CARL HAYDEN PRAISES DAVIS AND URGES SUPPORT FOR HUNT

In a speech Sunday night at the Patagonia opera house, U. S. Representative Carl Hayden brought out clearly the difference between the Republican high tariff and the Democratic tariff for revenue only. He touched upon the effect a vote for La Follette in Arizona might have on the final results, and gave his views on the Colorado river compact. In part, he spoke as follows:

"You no doubt often have been told that there is very little difference between the two major parties. That is absolutely incorrect, for there is a very profound discrepancy between policies in the tariff question alone, and which I believe is sufficient to place the Democratic party so far ahead of its opponents as to successfully withstand comparison. The failure of the tariff system has proven time and again to be a failure, as witness the levy on beet, which immediately dropped in price. We now hear considerable of a tariff on copper, which will be absolutely of no benefit to the industry. The United States now produces more copper than it can consume and consequently a tariff will not boost the price which, as in every other commodity, is governed by supply and demand. No commodity of which we have an exportable surplus is benefited by a protective tariff."

In speaking of Senator La Follette, Mr. Hayden said, in part:

"I have known the Wisconsin senator for years and admire him as a sincere statesman, but he knows, I know and you surely all realize that he has absolutely no chance of being elected president of the United States. He is a man who loves power and that is his sole reason for coming out for president—to keep that balance of power he possessed during the last session of congress by throwing the election into the House and Senate, where he will bargain with one or the other major party for his voting strength. That is what he did all through the last session, starting with the fight for the speaker of the House, and obtaining members on the most powerful committees in return for votes controlled by him."

AMERICANS KILLED IN MEXICO

of California early refused to even discuss the matter. The time came when it was imperative that California should know that the people of Arizona are unalterably determined to insist upon their fair share of the benefits to come from the development of the Colorado river. The proper official to make that declaration was the chief executive of this state. He did not hesitate, but boldly and defiantly announced that Arizona resented this rebuff from California and that this state would defend every right that we have in and to the Colorado river."

Others who spoke briefly were James Kerby, candidate for re-election to the office of secretary of state and Vernon S. Wright, candidate for state treasurer.

All of the speakers urged the election of the entire Democratic ticket, from precinct officers to the president of the United States. The meeting was well attended, many rural residents being present to hear the issues of the campaign explained by such an able and entertaining speaker as the Hon. Carl Hayden.

TWELVE REASONS WHY THE DEMOCRATIC TICKET SHOULD BE ELECTED

- 1. Davis and Bryan are progressives, have clean records and are men of outstanding ability.
2. They would raise national administration from insignificant mediocrity to dignity and distinction.
3. They are not only honest themselves, but they would demand and enforce honesty in all parts of the government.
4. They would turn out rascals of their own indignant free will without having to be forced into action.
5. They are the enemies of the protective high tariff which takes money out of the pockets of the general public to put it into the pockets of an already rich favored class.
6. They believe that public office is a public trust and not a private graft.
7. They believe in an erect, responsible foreign policy whereby America will frankly and courageously take her place in the council of nations instead of pussy-footing through the back door or sitting on the doorstep.
8. They believe in equitable taxation. They do NOT believe in removing taxes from the excessively rich and keeping them on the less fortunate, as the Mellon plan proposed.
9. They believe labor, as well as capital, should get a square deal.
10. The pledge themselves to the Democratic policy of benefits for all the people as opposed to special favors to special classes.
11. They advocate the ratification of the Child Labor Amendment to the Constitution, and the protection of women in industry.
12. Their election means honesty at home, honor abroad and world peace and prosperity.

Twelve Reasons Why the Republican Administration Should Be Rejected

- 1. Fall.
2. Daugherty.
3. Forbes.
4. Siemp.
5. Deuby.
6. Failure to take action against corrupt officials until forced to do so by legislative action.
7. Failure of President Coolidge in leadership as shown by a Republican congress refusing to co-operate with him.
8. Failure in fiscal legislation by attempting to remove taxes from the very rich and at the same time keep them on others.
9. Failure to give relief from an extortionate tariff by adhering to the Fordney Act and refusing even to exercise the president's discretionary power to lower duties on monopolized necessities.
10. Failure in its foreign policy which makes America a hanger-on instead of a participant in international councils.
11. Failure to maintain the American merchant marine through the destruction of our foreign trade by a policy of grab all and give nothing.
12. Failure of administration by a general attitude of negation, inaction and stagnation toward the vital problems of the day.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

British Labor Government Defeated—Chang Likely to Win in China.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

RAMSAY MACDONALD and his Labor cabinet went down to defeat in the British house of commons Wednesday night and the prime minister decided to have parliament dissolved and appeal to the country immediately in a general election. The crisis, which had been expected, came not over the Russian treaties but over the government's recent decision to drop the prosecution of John R. Campbell, editor of a Communist paper, who was charged with inciting sedition. MacDonald and Colonial Minister Thomas defended the action of Attorney General Sir Patrick Hastings in that case when it was attacked in the house. The Conservatives moved a vote of censure and the Liberals, who had been supporting the Labor government, proposed an amendment calling for an inquiry. The prime minister declared the government could not accept the amendment, which he characterized as a "mean and crooked party maneuver." However, it was carried by the decisive vote of 364 to 198, the combined strength of the Conservatives and the Liberals.

The contention of the opposition is that in the Campbell case the government brought the administration of the law into contempt by allowing party politics to govern. The attorney general told the commons that the Campbell article in question had been brought to his attention by the director of public prosecutions. He decided that it was prima facie seditious and he directed prosecution. Some time later a member of the Labor party told him that he had got the wrong man, Campbell having an excellent army record, being seriously wounded and decorated for bravery. He investigated and decided that on the grounds of public policy the prosecution was unwise and he dropped it.

King George hastened from Balmoral castle, Scotland, to London because of the crisis and Mr. MacDonald saw him on Thursday. It was understood the king, the big business leaders and many political chiefs were opposed to an election now, but the king yielded to MacDonald's demand.

Parliament was prorogued Thursday night, and October 29 was decided upon as the day for the general election. The Labor party really hopes to obtain a majority in the new parliament and thinks this a good time for the fight.

Once more the British Labor party has refused to permit the Communist party to affiliate with it. This action was taken at the Labor national conference in London. The vote being overwhelmingly against the Communists. It was declared the two parties have nothing in common, Communism being a product of czarism and war betrayal, in the words of Mr. MacDonald.

DEVELOPMENTS OF THE WEEK

In the war in China, coupled with private advisers from Peking, lead to the prediction that Chang Tso-lin, the Manchurian chief, will ultimately be victorious in his conflict with Gen. Wu Pei-fu and the government forces. Last Wednesday Chang's son led an army in a fierce attack on the Chihli troops that were entrenched on the north side of the great wall near Shunhaiwan and, after a bloody battle, he drove them through the main gate of the wall at Chihmen and followed them into the province of Chihli. Meanwhile land, air and sea forces were taking part in a big attack on Shanwan, but the Peking report said it was repulsed.

On the Shanghai front the Kiangsu and Fukien forces, which are operating for the Peking government, gained some important advantages over the Chekiang troops defending the city, the most notable being the capture of the town of Sunkiang, called the southern gateway to Shanghai.

General Chang is well supplied with troops, equipment and money. He has about five hundred airplanes and is constantly receiving munitions, which come by sea from Europe—from Italy, it is said. He has at least the moral support of Japan. Information from China says that Chang plans to restore the boy emperor to the throne and to re-establish the old mandarin regime.

MANEUVERS of the soviet Russians are complicating the situation in China. They have just signed an agreement with Chang whereby the management and control of the Chinese Eastern railroad has been turned over to them, putting Russia quite completely in command of the Far Eastern situation and, according to Karakhan, soviet ambassador to Peking, dealing America and the western powers a crushing blow. The former directors of the railroad have been arrested and probably will be executed. On announcement of the agreement with Chang the soviet embassy in Peking and soviet consulates general in Shanghai and elsewhere were opened and the red flag raised.

PREMIER ZAGHLOUL PASHA'S visit to London to induce Great Britain to abandon its control over Egypt and the Sudan and its protection of the Suez canal resulted in complete failure. The British government flatly rejected Zaghloul's demands. Its attitude is said to be due partly to the stand taken by Australia. Prime Minister Bruce told that dominion cabinet to decide on the evacuation of Egypt without the consent of the Pacific dominions. He said surrender of the control of Egypt to incompetent natives would set Australia back a hundred years and would compel her to reconsider the whole question of adherence to the empire.

