock of tan-colored flannel laces further claim to style in its binding of all edges with red leather matched to that used for the monogram.

As popular as the monogram idea is that of the watch fob ornament. That sumptuous tunic are beltless, and they incorporate inserts of pin-tucked net and flax linen.

Organic embroidery in Italian cut-work design is a new relation to the better-known English eyelet, and it, too, is one of fashion's exclusive mid-summer fabrics. Nine-inch borders to match this exquisite organic Italian cut-work are one of the inducements offered to nullify fate to overspend her monthly allowance.

A picturesque lingerie touch is given to many a black or colorful satin in the way of a panel or apron effect of shimmering eyelet batiste, interwoven and possibly matched with deep cuffs and collar.

If your blouse, hat, scarf, parasol or bathing suit bears not an embroidered monogram motif, then you ladies' frocks are not necessarily expensive. Not only as a costume accessory, but as a millinery trimming detail, the gently laced watch fob has featured extensively this season. Many a tailored hat has, as its only note of trimming, a rhinestone-set silver watch fob suspended from a strap of grosgrain ribbon. Silver monogram slide buckles are also part of the millinery trimming program.

Logan county topped the list with 1,750,017 bushels of winter wheat, or 15 per cent. of the state's production.

Delta county had 10,400 acres of improved fruits land, or 34 per cent. of the state's total.

Teller county holds the banner for gold production with an output of $4,031,659, or 43 per cent. of all produced in the state.

Eagle county ranks first in copper production with an output of $216,000, or 44 per cent. It also has first place in zinc production with an output of $627,000, or 48 per cent.

San Miguel county produced $379,500 worth of lead, or 31 per cent.; and $2,282,000 of silver, or 39 per cent. Denver county led in population with 4,739 by the square mile and Boulder county was second with 4337 per square mile, exceeding Pueblo county. Denver also has 25 per cent., or $388,170,010 of the assessed valuation of railroads and utilities.

Cumbres Pass, in Conejos county, has the greatest rainfall, or 33.10 inches. Park and Mesa county, is the warmest place with a mean temperature of 54.7 degrees. Fraser, in Grand county, is the coldest, with a mean temperature of 31.4 degrees. Lamar, in Prowers county, has the longest growing season, averaging 171 days. Las Animas is the largest county with 3,077,790 acres, or 5 per cent. of the state's area.

U. S. Closes Railroad Accounts

Washington.—Accounts between the government and eight railroads arising from the wartime operation have been closed and the railroad administration will collect $106,805,000 from six of them while paying $85,000,000 to the other two. The roads indebted to the government included Texas & Pacific, $1,400,000, and Waterloo, Cedar Falls & Northern, $500,000. Accounts with shore lines controlled temporarily by the government during the war and settled by the government included the paying in White Sulphur Springs & Yellowstone Park railway $3,000.

Naval Oil Lands Surveyed

Denver.—Rear Admiral Harry H. Rousseau of the civil engineering department of the United States Navy, recently appointed receiver for the Federal Naval Oil Reserve No. 1 in California, reached Denver early in a survey of the huge deposits of all shale in what is known as the government Naval Oil Shale Reserve No. 1, in Colorado. Admiral Rousseau refused to comment on the results of his examination, saying that his report was for the navy only.

Pacifists and Gov. Bryan Attack Defense Day Plan—Coolidge Upholds It.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CONFIRMED pacifists and certain political opponents of the Republican administration, including Governor Bryan of Nebraska, Democratic vice presidential nominee, and the LaFollette group, are making a political issue of the national "defense day," September 12, planned by the War department. They insist that it is to be a "mobilization day," because some of the department statements inadvertently called it so, and they describe it as a "militaristic gesture."

President Coolidge did what he could to dispel this idea by sending a long letter to Secretary Libby of the National Council for the Prevention of War, in the course of which he said: "What is proposed for September 12 is merely a compliance with the purposes of the national defense law of 1920. It is not a mobilization, and the people who first attached to it the term 'mobilization day' and then proceeded to condemn it have been utterly unfair. Most of them, I am sure, have been innocent of intent to be unfair, but they have been misled. 'Profoundly hoping that the outlawing of war from this world may be accomplished, I am yet unable to detect any inconsistency in giving my approval to the program of defense day. I wish crime might be abolished; but I would not therefore abolish courts and police protection. I wish war might be made impossible, but I would not leave my country unprotected meanwhile.