ALL arrangements were made for placing the German reconstruction loan on the market this week. The American allotment will be underwritten by a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the First National bank and the National City bank of New York, and will be $110,000,000, or $10,000,000 more than had been expected. In fixing the final details the British financiers won a big victory over the Americans, for it was decided that everywhere except in America participation in the loan should be reckoned in pounds sterling instead of in dollars. This, it is considered, will have a great influence in maintaining England's financial prestige.

PACIFISTS from all parts of the world gathered in Berlin last week for the purpose of outlining a constitution for a super-league of nations. They held a big demonstration in Potsdam which so enraged the Nationalistic societies that thousands of their members assembled there the same day and attempted to put the pacifists to rout. Professor Basch of the French Sorbonne especially aroused the wrath of the Nationalists by his plea for Franco-German amity and the cavalry was called out to disperse the mobs that attacked him. Next day, however, several well-known German generals participated in the proceedings and warmly seconded General Vermaux when he declared: "A general strike of everybody, generals included, must be declared if there is another war."

The French government has approved Germany's admission to the League of Nations, conceding that she should be recognized as a great power and granted a permanent seat in the council. But it is insisted that Germany must assume all responsibilities shared by the other powers, which means she must sign the security and arbitration protocol without reservations and agree to the execution of all treaties.

Following the presentation of a balanced budget, Premier Herriot's cabinet has announced that it will not be possible to include further expenses of the devastated regions in the budget. Hereafter the war-ravaged parts of France must depend on public loans for their reconstruction work.

THERE has just been filed in the Federal court in New Orleans a suit that will be watched with considerable interest. Its purpose is to from office Walter L. Cohen, the negro controller of customs of that port, on the ground that he is of African blood and descent and therefore not a citizen of the United States, and that he is inherently incapable of becoming such. The petition attacks the validity of the Fourteenth amendment to the Constitution, setting forth that it was not legally adopted, not having been proposed by two-thirds of each house of congress nor ratified by three-fourths of the states. It is alleged that at that time eleven states were unconstitutionally deprived of their equal suffrage in the senate, that six states were by coercion forced to ratify the amendment, and that congress "did without power or authority unlawfully declare said amendment to the Constitution adopted and a part of the Constitution."

Of course, if the action were successful, it would result in the disenfranchisement of every negro in the United States. But neither Cohen nor the United States attorney down there seems to take the matter seriously.

AS THE Presidential campaign draws toward the close the fight is growing decidedly warm. Of course the managers of each of the three major candidacies claim they can see a clear victory for their ticket. And this is true, even of the LaFollette managers, who assert that Davis no longer has a chance and that the race is between Coolidge and the Wisconsin senator. Both LaFollette and the Democrats scoff at the theory of the Republicans that the Democrats are helping the third party in various states for the purpose of throwing the election into congress, where, it is figured out, the result would be the seating of Charles Bryan in the Presidential chair. But the G. O. P. leaders stiek to their story and are devoting their main efforts to confining LaFollette's victories to Wisconsin and perhaps Minnesota.

Senator Brookhart's action in holding the Coolidge-Dawes ticket and the story that Judge Kenyon was about to resign from the bench and take the stump for LaFollette have had a result that the Republicans believe may win the state of Iowa for Coolidge, if there had been any doubt of it. Judge Kenyon, who has a very large following in Iowa, sent word to General Dawes that the story was entirely untrue and that he was supporting the Republican national ticket.

Senator Borah of Idaho, who has not always been in accord with the administration, in opening his campaign declared he was running for re-election as a regular Republican and would take the stump for Coolidge, who, he said, "is the only President who has had the courage to combat the growing tendency toward bureaucracy and extravagance and, therefore, is one of the greatest men in the political history of the United States."

Mr. Davis, campaigning last week in the East, delivered many shrewd thrusts at the administration. In Buffalo, replying to a recent speech by Secretary of State Hughes, he especially attacked President Coolidge's foreign policy, saying:

"The truth is that since March 4, 1921, the control of America's foreign policy has rested neither with Presidents Harding nor Coolidge, nor with the secretary of state, but with a minority in the senate, to whose slightest nod both President and secretary have bowed without protest or complaint. Indeed, Mr. Hughes himself confesses that it has been necessary to conduct the affairs of his department in extralegal fashion, lest they might be 'tied up in controversy.'"

As the week closed Mr. Davis was in Indiana beginning a two weeks' tour of the Middle West.

WHILE the Zeppelin ZR 3 was being prepared in Germany for the trip across the Atlantic, our home-built dirigible, the Shenandoah, started on a great tour of the United States which, up to the time of writing, has been eminently satisfactory. From Lakehurst, N. J., she sailed southwest and west to Fort Worth, Tex., for her first stop, and thence went across the mountains to San Diego. Her course from there is up the Pacific coast to Camp Lewis at Lakeview, Wash. The ship is actually performing better than the schedule calls for, in both speed and fuel consumption.

In a special election the voters of San Francisco overwhelmingly endorsed a proposed $10,000,000 bond issue, the proceeds of which will be used to complete the Hotch-Hotely water project. This project, when completed, will supply the city with water for all purposes from sources in the Sierra Nevada.

Officials of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce have issued a denial of reports that the organization is backing a project to construct a new railroad from Los Angeles to Casper, Wyo., via Nevada, Utah and northern Colorado. A vice president of the chamber investigated the project several months ago, it was explained, and it was finally decided not to endorse the undertaking, on the ground that the Union Pacific system already serves the territory adequately.

Yellowstone National park was visited by 142,612 persons during the 1924 season just closed, an increase of 5,002 over last year, while an even greater increase is looked for in 1925 season. D. S. Spencer, general passenger agent of the Oregon Short Line, announced in Salt Lake City: "Better than half, or 52.1 per cent of the Yellowstone park traffic was handled by the Union Pacific, and a large percentage of this traffic without including automobile travel through the park and Salt Lake, passed Salt Lake."

Attorney General David J. Howell of Wyoming has rendered an opinion that in the emergency resulting from the death of Governor Ross and the mandate of the law that an election for governor shall be held at the election Nov. 4, there is no authority of law for the nomination of candidates by the state committees of the political parties with legal standing, which are the Republican and the Democratic. The attorney general's opinion, rendered in response to a request by Secretary of State Frank E. Luens, holds that legal nominations in the emergency may be made only by party committees or by petition bearing the signature of 100 qualified electors. Nominations by petition, he holds, must be listed as "Independent."

The Pulitzer air races will be discontinued next year as a feature of the international air races unless new planes are built to be used in it, Maj. Howard F. Wehrle, secretary of the National Aeronautical Association, sponsor of the races, is quoted as saying in a special dispatch received from Dayton by the Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Only one battleship—the Wyoming—will be detached from the scouting force in the Atlantic to join the American fleet's 1925 maneuvers and cruise to Australia, under a program which has been finally approved by Navy Department officials. The other five capital ships in the Atlantic—the New York, Texas, Arkansas, Florida and Utah—will be held at their home yards in anticipation of funds being obtained which will permit needed repairs.

The War Department plans to promote Lieut. Lowell H. Smith, commander of the round-the-world flight, to the rank of captain. It was learned in Dayton at McCook field. His promotion will be in the nature of a reward for his leadership of the historic globe-girdling flight which other nations, thus far, have failed to accomplish.

The War Department recently issued an order prohibiting army aviators from flying over cities at an altitude lower than that which would permit safe gliding in case of trouble to a landing on the outskirts of a town. The order also prohibits flying over, in the vicinity of stadiums, ball parks, fair grounds or other places where huge crowds are assembled.

With living comrades gathered from the four corners of America to do them honor, the dead of the first division came into their visible heritage of glory. Pedro Zanni, the Argentine aviator now on an air cruise around the world, received the daring flyer with open arms when he alighted there after a perilous air journey from Shanghai, a distance of more than 750 miles in an air line. The trip was made in seven hours and thirty minutes.

Unconfirmed reports from Camaguey province stated that another riot had broken out between Liberals and Conservatives resulting in seven killed and twenty seriously injured. The reports stated that the hospitals are filled with wounded citizens and requested relief from Havana. "We unconfirmed reports were received in Havana by President Zayas."

A commissioner from the ministry of finance has been sent to investigate a peculiar phenomenon in the Tatar-Pazarduk branch of the Bulgarian National Bank—the crumbling of metal currency, either to a thin semi-like film or to mere dust. The currency was minted abroad less than a year ago. Specialists believe the aluminum coins contain too much zinc, which disintegrates. Bank officials are alarmed at the prospect that the entire issue of 100,000,000 leva may disintegrate.