"The defense test seems to me a means to assure the fullest efficiency to the extremely modest defense force our country maintains."

Governor Bryan disagreed with the President's statements and announced that he did not favor any plan "contemplating mobilization of the civil or industrial resources of the country or anything else that savors of a national holiday devoted to preparation for wars." He said, however, that he would issue general orders to assemble National Guard troops of Nebraska "for inspection and practice in military activities."

John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for the Presidency, announced that he agreed with the views expressed by the governor of Nebraska. He added: "It is one thing to keep the military organization of the country in adequate practice; it is quite another to encourage demonstrations that can be nothing else at a time when every energy should be bent in getting the world back to peace and to work, cutting the prejudices and passions growing out of the World war and encouraging useful trade and commerce. In all these America should take the lead."

Nearly all the state governors dissented from Bryan's views and the plans of the War department are going ahead with apparently the general approval of the people of the country. Senator LaFollette's campaign speakers, it is said, are preparing to raise the cry of a choice between "militaristic Coolidge" and "peaceful LaFollette" in sections where they think it will make a lot of votes for the independent candidate.

INTEREST in the LaFollette candidacy does not die down, because there is always the chance that it may throw the election of a President into congress. His followers are still hoping for the support of the great bulk of the union labor vote, and at the close of the week the executive council of the American Federation of Labor met to decide whether or not he should receive the endorsement of the federation. The decision is not known at this writing, but President Samuel Gompers issued a statement in advance stating his opposition to partisan action by the federation. He praised LaFollette for not falling into the "snare" set by the communists of the Farmer-Labor convention, but added: "I say with complete assurance that at the present moment our minds are open and our conclusions will be arrived at during our sessions as the result of our consideration of those facts. There is but one thing that can be said definitely at this time. It is that the American Federation of Labor will, in this campaign, abide by its time-tried policy of nonpartisan action. We shall consider men and platforms upon the basis of their service, past and promised to the wage earners and the great masses of the people of our country. We shall commit ourselves to no political party as partisans to a party."

Leading members of the Woman's party, replying to a call by LaFollette managers asking the support of "progressive women's organizations in every state," called attention to the fact that the LaFollette convention did not endorse the party's program for full equal rights for women, its record in this respect pleasing them no better than those of the Republicans and the Democrats, who took no action on the measure.

REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CHAIRMAN BUTLER has gone to Washington to help prepare for the ceremony of formally notifying Mr. Coolidge of his nomination. This event will be staged on August 14 in Continental Memorial hall and the national committee says it will be the biggest Republican rally of the campaign. The hall will seat only 1,700, but many thousands gathered outside will hear the proceedings through loud speakers. The notable guests will be numerous. Little less elaborate will be the notification of Charles G. Dawes at his home in Evanston, Ill., on August 19.

John W. Davis will be informed of his nomination by the Democrats at his Clarkburg residence on August 11, and it is certain that the Democrats, being ahead of their opponents in date, will not be behind them in making the event notable for enthusiasm and oratory. Mr. Davis' speech of acceptance is completed and has been tried out in private.

ACTIVITIES of the new grain marketing merger which has taken over the assets of five big elevator systems of the Middle West for the benefit of the farmer began last week. The new venture, however, has been refused the endorsement of the National Farmers Grain Dealers' association in which 5,000 grain elevators in the Middle West hold memberships. The association, in session last week in Des Moines, Iowa, adopted this resolution: "We do not favor any terminal marketing proposition of any sort unless all stock in it is held and owned by farmers' elevator companies and not by individuals; nor do we favor the entering of any farmers' co-operative elevator company into any terminal marketing venture until a sufficient number of other such companies have agreed to affiliate with the venture to insure control by the co-operative elevator companies; or until sufficient capital has been subscribed by such companies to properly finance the venture."

Reports of damage to the Canadian wheat crop, which resulted in a big jump in prices, have been denied, confirmed and denied again, and good rains of last week up there curbed the enthusiasm of the bulls considerably.