GENERAL

Suit was filed in Federal District Court at New Orleans, La., to remove Walter L. Cohen, negro controller of customs of New Orleans, from that office on the ground that he is of African blood and descent, and, therefore, not a citizen of the United States. The petition in the suit, filed by H. Edwin Boite, who said he was an attorney of Washington, D. C., attacks the validity of the fourteenth amendment.

Queen Petrolia, personified by Miss Rannona Marcella Treas, erstwhile Princess Kansas, held the position of honor in a mammoth parade through the principal streets of Tulsa, following her selection as queen of the International Petroleum exposition. With her were princesses from eleven other oil states and this "court group" assisted in making one of the most spectacular demonstrations of the streets of that busy oil city have held.

John McNameara, a leader in the labor war which culminated in the bombing of the Los Angeles Times and a dozen other dynamite outrages four years ago, was indicted by the Marlon county grand jury at Indianapolis on four charges of blackmail. The charges grew out of McNameara's activities as business agent and secretary of the Indianapolis Bridge and Structural Iron Workers' Union, subsequent to his release from the penitentiary at San Quentin, Calif.

The United States stands sixth among the nations of the world in ship building, according to a report just issued by Lloyd's register of shipping. During the three months ended Sept. 30, there were launched in American yards, 64,865 tons, which is 28,750 tons less than in the previous quarter.

A modern version of the "pot of gold" at the end of the rainbow" was depicted in Tulsa at the oil congress, held in connection with the international petroleum exposition when Shade E. Wallen, Muskogee, Okla., superintendent of the five civilized tribes, told of the finding of oil on Indian lands in Oklahoma and the millions of dollars that tribesmen received as a result of the discovery.

The naval dirigible Shenandoah started her epoch-making 7,000-mile round trip cruise to the Pacific coast at 10 a. m., Oct. 7, taking the air from her mooring mast in perfect weather conditions. With Rear Admiral W. A. Moffett, in charge of many aeronautics on board to make the entire trip, the navy's pride of the air, butting the admiral's pennant from the stern, circled about the flying field and headed south.

If the United States government steps in and makes a law providing for federal jurisdiction over baseball, as has been suggested, the present baseball scandal may develop into another Teapot Dome. President Van Johnson of the American League, is quoted as saying in special dispatches received in Chicago from Excelsior Springs, Mo., where he has gone for his health. His statement was made while referring to the expulsion of Jimmy O'Connell and Cozy Delan of the New York Giants, prior to the starting of the world series.

BRIEF ARIZONA ITEMS

Charles Nisse, prominent business man of Pasadena, Calif., was critically injured, and his wife suffered severe bruises when their automobile overturned on a highway near Prescott.

Governor Hunt declined to accept the resignation of George R. Darnell as Superior Court judge of Pima county. The resignation of the jurist was submitted more than a month ago to take effect Oct. 1.

The "wild man" who has been frightening residents of Richmond, Calif., for the last two months was captured and identified from papers in his pockets as F. E. Bell, formerly of Phoenix, Ariz.

Passage of an ordinance by the city commission of Phoenix, appropriating $18,000 for the purchase of the Salt River mountain range south of Phoenix, opens the way for the development of the municipal park sponsored by the city planning commission, according to J. C. Dobbins, chairman of the park committee.

Purchase of a 100-acre tract southwest of Florence on the Gila river as the site for the construction of a sanatorium was announced by E. W. St. Charles of Wonder Springs, Ariz. In addition to building the sanatorium, Mr. St. Charles is arranging for Phoenix offices for distribution throughout the state of spring water.

Governor Hunt, from his sick quarters in St. Joseph's hospital at Phoenix, issued a proclamation setting aside Tuesday, Nov. 4, as the day for the general election in Arizona. In the proclamation, Governor Hunt specifies the state offices which are to be filled by election and offers a reward of $50 for the arrest and conviction for anyone violating the election law.

Lack of rainfall in the Prescott National forest has caused a drought that has dried the range to the extent that not enough feed exists for both cattle and sheep, according to a petition filed with the federal forest service by cattlemen of the district. The petition requests that "immediate action be taken so that both the sheep and cattle may not suffer a total loss."

The State Bank at Winslow and its branches at Holbrook and St. Johns were closed by the state banking department because of the "depressed financial situation" and the inability of the banks to collect on their notes, according to an announcement. The statement of the combined banks at the close of business Sept. 20 showed assets of over $1,072,000. Deposits totaled more than $700,000.

Closing the gaps on the National Old Trails highway across northern Arizona represents one of the most pressing problems of the Arizona highway department, according to statements of highway officials. To secure the prompt completion of the entire 427 miles from the Colorado river to the New Mexico line is one of the chief ambitions of State Engineer W. C. LeFebvre and his corps of assistants.

Phoenix en masse, and hundreds of out-of-town visitors joined in celebrating the assurance that a main line railroad will be built across the Salt River valley. Approximately 12,000 demonstrators were on the Union station grounds at Phoenix, the center of the celebration, from dusk until midnight, observing the occasion by hearing speeches, engaging in confetti battles and dancing. T. H. Williams of Los Angeles, assistant general manager of the Southern Pacific, declared that more than $1,000,000 would be spent in Arizona to carry out the main line building program.

Material reductions in freight rates between Arizona points which may be expected, according to authorities, after the routing of the Southern Pacific's main line tracks through Phoenix were roughly conjectured in an estimate by the traffic division of the State Corporation Commission.

Gov. George W. P. Hunt voiced opposition to the recommendation of the federal survey committee to reduce by one-half the great Kaibaba deer herd in the Grand Canyon game preserve of northern Arizona, where more than 20,000 animals now roam the plateaus. In a letter to E. A. Sherman, acting forester, at Washington, the governor said he believed reduction of the herd by one-half was "unwarranted" as a measure to save the deer "from a crisis" this winter, as recommended by the committee. "I was and am very much opposed to the slaughter of these deer," the governor's letter said. "There could be no sport in killing them, as they are almost as tame as cows in the field."

Governor Hunt advocated removal of some of the deer from their territories to relieve the situation by a sufficient extent.

The University of Arizona college of mines has been instructed to begin work on an elaborate hauler which will explain the facilities, policy and ambitions of the college, according to an announcement by Dean G. M. Butler.

The University of Arizona College of Agriculture Extension Department has made arrangements with different counties in the state to furnish them with official judges for their county fairs this fall, it was announced in Tucson by P. H. Ross, director of Agricultural Extension.

The Queen and the Cat. The R. S. P. C. A., which has been very much in the limelight lately, was always very warmly supported by Queen Victoria. When the society decided to give medals in recognition of special acts of bravery in saving the lives of animals, the design for the medal was submitted to the queen, says London Answers. A little later the society received a letter from her secretary, saying that, as there was no cat included in the design, Queen Victoria had drawn one herself in the position in which she wished it to appear. This cat still appears upon medals issued by the society.

His Own Organization
Amongst many good stories told by Sir Thomas Lipton, the famous yachtsman, is one concerning a certain amateur sailor whose attempts at joining the exceedingly exclusive Royal Yacht Squadron had been repeatedly rejected. At last one day the disgusted candidate turned up at Cowes, flying from his mast head a pennant showing the legend M. O. B. Y. S. There were anxious discussions as to what these letters could represent, and at last the squadron descended sufficiently from its dignity to inquire, "Those letters," said the owner buffly, "stand for 'My Own Blooming Yacht Squadron!'"

MARY SUCCEEDS ON MAIN STREET

By LAURA MILLER

NATIONAL HONORS AND LOCAL SALES

Would you ever think of being hugely interested in corsets, other people's corsets at that? And if you had discovered that all the fascinating art and science of salesmanship could be wrapped up in coutil and whalebone, would you think you had any chance of carrying off a record, way out in Idaho? Well, Sophie Boellert was and did. That is to say, she found herself a saleswoman in a Boise store. She set herself to "work, and hard work, with tireless ambition to go on and on." She took one course of study after another, for "we never have enough learning."

That she won the national prize in corset selling not long ago is just one reflection on her way. She's buyer and department manager in the Boise Mode. That means that she has come to know intimately the buying public of Idaho, and the manufacturers of America and the world as they are translated to the retail trade through the clever, complicated, ever changing, ever interesting New York market. She's a director of the store, which means that she's managed to learn how to work with other people day in and day out, to get her own way when it's based on good hard knowledge without irritating the other person, and to yield her opinion as gracefully when other judgment is the better.