NO DEFINITE progress has yet been made in the allied conference in London, but on Thursday one of its committees began consideration of a new plan submitted by Premier Herriot for providing security for the proposed loan to Germany. It represents considerable concessions by France but certain features of it were not pleasing to the English. Briefly, Herriot proposes that a German default shall not be declared by the reparations commission unless a committee of five experts and representative bondholders, one of whom shall be an American, shall have given its opinion. Then the commission vote must be unanimous, otherwise the questions are to be submitted to an arbitral board of three with an American as president and one representative each of the majority and minority opinions in the reparations commission. In both cases of delegation of the commission's power an American would have the deciding vote. What the British do not like are provisions for the guarantee to France of the delivery by Germany of definite quantities of reparations in kind. Though the matter of the military evacuation of the Ruhr is not within the scope of the present conference, it has been discussed there, and so M. Herriot has proposed that as soon as Germany accepts the expert plan and fulfills the conditions, France will get out of the Hagen district, and that the other occupied districts shall be evacuated according to the speed with which Germany fulfills her obligations. If the other allies agree to this plan, the process of evacuation would be complete in about two years.

THE allied military control commission under General Walth, who succeeded General Nollet, last week broke off all relations with the German war department. It was asserted that General Von Seeckt, head of the German army, had demanded that the commission give forty-eight hours' notice before inspecting any German military organization or plant, and that the commission also post a notice at every place inspected that this was the last inspection of the German military forces that would be undertaken by the entente. General Walth was ordered by the French government to refuse absolutely all such demands and to report in Paris. According to the commission, the German war department has, by underhand methods, been able to train officers and men enough for an army vastly larger than that allowed by the Versailles treaty.

SECRETARY OF STATE HUGHES, in Europe as president of the American Bar association, has been scoring great successes in London, Paris, Berlin and other cities. Unofficially he undoubtedly is doing a lot toward bringing about agreement among the quarreling nations. The Germans look on his visit as a diplomatic step to make the London conference successful.

AFTER many days of severe fighting, the Brazilian government forces drove the rebels out of Sao Paulo and occupied that important city, the center of the revolt. It was announced that the rebellion was thus practically suppressed. Immediately steps were taken for the restoration of normal conditions in Sao Paulo. The civil authorities were reinstated, communication with Santos was restored and the banks and large industrial concerns were aided in formulating a general plan of reconstruction. Managers of American enterprises there have returned to put their properties in shape again. Many warehouses and factories were destroyed by shell fire or burned.

OUR intrepid trio of army flyers is on the way across the Atlantic ocean, headed for home. Wednesday the aviators flew from Brough, England, to Kirkwall in the Orkney Islands, off the north coast of Scotland and immediately prepared their plans for the jump from there to Hornaafjord, Iceland, a distance of 500 miles. They intended to take the air again Thursday, but the start was delayed when adverse weather reports were received. From Danish sources there were reports of very bad ice floes and huge icebergs and tremendous ice barriers along the Greenland coast, which it was feared would make difficult and dangerous the landing of the aviators there.

SOVIET Russia has almost given up hope of reaching an agreement with Great Britain, but is still trying, having now sent Joffe, its treaty expert, and Kaimoff, one of the Russian big four, to London. If they fail the Russian government, it is said, will issue an ultimatum to the British which is likely to result in war. Russia has accumulated immense stores of arms and ammunition, obtained from Germany and England, and may first make an attack on Persia in order to involve Great Britain. According to their secret treaty with Germany they can claim aid from Berlin any time up to the middle of August.

THERE is a threatening war cloud over the Balkans. Bulgarian irregulars have been invading Serbia and Greece and the Greek army is in readiness to cross the Bulgarian border. Communists financed by Moscow are doing their best to aggravate the situation.

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

KANSAS SPIRIT

In Chicago there is an informal organization known as the Midland Authors. Its members are people who write and live in the Middle West. Some are famous folk, most are not. Nearly all of them are proud of the fact that they have stuck to the country they know and love and have not let the whirlpool of publishing interests in New York suck them in.

There's one independent state where the native writers aren't content to depend on membership in an organization out of their own confines. The Kansas Authors' club has an interesting letterhead and an active organization all its own. The president lives in Manhattan, but it's Manhattan, Kan.

The vice president has created a most interesting life under conditions that some women would have fretted themselves ill over. She was a city girl with plenty of money. Just when she had finished high school and was ready to study for the stage her father lost all his money. That was in Chicago. Her secondary ambition was to write. So she wrote for the living that had to be made, but it was other folks' letters that she indited. Gradually she climbed up the ladder until she was head of the correspondence department of a great mail order house. In order to appreciate the height of that ladder, remember that on the catalogue and letters of a mail order store depend all the business that other stores pay salesmen up to $20,000 salaries for.

Then, as Mrs. James Patrick, she happily gave up the business career to move to a little Kansas village. There was no railroad within 30 miles of the "Gables," as the Patricks named the roofless that grew to be a charming ranch house adjoining the village. Then the railroad came through—so far south that the county seat moved down to the steel mills, and the Patricks followed, to make a new home at a new town, Santana.

Meanwhile Mae Patrick had caught the spirit of enjoying "the real things of life, friendship, love, the simple things, the brilliant minds, of which there are many in a small community, the poor and the wealthy, all the real people that one comes face to face with in the small place." She volunteered on many civic jobs, she served on the Republican state executive board, she worked on the committee appointed recently by Secretary Work to investigate Indian affairs. And always, she's kept to writing for sheer love of it. Just now, she says, she's putting together a series of sketches of "the real people of the great Southwest."

HAVE YOU AN ACRE OF DIAMONDS?

There's only one section of this country—or of any other—where "Miss Millie" would be a title of love and honor and distinction. Miss Millie, Mildred Lewis Rutherford undoubtedly was when, as a little girl, she pored over lessons at a beautiful solid mahogany school desk. Miss Millie she was at eighteen, when the world began to open before her, especially the gracious world of art and travel that the "Old South" liked to give its girls. And Miss Millie she still is, to an ever wider and more appreciative group, when, as president of the Lucy Cobb Institute of Athens, Ga., she guides other girls at the same precious old mahogany desks of her own girlhood.

It's been a life, she insists, lacking in the dramatic qualities that would make other girls want to read about her. But as it so commences to be able to see value in the very things that have been familiar through all the years? Not only to see that value, but to preserve it, to make it yield a living to oneself and a service to many others?

This is the essence of Miss Millie's achievement. Not long ago some of the hard-headed members of the Athens Chamber of Commerce went out to see whether there was really anything much out there at the old school. They found "big double reception parlors, furnished elegantly, but more like a comfortable home than the formal entry of an educational institution." They found the "George I. Seney collection of oils and water colors," pictures "of the old Cobb home, and of Lucy Cobb herself, rescued from the home of a family of erstwhile Cobb servants," historic furniture with legends of some of the best of southern culture adding to its luster, together with "model apartments for teachers' quarters and bathrooms everywhere," that appealed to their unlikable souls.

So they went back to their offices. And they picked out the member who had the gift of gab and asked him to write up what they'd seen.

He started his story with the tale of the Chautauqua lecture on "Acres of Diamonds." Remember it? The farmer who sold out and went to search for gold, while the wise man who bought the farm found a diamond mine when he scratched the worn hillsides.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Should Use Swamp-Root

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Form Dense Swamps
A mangrove swamp is a formation common on seacoasts and tidal river shores in tropical and sub-tropical climates. The dominant vegetation consists of mangrove trees interspersed with plants of similar habit. The accumulation of debris and mud among the roots and trunks builds up the land so that bays are filled and river banks extended until the streams are restricted to narrow channels between dense walls of trees which completely conceal the shores. Many such swamps are found on the coast of Florida.

Easy to Perceive
"There," said Sherlock Holmes, "sits the loneliest man in the world. Unmarried, unloved; no brothers or sisters, no little children to call him uncle; not even a landlady's child to smile at his return."
"Wonderful," gasped Doctor Watson. "How do you know all this?"
"Elementary, my dear Watson," replied the great detective; "he opened a package of cigarettes and threw the picture card away!"

On the Wrong Track
A young lady was given a position in a public library and the first applicant for a book sent her on a quest that had not ended when the superintendent happened along.
"How about the new girl?" asked that functionary of the clerk at the desk. "Has she had any previous library experience?"
"I fear not."
"Why do you surmise that?"
"This patron has asked for the Arabian Nights and she is still looking among the Ks."

Her Neighbor's Advice Helped Mrs. Frick

MRS. ADA FRICK PERRYSBURG, OHIO

"YOU can be just as healthy, strong and happy as I am," said one woman to her neighbor after listening to the description of her ailments,—"if you will take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My condition was very similar to yours, I suffered from those awful bearing down pains, weakness, backache, nervousness and headaches until I could hardly drag around. Today I am strong, well and happy because I followed the advice of a friend who had been greatly benefited by this old-fashioned root and herb medicine."

Nearly fifty years ago Lydia E. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass. prepared from medicinal roots and herbs Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Its fame has spread from shore to shore. You will now find in every community or neighborhood some woman who has been restored to health by its use, or has some friend who has. Therefore ask your neighbor.