Her position means work with much overtime, but Miss Boellert finds opportunity for outside interests. "I've always been interested in helping girls up in their work," she says. "My own experience is that the best foundations for the average girl are laid in smaller towns. People seem to have more time. But in any place the study of human nature is the most interesting one. This many-sided study is a great help in any work. One of the most interesting studies today is selling. We are all doing that. It has many angles and the whole world enters it at some angle."

Miss Boellert's own life seems to bear out her statement about the wide angle vision possible to the good saleswoman wherever she is. The war brought more than one honor to this Idaho woman who had been so conscientiously preparing herself. And when, just after the war, the National Federation of Business and Professional Women was started, the women of Idaho chose Miss Boellert to be their representative in the national council. Each year they have re-elected her. This year she has mothered two new clubs into being, and has two more on the point of organization. "So," she comments, "I'm busy most of the time."

"KINDLY WATCH JANE"

If a woman really wants to have fun in this modern world, said woman gets into a niche where she can watch, report upon and, on occasion, manipulate some of the currents of feminism. There's a woman out in Topeka doing that very thing. Wherefore there has grown up a tradition in Kansas, particularly in Kansas politics, "Kindly watch Jane!" Now Jane is merely a nickname for a newspaper known officially as the Kansas Woman's Journal. It is the initials of the paper plus the necessities of the case that worded the slogan quoted.

Who and what are behind Jane? There's an advisory board that covers all one side of a sheet of paper. There's a motto, "Devoted to the interests of women, children and home," that is honestly lived up to. There was during the last political campaign, the Republican state central committee, which made the paper official organ of the Republican women of Kansas. There are the subscribers, both men and women. And there is Lilla Day Monroe, editor, who describes herself as "chiefly responsible except when the printers of my most capable publishing company commit some kind of crime, mayhem possibly, on some pet article." It was July when Mrs. Monroe wrote "Hi! mercy! I have the rheumatics. I've one wrist trussed up in a red flannel bandage. (Dr. said hot applications and I'll leave it to you if there's anything more torrid than a red flannel bandage.)"

"I was born into a family that was crazy to have a girl. As the only girl in a bunch of boys, I had many privileges, but I had to learn to be a good sport. My father died, I grew up a school teacher, read law, became a lawyer, married a lawyer politician. When I first went away to school I boarded at the same place with a newspaper man and his wife, who were mighty nice to the lone little stranger. The editor took the most inconvenient times to become drunk. With his wife I used to get up in the middle of the night to get out the Courier. To keep awake I turned to set type.
"I only advise a girl to go to a big city for a bit of post graduate work, for a sojourn that will make her appreciate the wide spaces more when she comes back. One of the greatest boons for women is the feeling that they have a sort of proprietary interest in the home town, such as I have for Topeka."

SHANGHAI FALLS TO REBEL TROOPS

CHEKIANG FORCES SURRENDER TO INVADERS AFTER HEAVY FIRING

CHINESE SIGN TRUCE

KIANGSU INVADERS, AND DEFENDERS OF SHANGHAI SIGN TRUCE

Shanghai.—The Chekiang forces defending Shanghai against the attacks of the invading Kiangsu armies surrendered and an armistice was declared between the opposing forces.

After a tactical retreat along the Hangchow railway and from Tsing-pai, west of Shanghai, the Chekiang army controlling Shanghai and the coast region has launched a counter attack toward the key city of Sungkiang, which it lost a few days ago.

At Chekiang headquarters at Lung-wha it was explained that the retreat had been planned to shorten and lengthen the line west of Shanghai.

The invading Kiangsu troops are concentrated heavily in the neighborhood of Sungkiang.

Peking.—An unsuccessful attempt was made to wreck the train carrying Gen. Wu Pei-fu, commander of the Peking government forces, on his way to the Manchurian battle front. A short distance beyond Tientsin two galvanized iron tins were taken from the rails. They contained a whitish powder, said to be a high explosive. The preceding train had struck one of these infernal machines, without affecting the detonator. It is not known when or by whom the wrecking devices were laid. Two Russian railway men, who reported the discovery, are detained pending an investigation. The Wu Pei-fu party reached its destination safely.

Acquitted of Slaying Major

Tacoma, Wash.—Roland H. Pothier, former sergeant of the 213th engineers, was acquitted by a jury in federal court of the charge of murdering Maj. Alexander P. Cronkrite on the Camp Lewis military reservation, Oct. 25, 1918. Pothier merely took the line of least resistance and told his questioners what they wanted to be told on his alleged confessions of the murder, declared Maurice A. Langhorne, defense attorney. In his final argument, Langhorne also attacked the testimony of James J. Lee of Providence, R. I., special agent for the department of justice, who obtained confessions from Pothier that he killed Cronkrite at the instigation of Capt. Robert Rosenbluth.

ZR-3 Speeds Through France

Paris.—The ZR-3 sped across France at about 80 miles an hour and at such a great altitude that only a few persons saw her, particularly as she steered clear of the larger towns. The airship, so far as reported, was sighted only twice in France near the east frontier and her wireless signals were caught as she passed close to Bordeaux, departing from France.

Shenandoah Delayed at San Diego

San Diego, Calif.—Necessity of making repairs to two of the engines and to the radio apparatus, together with work on two after girders strained slightly during the landing at North Island naval air station, delayed departure of the dirigible Shenandoah on the flight to Camp Lewis, Wash., for two days.

Anatole France Dies

Tours, France.—Anatole France is dead. His end came peacefully. From August last the state of the great French writer's health has caused anxiety. Gradually his condition became worse, until only a few days ago he himself expressed the conviction that he had but a few hours of life remaining. Owing to his advanced age, 80 years, there was no expectation of his recovery, but almost up to the end he retained his interest in those around him and was able at times to converse briefly.

German Loan Over-subscribed

New York.—The $200,000,000 German loan under the Dawes plan of much more than half will be loaned in the United States has been over-subscribed by $1,000,000,000 it was announced here. The bonds will bear 7 per cent interest, but placed as they are at 92 the actual yield will be 7.75 per cent. They will run twenty-five years and are entitled to absolute priority as regards German resources, even over reparations. Orders are piling in to dealers from every state in the Union.

Australian Wool Clip Excellent

Sydney, Australia.—With a clip estimated at 3,150,000 bales of wool, a record figure due to an excellent season, the Australian wool-growers' council and the national council of wool-selling brokers of Australia have devised means for disposing of the product. With sales held in Brisbane, Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide and Perth, to be attended by purchasers from all over the world, it is expected that 2 million bales will be offered by Christmas day.

The AMERICAN LEGION

JAMES DRAIN, NEW LEGION COMMANDER

James A. Drain, who was elected national commander of the American Legion at its sixth annual convention at St. Paul, Minn., has had a long and active career in the National Guard and in the army, and has taken a leading part in the program of the Legion.

Commander Drain has decided to move to Indianapolis and will administer the affairs of the Legion from national headquarters there, as did Past Commander John R. Quinn. He expects, it is understood, to devote most of his time and energy to building up the internal organization of the Legion. He declared that the Legion will adhere strictly to its policy of no political entanglements.

Mr. Drain served for 20 months as commander of the department of the District of Columbia. He has been active in rehabilitation work. He served as chairman of the Fourth district rehabilitation committee of the Legion, which is because of its location at the national capital, extremely important. The new commander has been a member of the national executive committee of the Legion and also of the board of directors of the American Legion Weekly.

Rising from private to brigadier general, the new Legion head began his military career in the National Guard of the state of Washington. He was a captain in the Spanish American war. In the World war he was an ordnance officer with the tank corps, later serving as a member of the Anglo-American tank commission.

American Legion Helps Widow in Need of Aid

A widow of Ohio who had two sons in the service, one having died in service and one since as a result of service, held two compensation checks received by her son but not endorsed by him before his death. The burial expenses for her son amounted to more than $500. She needed cash. Her son had told her before his death that, after his death, she needed advice and assistance to go to the American Legion. She did. Through the agency of the American Legion the Probate court was prevailed upon to execute administration papers at a cost of $2 less than in usual cases and the much needed checks were redrawn in favor of the widow. Claim was made by the service department of the Legion and in less than three weeks the claim was allowed by the bureau and the widow granted a death compensation of $2 a month until 1937.

Tyndall Appreciative

In a bulletin read before the officers and men of the Thirty-eighth division and One Hundred and Fiftieth field artillery of Indiana, Maj. Gen. Robert H. Tyndall, national treasurer of the American Legion, expressed his appreciation to the men of his command for their efficient and enthusiastic cooperation in the recent field maneuvers held at Camp Knox, Ky. The "Cyclone" division took an important part in the maneuvers which were undertaken in preparation for National Defense day September 12.

Donated Silver Cup

Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt of New York occupied a box at the water sports carnival and "week-end" given at Bar Harbor, Maine, under the auspices of the American Legion. Mrs. Vanderbilt donated a silver cup for the carnival.

HELPED HER IN EVERY WAY

So Writes Mrs. Trombley of Sharon, Vt., Concerning Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sharon, Vermont.—"I was weak and run-down, had a tired feeling and bearing-down pains. I saw an advertisement in the newspaper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began taking it. It has stopped these bearing-down pains and other bad feelings, and has helped me in every way. I have so much faith in the vegetable Compound that I keep it on hand all of the time and recommend it whenever I have the opportunity."—Mrs. LEWIS TROMBLEY, Sharon, Vermont.

Glad to Help Others

"I had pains in my back and sides for many months, and my work would have to be left undone at those times. My sister told me what good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was doing her, so I tried it, and from the third bottle I was well and every one thought I looked better. I am glad to help others regain their health, and you may use my testimonial."—ABEL HARRIS, 1824 Greene Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y. You must believe that a medicine that has helped other women will help you. You should try it.

Illusion Shattered

Twelve-year-old Joseph was talking to his bachelor uncle on the subject of girls. Uncle in a genial mood advised: "Now, if I were you, old fellow, I wouldn't get into any entanglements with girls until I was at least fifteen. I'd try to have a good time before I got mixed up with them."
Joseph shook his head. "Well, I've had one case already," he confessed, "but it's all over now."
Uncle, pressed for a reason. And Joseph answered wisely and well, "I found out she wasn't what I thought she was."—Exchange.

Skin so sore could not touch water to it

Resinol relieves it within few hours.
Washington, D. C., Aug. 25.—"I am so grateful to you for your splendid products and for what they have accomplished for me that I feel I must give you the details. In attempting to improve the appearance of my chin, I used a soap which had been recommended for that purpose but which proved to be too harsh for me when I washed off the lather, the skin came with it. I applied cold cream, but the damage was too severe to yield to so mild an agent. My husband consulted our neighborhood druggist and asked if it would not be advisable to call in our family doctor. The druggist said: 'You do not need a doctor in this case. Get a jar of Resinol Ointment and a cake of Resinol Soap and have your wife use them according to directions—they will beat everything else a hundred ways.'" So my husband bought the Resinol products and hopefully brought them home.

My skin was so tender and sore that I could not touch water to it, so I cleansed it gently first with pure olive oil and then applied the Resinol. I used a soft handkerchief that night for protection. In the morning, I bathed it gently with warm water and Resinol Soap, rinsing off with tepid water, and I could hardly believe that such a miracle of healing could occur during one night. The raw surface had filmed over and now looked only like a bad case of sunburn. I kept my face anointed with Resinol all that day and by night the improvement was so great that I was able to go out.
This experience is now only a memory for my face is softer, fairer and smoother than ever. A jar of Resinol is my best pal in the future and I will never be without it." (Signed) Mrs. C. P. Tapley, 1028 8th St., N. W.

MR. COOLIDGE'S CULPABILITY

The principal defense made in behalf of candidate Coolidge is that the scandals and known corruption which have disgraced the Republican national administration took place in the early part of the administration before Mr. Coolidge became president.

"SILENCE IS CONFESSION"

In Republican annals the present national campaign will be recorded as the "Campaign of Silence." The Democratic candidate, under our assumed theory of party responsibility, has held the Republican party responsible for the scandals of the Harding-Coolidge administration. Although President Coolidge has proclaimed party responsibility, candidate Coolidge has remained silent concerning Mr. Davis's charges in this respect.

The Democratic candidate has attacked the administration on every other issue of the campaign—on favoritism in taxation, on the tariff policy, on the lack of a foreign policy, and all of the collateral issues, only to be met by silence—not a dignified silence but a shrinking, timorous silence which indicates inability to make reply. It is a silence that indicates the fear of controversy, and the lack of any "stomach for a fight," the fear of a man who runs away and hides.

Despite this silence, the administration press and spokesmen are outdug-ing candidate Coolidge as a leader and a cool, courageous man, when the fact is that he will neither lead nor fight nor even attempt a defense of his party or himself.

It would be a generous critic indeed who would even credit him with that discretion which is the better part of valor. The silence of candidate Coolidge is not a discreet silence. It is the kind of silence rather, described by Daniel Webster when that statesman declared in a particular case:
"Silence is Confession"

IN TO WIN

I want to emphasize the fact that our support of Senator La Follette and Senator Wheeler does not in any way or to any degree identify us with or commit us to doctrines advanced by any other group that may be supporting the same candidates. These candidates have the support of minority groups, in themselves of no great importance, with whose doctrines we not only do not agree, but with which we are and have been in the sharpest kind of disagreement. We shall continue to oppose those doctrines at all times.

We are in this fight, not to quibble with those who may help the cause, but to win a great victory for humanity, for democracy, for the great masses of the people of our country.
Something far beyond the ordinary political issue is at stake. There is at stake the great and all-transcending issue of right against wrong—and we are for the right with all of the vigor which our great movement possesses.

Now that our report has been adopted, it may not be amiss to say that our general lines were agreed upon by the executive committee of the national non-partisan campaign committee at a meeting held at Brighton Beach on the day after the Democratic Convention adjourned, and informally we were certain of what our course would have to be some days before that—the day we were able to have before us the Democratic and Republican platforms, to be exact. I say that so that it may be known that we have stood on our position out of the logic of events and the records of men and parties, and not out of a series of assumed disagreements between ourselves. That, I think, should be made clear beyond any possibility of misunderstanding.—Samuel Gompers in September American Federationist.

MAY RECEIVE RECOGNITION

Whether or not the University of Arizona will receive recognition from the Association of American Universities as a result of a recent inspection of the University by Dean David A.
Robertson, representing the committee on classification, will be announced by the committee on November first, it was stated yesterday by President C.
H. Martyn.

The association of American Universities is the leading rating organization in this country and recognition from them is highly important to the development of the University of Arizona.

Judith of Blue Lake Ranch

By JACKSON GREGORY

Copyright by Charles Scribner's Sons

"CAN SHE RIDE?"

SYNOPSIS—Bud Lee, horse foreman of the Blue Lake ranch, convinced Bayne Trevors, manager, is deliberately wrecking the property owned by Judith Sanford, a young woman, her cousin, Pollock Hampton, and Timothy Gray, decides to throw up his job. Judith arrives and announces she has bought Gray's share in the ranch and will run it. She discharges Trevors.

CHAPTER I—Continued

"Well," Judith sniffed, "I don't know. It will be a jolt to me if there's a square man left on the ranch! Go down to the bunk-house and tell the cook I'm here and I'm hungry as a wildcat. Tell him and any of the boys that are down there that I've come to stay and that Trevors is fired. They take orders from me and no one else. And hurry, if you know how. Goodness knows, you look as though it would take you half an hour to turn around."

"Thank you, ma'am," said Bud Lee. "But you see I had just told Trevors here he could count me out. I'm not working for the Blue Lake any more. As I go down to the corral, shall I seed up one of the boys to take your orders?"

There was a little smile under the ast words, just as there was a little smile in Bud Lee's heart at the thought of the boys taking orders from a little slip of a girl. Inside he was chuckling, vastly delighted with the comedy of the morning.

"She's a sure-enough little wonder-bird, all right," he mused. "But, say, what does she want to butt in on a man's size job for, I want to know?"

"Lee," called Trevors, "you take orders from me or no one on this ranch. You can go now. And just keep your mouth shut."

Bud Lee was turning to go out and down to his horse when he saw the look in Trevors' eyes, a look of consuming rage. The general manager's voice had been hoarse.

"D—n you," shouted Trevors, "get out!"

"Cut out the swear-words, Trevors," said Lee with quiet sternness. "There's a lady here."

"Lady!" scoffed Trevors. He laughed contemptuously. "Where's your lady? That" and he leveled a scornful finger at the girl. "A ranting tough of a female who brings a breath of the stable with her and scolds like a fish-wife. . . ."

"Shut up!" said Lee, crossing the room with quick strides, his face thrust forward a little.

"You shut up!" It was Judith's voice as Judith's hand fell upon Bud Lee's shoulder, pushing him aside. "If I couldn't take care of myself do you think I'd be fool enough to take over a little job like running the Blue Lake? Now—" and with blazing eyes she confronted Trevors—"if you've got any more nice little things to say, suppose you say them to me!"