Thousands of unsolicited testimonials such as the following are on file at the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., and prove the merit of this medicine. Therefore no woman should continue to suffer from such ailments.

Mrs. Frick Tells of Her Experience

PERRYSBURG, OHIO—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I suffered with pains in my sides all the time. I can't remember just how long I suffered but it was for some time. One day I was talking with a neighbor and I told her how I was feeling and she said she had been just like I was with pains and nervous troubles and she took the Vegetable Compound and it helped her. So then I went and got some and I certainly recommend it for it is good. Whenever I see a woman who is sick I try to get her to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. ADA FRICK, R. WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

MUST WATCH OTHERS

W. Bruce Cobb, associate magistrate of the traffic court, New York, says: "To prevent accidents you not only have to be prudent yourself, but have your car so far under control as to offset as far as possible the imprudence of others, whether motorists or pedestrians. Experienced motorists all agree that what they most fear is 'the other fellow.'"

Magistrate Cobb also gives sound advice when he says: "Don't drive if you have any mental or physical disability, habit or addiction that renders operation by you unsafe, either for yourself or others. Many persons having such disabilities as bad vision, deafness or serious heart ailments, are unbelievably stubborn and selfish in their belief they should be allowed to drive a powerful mechanical vehicle."

PATROL HIGHWAYS

Patrolling streets and highways is a much better plan than establishing speed traps. Patrolling is better than having officers hide behind trees, signs and poles so as to dart out after the offending motorist. Often when a traffic officer goes after a single offender a dozen other cars will speed behind him.

In case you get into an accident don't hurry away. To do so is a criminal offense in most states. Instead co-operate with the police, get information from witnesses if you think about it and make pencil sketches of what happened, too.

The man who drives away from an accident has little chance in court later, as scores have learned.

DELAYS COSTLY

According to a report made by the Committee on Regional Plan of New York and its Environs street traffic congestion in Manhattan causes a loss estimated at $500,000 a day, while for the area in the region known as New York and its environs the estimated loss is $1,000,000 a day. These figures are reached by comparison with other communities where careful estimates were possible. The loss in Worcester, Mass., was found to be $85,000 daily; in Cincinnati it was $100,000, and in Chicago, $200,000.

Not many cities will have the same problems as New York but every city should have foresight and prepare now to meet the time when there will be more motor vehicles in use.

GOOD ADVICE

Study every detail of the law of your community affecting motor cars and then observe the law carefully. For example, make sure you have an officially approved lens and light controlling device. Make sure the device is properly adjusted to your car.

Sound your horn in approaching a "blind" corner, a curve, a hilltop, or where there is not a clear view.

Use your best efforts to keep your car free from smoking.

Extra care is necessary in crossing most bridges. Accidents on bridges are usually serious ones.

Promptly turn out of the tracks when signalled by a street car in the rear to do so. The street car cannot turn out.

ORANGE TAIL LIGHTS

A. H. Ridd, chief signal engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad System, advocates orange colored tail lights because a red light ordinarily means stop but not when attached to the rear of a vehicle.

During a single year nearly 100 of the Pennsylvania Railroad gates were crashed through by drivers who went to the left or the right of the red light, thinking they were passing cars.

A Northern Pacific train stopped at a crossing one time at night and while standing there one car ran into the left hand side and another ran into the right hand.

When you start to pass a red light know what you are doing.

EXAMINE BRAKES

Be sure your brakes are in good working order. Investigation by police departments in numerous cities has shown that from 15 to 40 per cent of the motor cars examined had defective brakes.

Automobile clubs and dealers and motor car owners should see to it for their own safety and that of pedestrians that their respective states have adequate laws affecting brakes on motor vehicles.

When a car is running twenty miles an hour it should be possible to stop it within 37 feet, otherwise the brakes are defective. When brakes are applied the marks on the pavement should be about even, otherwise the brakes are inefficient.

PATAGONIA-NOGALES ROAD IS TURNED OVER TO STATE

The Patagonia-Nogales road, 22 miles long, has been turned over to the state highway department and will be kept in repair in future by that department, according to the county supervisors.

The road long has been the terror of autoists, owing to its poor condition, and the actin of the county supervisors is received with delight by the motoring public.

At its regular monthly meeting, last Monday, the board passed a resolution turning the road over to the state highway department and the state will maintain the road in future, it being a continuation of the state highway from the Cochise county line. Patagonia.