Trevors' temper had ample provocation and now stood naked and hot in his hard eyes. In a blind instant he laid his tongue to a word which would have sent Bud Lee at his throat. But Judith stood between them and, like an echo to the word, came the resounding slap as Judith's open palm smote Trevors' cheek.

"You wildcat!" he cried. And his two big hands flew out, seeking her shoulders.

"Stand back!" called Judith. "Just because you are bigger than I am, don't make any mistake! Stand back I tell you!"

Bud Lee marveled at the swiftness with which her hand had gone into her blouse and out again, a small-caliber revolver in the steady fingers now. He had never known a man—himself possibly excepted—quicker at the draw.

But Bayne Trevors, from whose make-up cowardice had been omitted, laughed sneeringly at her and did not stand back. His two hands out before him, his face crimson, he came on.

"Fool!" cried the girl. "Fool!" Still he came on. Lee gathered himself to spring.

Judith fired. Once, and Trevors' right arm fell to his side. A second time, and Trevors' left arm hung limp like the other. The crimson was gone from his face now. It was dead white. Little beads of sweat began to form on his brow.

Lee turned astonished eyes to Judith.

"Now you know who's running this outfit, don't you?" she said coolly. "Lee, have a team hitched up to carry Trevors wherever he wants to go. He's not hurt much; I just winged him. And go tell the cook about my breakfast."

Even my heart it is like the singing of leetle birdies. Mire, senior, My flowers bloomin' the brighter, already—no?"

"You've known her a long time, Joe?"

"Seneca sne ees born!" and Jose, unashamed, wiped a tear upon the back of a leathery hand. "Senor Sanford and me, senior, we teach her when she ees so leetle!" Jose's shaking hand was lowered until it marked the stature of a twelve-inch pigmy. "Never at all until one year ago does she leave us and the rancho. We, us two who love her, senior, learn her to walk and to ride and to shoot and to talk. You shall hear her say, 'Buenos dias, Jose, mi amigo!' You shall see her kees the cheek of old Jose. Madre de Dios! I would go down to h—l for her to bring back fire to warm her leetle feet een weenter!"

Lee went thoughtfully on his way to the bunk-house. "I've got orders for you fellows," he said from the doorway. "The boss of the outfit, the real owner, you know, just blew in. Up at the house. Says you boys are to stick around to take orders straight from headquarters. You, Benny," to the cook, "are to have a man's size breakfast ready in a jiffy."

Naturally Benny led the clamor with a string of oaths. What in blazes did the owner of the ranch have to show up for anyway?—he wanted to know. He accepted the fact as a personal affront. Who was this owner?—demanded Ward Hannon, the foreman of the lower ranch, where the alfalfa fields were.

Lee explained gravely that the newcomer was some sort of relative of old Luke Sanford, who had recently acquired a controlling interest in the ranch. Ward Hannon grunted contemptuously. "The Lord deliver us!" he moaned. "Eastern Jasper! One of the know-all-about-it brand, huh. Bud? I'll bet he combs his hair in the middle and smokes cigarets out'n a box! The putty-headed loons can't even roll their own smokes."

"Don't believe," hazarded Lee indifferently, "from the looks of our visitor that—that the owner smokes anything!"

"Listen to that!" grunted Ward Hannon. "Softy, huh?"

"Well," Bud admitted slowly, "looks sort of like a girl, you know?"

"Wouldn't that choke you?" demanded Carson, the cow foreman, a thin, awkward little man, gray in the service of "real men." "Taking orders off'n a fool easterner's had enough. But old man or young, Bud?"

"Just a kid," was Lee's further dampening view. And as he nonchalantly buttered his hot cakes he added carelessly: "Something of a scrapper, though. Just put two thirty-two calibers into Trevors."

They stared at him incredulously. Then Carson's dry chuckle led the laughter.

"You're the biggest liar, Bud Lee," said the old man good-naturedly. "I ever focused my two eyes on. I'll lay an even bet there ain't nobody showed a-tall up this morning."

"You, Tommy," said Lee to the boy at his side, "shovel your grub down lively and go hitch Molly and old Pie."

the swift approach of Bayne Trevors. The general manager's face was back with rage and through that dark wrath showed a dull red flush of shame. He walked with his two arms lax at his sides.

"Give me a cup of coffee, Ben," he commanded curtly, slumping into a chair. "Hurry!"

Benny, looking at him curiously, brought a steaming cup and offered it. Trevors moved to lift a hand; then sank back a little farther in his chair, his face twisting in his pain.

"Put some milk in it," he snarled. "Then hold it to my mouth. For the love of heaven, hurry, man!"

Then no man there doubted longer the mad tale Bud Lee had brought them. Down from Trevors' sleeves, staining each hand, there had come a broadening trickle of blood. Trevors drank swiftly, draining the cup.

"Get this coat off me," he commanded. "Curse you, don't tear my arms off! Silt the sleeves!"

It was Lee who, pushing the clumsy cook aside, silently made the two bandages from strips of Trevors' shirt. It was Lee who brought a flask of brandy from which Trevors drank deep.

And then came Judith. They stared at her as they might have done had the heavens opened and an angel come down, or the earth split and a devil sprung up. She looked in upon them with quick, keen eyes which sought to take every man's measure. They returned her regard with a variety of amazed expressions. Never since these men had come to work for Bayne Trevors had a woman so much as ridden by the door. And to have her stand there, composed, utterly at her ease, her air vaguely authoritative, a vitally vivid being who might, suddenly, have taken tangible form from the dawn, bewildered them.

"I am Judith Sanford," she said in her abrupt fashion, quite as she had made the announcement to Lee and Trevors. "This outfit belongs to me. I have fired Trevors. You take your orders straight from me from now on. Cookie, give me some coffee."

She came in without ceremony and sat down at the head of the table. Benny hastily brought the coffee. From some emotion certainly not clear to him he went a violent red. Perhaps the emotion was just sheer embarrassment. He brought hot cakes with one hand while with the other he buttoned his gaping shirt-collar over a bulging, balmy chest.

Men who had finished their breakfasts rose hastily with a marked awkwardness and ill-concealed haste and went outside, whence their low voices came back in a confused consultation. Men who had not finished followed them. In an amazingly short time there were but the girl, Lee, Trevors and the cook in the room. Bud Lee, moving with his usual leisureliness, was following when Judith's cool voice said quietly:

"You, Lee, wait a moment. I want to talk with you."

Lee hesitated. Then he came back and waited.

The men outside naturally grouped about the general manager. His angry voice, lifted clearly, reached the two in the room.

"I'm fired," said Trevors harshly. "As soon as I can get going I'm leaving for the Western Lumber camp. Every one of you boys holds his job here because I gave it to him. Do you want to hold it now, with a fool girl telling you what to do? Do you want men up and down the state to laugh at you and jeer at you for a pack of softies and imbeciles? Or do you want to roll your blankets and quit? To every man that jumps the job here and follows me today I promise a job with the Western. You fellows know the sort of boss I've been to you. You can guess the sort of boss that chicken in there would be. Now I'm going. It's up to you. Stick to a white man or fuss around for a woman!"

He had said what he had to say and, cursing when his shoulder struck a form near him, made his way down to the stables. Burkitt was ahead of him, going for the team.

"Well, Lee," said Judith sharply, "where do you get off? Do you want to stick? Or shall I count you out?"

"I guess," said Bud very gently, "you'd better count me out."

"No. I'm going on my own."

"Why? You're getting good money here. If you're square I'll keep you at the same figure."

But Bud shook his head.

"I'm game to play square," he said slowly. "I'll stick a week, giving you a chance to get a man in my place. That's all."

"What's the matter with you?" she cried hotly. "Why won't you stay with your job? Is it because you don't want to take orders from me?"

Then Lee lifted his grave eyes to hers and answered simply: "That's it. I'm not saying you're not all right. But I got it figured out, there's just two kinds of ladies. If you want to know, I don't see that you've got any call to tie into a man's job."

two kinds of ladies, my fine friend: the kind that can and the kind that can't! Thank God I'm none of your precious, sighing, hothouse little fools!"

Gulping down a last mouthful of coffee, she was on her feet and passed swiftly out among the men.

"You men!" she cried, and they turned sober eyes upon her, "listen to me! You've heard that big stiff rant; now hear me! I'm here because I belong here. My dad was Luke Sanford and he made this ranch. I was raised here. It's two-thirds mine right now. Trevors there is a crook and I told him so. He's been trying to sell me out, to make such a failure of the outfit that I'd have to let it go for a comic song. He got gay and I fired him. He tried to manhandle me and I plugged him. And now I'm going to run my own outfit! What have you got to say about it, you grumbling old grouch with the crooked face! Put up or shut up! I'm calling you!"

The men turned from her to Ward Hannon, the field foreman, who had been Trevors' right-hand man and who now was sneering openly.

"I'm saying it's no work for a kid of a girl," grumbled Hannon. "You run an outfit like this?" He laughed derisively. "It can't be did."

"It can't, can't it?" cried Judith. "Tell me why, old smarty. Spit it out lively!"

Jake Carson's shrill cackle cut through a low rumble of laughter. "That's passing it to him straight," said the old cattleman. "What's the word, Ward?"

Ward Hannon shrugged his shoulders and spat impudently. "I ain't saying nothing," he growled, "only this: I got a right to quit, ain't I? Well, I'm quitting. Any time you ketch me working for a female girl that can't ride a horse 'thout fallin' off, that can't see a pig stuck 'thout fainting, that can't walk a mile 'thout getting laid up, that can't. . . ."

"Slow up there!" called Judith. "Didn't I stick a pig already this morning, and have I keeled over yet? Didn't I ride the forty miles from Rocky Bend last night and get here before sunup? Listen to me, chief kicker: If you've got a horse on the ranch I can't ride I'll quit right now and give you my job! How's that strike you? I tell you the word on this ranch is going to be 'Put up or shut up!' Which is it, Growly?"

Again the men laughed and Hannon's face showed his anger.

"Mean that, lady?" he demanded briefly.

"You can just bet your eyes I mean it!"

Hannon turned toward the stable. "All right. We'll see who's going to put up or shut up!" he jeered over his shoulder. "You ride the Prince just two little minutes and I'll stay and work for you!"

Bud Lee from the doorway interferred. He was a man who loved fair play and he knew the Prince. "None of that, Ward," he called sternly. "Not the Prince!"

But Judith, her eyes aflame, whirled upon Lee, her voice like a whip as she said: "Lee, you keep out of this. The sooner you learn who's running things here the better for you."

"Maybe so," said Lee quietly. "But don't you fool yourself you can ride the Prince. There's not a man on the job except me that can ride him." It was not boastfully said, but with calm assurance. "He's an outlaw, Miss Judith. He's the horse that killed Jimmy Carpenter last spring, and Jimmy—"

"Go ahead, Ward," Judith repeated. "I've got something to do today besides play pussy-wants-a-corner with you boys."

Ward went, his eyes filled with malice. Two or three of the other men joined their voices to Bud's and Carson's, expostulating, telling of that fearful thing, an outlaw horse. Judith maintained a scornful silence.

In due time Ward came back. He was leading a saddled horse, a great, wild-eyed roan that snapped viciously as he came on, walking with the wide, spreading stride of a horse little used to the saddle. Judith measured him with her eyes as she had measured the men in the bunkhouse.

"He's an ugly devil," she said, and Lee, at her side, smiled again. But the girl had not altered her intention. She stepped closer, looking to cinch, bit and reins. She commanded Ward to draw the latigo tighter, and Ward did so, dodging back as the big brute snapped at him.

Judith laughed. "Look out, Ward," she taunted him. "He's after your hair!"

Two men held the Prince. At Judith's command they shortened the stirrups and then blinded him with a bandanna handkerchief. Then, moving with incredible swiftness, she was in the saddle, the reins firmly gripped. The Prince, a sudden trembling thrill through him, stood with his four feet planted. The girl leaped forward and whipped the blind from his red-rimmed eyes.

"There's a good boy!" said Judith coolly. "Buck a little for the lady, Prince!"

Slowly the great muscles of Prince's leg and shoulder and flank corded. The trembling passed; he was like a horse carved in bluish granite. He shook his head a little. Judith, her hand tightening upon the reins, held his head well up, the severe bit thwarting the attempt to get his nose down between his forelegs.

gathering himself as he landed, swinging with the quickness of light, plunging again to the right. And again he stood still. Judith, sitting securely on his rebellious back, laughed. Her laughter, cool and unafraid, sent a strange little thrill through Bud Lee—who, with fear in his heart, was watching her.

"Look out for him now!" he called warningly.

In truth the Prince had not yet begun. He plunged toward the corral, his purpose plain, the one desire in his heart to crush his rider against the high fence. But Judith's spurs answered him, and the bit, savage in his jaws, brought him about, whirling, sliding, striking, bucking as only a strong, fearless, devil-hearted horse knows how to buck. He doubled up under her; he rose and fell in a quick series of short jumps which tore and jerked at his body, which strove to tear her knees away from his sides and break the grip of her hand on the

LATEST IN KNITTED MODES; VARIETY OF STYLES IN HATS

WE ARE so apt to take for granted the good things of life, to accept them as a matter of course. In regard to present-day apparel, for instance, through the knitted arts, what a wealth of handsome, no less practical garments is being lavished on the world of fashion these days.

No item written in the book of exquisite costume is omitted in the realm of things knitted. Even the delicately wrought, gorgeously colored and deeply fringed Spanish shawl is ex-worn by everybody else. This fall these millions of women have but a single thought and that's to get a hat a little different from every one else's. There seems to be nothing to stand in the way of their success, for millinery this fall presents a wider scope in styles and greater variety in their interpretations than we have had for many a year.

Velvet is the most important medium for winter hats and the group leads off with two hats covered with pressed through the intricacies of knitted stitch. Just now interest centers about beautiful knitted tapestry and brocade effects, also complicated plaids, checks and stripes which once were thought possible to produce only by weaving on the loom. Jacquard patternings are attracting special style interest, such as is exploited in the exquisite knitted suit here pictured. Cheery colorings are decreed for both street and sports apparel this season. This striking jacquard pattern is developed in peach color against a white background. As an exponent of perfected knitted art, this altogether lovely suit ranks with the chic note is introduced throughout knitted styling in that solid colored

it. The hat at the left is very simply trimmed with a big cabochon of satin-covered cord. Next to it a hat with a rich feather fancy, made of ostrich plumes, reiterates the harmony of velvet and ostrich. Below, at the left, a suggestion of the poke bonnet appears in a wide-brimmed hat of black battons' plush, with round crown. A collar of metallic brocade ribbon and an airy feather pom-pom adorn it. Next to it a very popular shape is shown covered with velvet. The height of the square crown is apparently lessened by a band of georgette above one of velvet which makes a background for a collar of embroidered medallions. A rosette and sash of georgette are posed at the left side. The group is finished with a picturesque and lovely model

main stitch garments are embellished with elaborate jacquard trims, wide borders being especially favored. Often the design contrasts: silk or fiber against a woolen background always maintaining color identifications as chief interest. Indeed fanciful knitted trimmings are the order of the day. Very interesting are the remarkable simulations of fur, done in yarns and zephyrs. Toward the close of the season of the little cloche hat it seemed that millions of women had but a single thought, and that was to get a small, dainty little hat of beautiful blue-velvet, descending bit of beautiful blue-velvet mode of corded silk and trimmed at the front with a huge rosette of rich satin ribbon having a fancy edge. None of these hats leave anything to be desired in the fine art of millinery. Black and dark brown continue the favorite colors for hats made of battons' plush. Velvet has an extensive color range including black and many shades of brown, with purple, orchid, turquoise, light and dark green, strong and soft blues, blue-gray and pleasant colors and tones similar to human.

Two Welcome Moons

The full moon nearest to September 21 is popularly known as the "harvest moon." The moon at that time rises for several consecutive evenings at nearly the same hour, giving an unusual number of moonlight evenings. This is most noticeable in the higher latitudes and quite disappears at the equator. The "harvest moon" is the first full moon following the harvest moon.

Coolidge Attends Final Game
Washington, Oct. 10.—President and Mrs. Coolidge were the cheer leaders that led 30,000 Washingtonians in the cry for a home town victory while the Senators topped the Giants in the final struggle of the world series. Through all the tense twelve innings of play the President and his wife watched with zealous interest the rallies of the Senators, cheering them when runs were scored and applauding "Bucky" Harris and his mates trying for victory with an infield crippled with injuries.

MAKING GOOD IN A SMALL TOWN

Real Stories About Real Girls
By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN
(Copyright, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

MUSIC HATH CHARMS—AND CASH RETURNS

THE small-town girl musician has found her place. That's what I learned from a recent talk with a girl far more musically gifted than many a one who feels there is no proper audience for her art outside the city.

"No longer does she need to be the proverbial patient, all-enduring town fixture, submissive to the whims of children who 'take' from her, doing her daily bit with unruly students and sticky piano keys," she declared. "But neither should she, on the other hand, adopt the vices of the old-time city music master who had a convenient ruler to rap sharply the knuckles of unresponsive hands. The girl musician in a small town may do any one of a dozen things with her music; and if she happens to teach, she may maintain both her self-respect and her fair mindedness."