The county turned over to the state $10,000 for road work and the state will add to this amount $5000 and work will begin in the near future on the much-needed repairs and maintenance. A crew of maintenance employees will attend to the upkeep of the highway from Patagonia to the county seat.

The present route of the highway probably will be followed mainly, but grades will be reduced and the road widened where necessary.

The Patagonia-Nogales road is one of the most scenic highways in the southeastern part of Arizona, and when the thoroughfare is put into first-class condition much traffic now diverted because of the road's poor condition will pass through Patagonia, adding to the town an asset in advertising that it could get in no other manner.

SALT LAKE SILVER CONFERENCE

Silver producers of the North and South American continents will meet in Salt Lake on August 6 for what promises to be one of the most important conferences in the history of the white metal.

Attendance at the convention is not limited to mine operators. It will also include representatives of smelting and refining concerns, international bankers and brokers, members of the United States Senate and Commission of Gold and Silver Inquiry, the U. S. Bureau of Mines, and nationally known economists, engineers and business men.

A committee of the silver producers, fact-finding committee, will report on the practicality of a silver export association.

The committee has already sold 3, 200,000 ounces of silver to Poland as a step toward resumption of silver coinage in Europe.

A plan for permanent organization of silver producers will be submitted by a committee composed of Alfred Harrell of California, Henry M. Rives of Nevada and W. I. Snyder of Utah. Arrangements for the meeting are being made by the Utah mining men through the Utah Chapter of the American Mining Congress and the Salt Lake Chamber of Commerce.

HARRY CONNER WEDS

Harry T. Conner, one of the most popular young men of Nogales, and Miss Thelma Irene Dennis were united in marriage at the rectory by the Rev. O. A. Smith. The wedding took place July 26 and was kept a secret until this week.

The bride is an Arizona girl and is popular with the younger set. The bridegroom is conducting a tailor shop in the county seat and is a World War veteran.

PATAGONIA WOMEN HAVE MUSIC STUDY CLUB

The women of Patagonia organized a club Tuesday afternoon at the Commercial hotel for the study of the theory of music, the stories of the opera and the lives of great musicians.

Mrs. P. M. Etchells read an article on "Theory," by E. R. Kwoeger; Mrs. Yost read the story of the "Farewell to the Piano," by Beethoven, and played the solo by that name on the piano.

The club is under the leadership of Mrs. Yost. All who are interested in the study of music are invited to join. The club will meet every two weeks, and the first official meeting will be held Monday at 2:30 p. m. at the Commercial hotel.

Mrs. E. E. Bethell will tell of the life of Richard Wagner, Miss Sjoborg will tell the story of the opera, "Lohengrin"; Mrs. E. H. Evans will play a selection from "Lohengrin," and the remainder of the time will be spent studying musical notations.

SCOTT WHITE FOR STATE CORPORATION COMMISSIONER

Scott White of Phoenix, who is a candidate for the office of Corporation Commissioner has been a resident of the state for 40 years. He has always been a Democrat and has served in official capacities in county and U. S. government service.

For several years he was Receiver in the United States Land Office at Phoenix and at one time was sheriff of Cochise county.

He is asking the voters to support him at the primary election entirely on his public record and fitness for the position he seeks.

JEALOUS WOMAN USES KNIFE

Tombstone officers communicated with Sheriff H. J. Brown early this week of a cutting affray which occurred in Garden Canyon that resulted in the arrest the same day by Under-sheriff Pat Patterson and Serg. Noble of the 25th Infantry of Martina Montes, who is alleged to have used a knife on another woman during a jealous quarrel.

The Montes woman is being held in Tombstone to await the result of the stabbing of her victim.

COPPER'S FUTURE BRIGHTER

Tucson.—John Carter Anderson, consulting mining engineer, forecasts a better future for copper. In a recent statement made here he said:

"The upward movement in copper metal and copper shares, which started about two weeks ago, gives every indication of reflecting a sound condition in the industry and presaging a steady and continued rise which should carry the price of copper metal to a point high enough to permit a very profitable operation of Arizona mines."

CALLEES CONFERS WITH BANKERS

While in Nogales last Saturday, en route to Mexico City from a short visit to his home in Hermosillo, Sonora, Gen. P. Elias Calles, president elect of Mexico, held a conference with leading Santa Cruz county bankers, a discussion taking place over the recent order by President Alvaro Obregon providing for a 25 per cent return to Mexico of all exportations of the precious metals.