In these days of good roads and automobiles, the girl who elects to give lessons in piano needn't fear that old bogey of the difficulty in finding pupils. She may advertise in the local paper for her pupils, or solicit them personally, or, if she does not care to do private teaching, she may possibly find a place in the town schools. Then, the church often requires, besides the usual accompanist at Sunday and midweek services, a musician to teach Christmas and Easter carols to Sunday school students, and to train them, at various times throughout the year, for concerts and cantatas.

A personally conducted "lyceum bureau" is frequently a profitable proposition. The girl in charge should plan the series of entertainments, which may be given in church or school house, to consist of well-chosen instrumental and vocal selections, varied with talks on operas, great composers and similar subjects.

The editor of the local newspaper, if he doesn't happen to be musically-minded himself, may be glad to employ the musician's services occasionally to "cover" musical events for him. Another opportunity for her may be an arrangement with the makers of the piano of which she most approves, by which they will grant her a commission on all sales made as the result of her recommendations.

The girl musician no longer has to bury her lute under a bush if she remains in the old home town.

CONSIDER THE MARKETABLE MUSHROOM

A WAGE earner without a wage—that's the anomalous position in which a small-town girl sometimes finds herself. Home conditions may necessitate her following an endless round of washing, ironing, scrubbing and sweeping; but she may standardize at least a part of her labor, may realize the value of a part of her efforts—by growing mushrooms.

That's the solution of one girl who for years had considered herself hopelessly hampered by lack of outside contacts, and the narrowing demands of such a home upon her time.

"There's no secret of mysterious formula, in spite of a more or less prevalent opinion, for the growing of mushrooms," she assured me, "that's why a novice has just as good a chance as an experienced grower."

For the girl who decides to plant a mushroom "garden," the first step is to get spawn, which corresponds to the seeds she would use in growing other plants. This spawn, a substance taken from the living flesh of fresh mushrooms, she will find specially prepared in small-sized bricks. It is vital that she plant fresh spawn, of the first quality. This high quality spawn can be had at a reasonable price, and its use eliminates much of the element of risk in mushroom growing.

The grower may plant her mushrooms anywhere indoors, in an old barn, cellar, cave, shed or tunnel. The temperature must be even and moderate, and the beds must be shielded from the direct sunlight. The tender plants thrive on the cool semi-darkness.

Probably the girl who grows mushrooms at home will find the cellar the most accessible place that is suitable for her purpose.

Although mushrooms ordinarily are a winter crop, starting from October to May, winter, summer and intermediate mushrooms may be grown and marketed in large quantities. The girl who can furnish first quality fresh mushrooms, put up in neat three or four-pound baskets, will never lack a market. Hotels, clubs, restaurants and private families of her own community are her best-paying customers. If she can build up her trade among them. If she decides to ship some of her baskets for some distance, she should send them direct to a commission agent, who will dispose of them for her, charging about ten per cent for his services.

About 200 pounds of good, marketable mushrooms should be the average yield from each 100 square foot of bed. The girl who can't leave home may still be a factor in the economic world—through the magic of her mushrooms.

ALONG LIFE'S TRAIL

By THOMAS A. CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.
(Copyright, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

MODERN INCONVENIENCES

I HAVE just had a letter from Watson, a rural friend of mine who contemplates moving to town, and, knowing as he does that I am an old soldier in my community, he asks me to help him find a suitable place in which to live. He wishes, he says, "a medium-sized house with all the modern conveniences." Perhaps it is only a slip of the pen for he is none too prudent; possibly he was serious in what he said; in either case I understand him.

There is a good deal said on occasion concerning the discomforts and privations which our pioneer ancestors suffered—the meagerness of heat and light and means of communication with the outside world with which they had to put up, and the almost complete lack of modern machinery.

I am not at all sure that the hardships of modern life are any less severe than those my grandfather suffered.

No man who has a telephone in his house has any chance for uninterupted leisure day or night. It was raining this afternoon; I could not go out. I was alone, so I decided to do a little construction work in the basement. I had only settled down to business when I heard the telephone bell jangling. At first I decided to ignore it, but then it might be important so I rushed upstairs almost breaking my neck in an attempt to get there before the caller rang off, only to find that the operator had called the wrong number. I am not at all convinced that the man who invented the telephone conferred an unalloyed blessing upon humanity.

Electric lights are wonderful, but we had to resort to the old-time candles the other night while the local dynamo were being repaired. Water pipes and automobiles and oil bearing plants bring their inconveniences which sometimes outnumber their comforts.

I recently looked through a modern kitchen and laundry in a friend's house, equipped with every sort of labor-saving device. It would take a graduate of an engineering college to operate the machinery intelligently. The ordinary maid would electrocute herself the first day she were turned loose in such a machine shop.

I believe Watson was right when he referred to the house filled with "all modern inconveniences."

MAKING THE BEST OF A BARGAIN

I MADE a thoroughly bad bargain with Grover when I was nineteen. I wanted very much to get into his business and learn the details of it, and I presume I showed my eagerness, and he took advantage of me cruelly. I was to stay with him for a year for a trifling remuneration, and during that time he was to teach me as much of his trade as I could master.

Precious little he taught me, but I really learned more that year than during any similar time before or since. I had never before been subject to anyone; I'd never had a boss excepting my own will and pleasure, but I was to learn what it meant to work under orders, to do unpleasant and difficult things and never to receive a word of praise for the doing.

I was ordered about by everyone in the office. All the druggery and the dirty work was shunted upon me, and there were tasks that had to be done no matter how much overtime it took. I was everybody's slave and trust-aboard.

I picked up a good deal of information about the business, but what I got came from my own initiative. I could, of course, have thrown up my job, but I was too proud, and this would have seemed to me to show a yellow streak. I had gone into it of my own choosing and with my eyes open, and I was determined to see the thing through.

All the time, however, I was learning to control myself under the most irritating conditions; I was learning to obey orders, to take sarcastic criticism and nagging without a comeback, even when I knew I was right. I was working daily to the point of exhaustion. I was getting scarcely enough pay to buy the food that I ate, and I was learning to live on a bare subsistence.

The year came to an end finally, and I have always been glad that I kept my bargain, for I learned lessons that have been invaluable to me during all the years which have intervened. I know what it means to make a hard bargain and keep it, to carry through some thing that is difficult and unpleasant when I have once begun it, to seek out when a chance might bring me more money and an easier time and a pleasant environment, to pay without whimpering the penalty of bad judgment and hasty decision, and I know I am stronger for the lesson.

To Photograph Deer

A deer's sense of smell is wonderful, and they get the scent a half mile away, and a moose over a mile with the wind blowing directly toward it, says Nature Magazine. Hence it is that the first thing that the photographer does is to see which way the wind is. If the wind blows wrong, stay in camp, because you will see no animals.

Gold prospecting is very keen throughout Rhodesia and one night eight prospectors slept in the freezing cold on the site of a dead miner's forsaken gold claim in order to be the first to erect the customary discovery notice.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription. Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper—Advertisement.

How They Summured

"What did you do during your vacation?" asked one returned student of another on the college campus the other day, says the Emporia Gazette.

"I chauffered. What did you do?"

"I dishwashed."

Italians Endow Library

A library of Italian literature will shortly be endowed at New Orleans by the Italian Chamber of Commerce of that city, according to the Bollettino of the latter organization. Inauguration to the New Orleans region dates back to a long time before the greater influx of Italians to the North and East, and it is planned that the new library, a gift to one of the city's universities, shall reflect the cultural standards prevailing in the New Orleans group.—The Interpreter.

WILL INSPECT UNIVERSITY

To prepare a report on the University of Arizona which will be used by the committee of the Association of Arizona Universities to determine whether or not Arizona deserves recognition by that body, Dean David A. Robertson arrived at the University this week and will spend about six days in his investigation. This is perhaps the most important step in the development of the University that has been taken in several years and if the Association gives the University recognition it will place the college on a level with the largest in the country.

It is to be noted that the band of Republican orators who are to travel from President Coolidge's birthplace to the Pacific Coast have not laid their course through Wisconsin.

STUDY COLORADO PROBLEM

Faculty members and students of the University of Arizona have formed a "study club" for the purpose of discussing and studying the problems in the development of the Colorado River. Judge Geo. R. Darnell of the Pima County Superior Court is chairman of the meetings and different problems connected with the river are being presented by the leading faculty members of the University.
