SENATOR HENRY CABOT LODGE TO BE BURIED AT CAMBRIDGE

Beeton, Nov. 10.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, who in life was a figure apart from the mass of the nation's legislators, among whom he moved with distinction will have funeral services in which old associations will be maintained to the end, and in which his simplicity of tastes will be preserved.

Among the attendants at the services will be delegations from the national senate and house of representatives, from both branches of the Massachusetts legislature; committees representing the town of Nahant, which Senator Lodge had served as moderator for years, of the Massachusetts Historical Society, which he had served as president, and of Harvard university.

President Coolidge sent his message of sympathy and made public a tribute that placed Senator Lodge as "one of the great men of our time."

HEARD EXPRESSES APPRECIATION TO ARIZONA CITIZENS

November 6th, 1924. To the Voters of Arizona: My heartfelt thanks are extended to the thousands of men and women throughout Arizona who have given me such loyal and vigorous support in the recent election.

We were fighting for a great great cause. The campaign has been worth while and to me a real inspiration. We have tried to conduct a constructive and clean campaign and to outline new standards of public service.

I shall cheerfully accept the verdict of the people, and as a private citizen shall try and continue to do my share in upbuilding Arizona.

With full faith in the future of our great state and deep appreciation of the wonderful support given me, Yours Faithfully, DWIGHT E. HEARD.

The awards were made by a board of judges composed of Hon. Richard E. Earight, Police Commissioner of the City of New York; Brigadier General Smedley D. Butler, Director of Public Safety of Philadelphia; and W. H. Cameron, managing director of the National Safety Council, Chicago.

PATAGONIAN TO MOVE TO NEW QUARTERS; BUYS LINO TYPE

The Patagonian has purchased a home of its own and has added a new room to the structure, where it will be permanently located within a few days. A linotype machine also has been purchased, the increasing business of the paper making this expenditure necessary.

The value of the Patagonian as an advertising medium has long been recognized by Santa Cruz county merchants, and the last year has shown a remarkable increase in business, both commercial and advertising.

We will celebrate our twelfth anniversary about the middle of December, when we will be pleased to welcome visitors, especially those who have never seen a linotype in operation.

We wish to thank our subscribers and advertisers for their patronage during the life of the paper and to express the hope that our efforts to satisfy have not been in vain.

REPUBLICAN RULE IN BOTH HOUSES

ADMINISTRATION'S SWEEPING VICTORY CARRIES CONTROL OF CONGRESS.

That President Coolidge has been given a substantial working majority in both the senate and the house is most gratifying both to Mr. Coolidge and his co-workers.

Several important items mark the election of President Coolidge as most remarkable in such events. Among them may be enumerated the generous support that was given in the election to the senate and house of members of the President's party.

Deeply grateful for "the faith and confidence" expressed by the people at the polls, President Coolidge in a statement of appreciation said: "It does not seem possible to me to make an adequate expression concerning the presidency of the United States. No other honor equals this."

"Such powers as I have I dedicate to the service of all my countrymen. In the performance of the duties of my office I could not ask for anything more than the sympathetic consideration which my fellow Americans have always bestowed upon me."

"I have no appeal except to the common sense of all the people. I have made no pledge except to serve them. I have no object except to promote their welfare."

The lineup of the next congress presents a situation that will further stress the support President Coolidge will have during the next four years.

Causes of the Landslide. Causes for a landslide in a presidential election always are discussed, after the smoke of the battle has cleared.

aside from the preference of the majority of the voters for the present administration may be ascribed to the dissatisfaction of the labor element and the discontent of the farmers.

It is obvious that the voters of the country did not follow either Davis or LaFollette in their attempt to score the alleged corrupt acts of members of the last Republican administration against Coolidge personally.

President is Congratulated. John W. Davis, the defeated presidential candidate on the Democratic ticket, telegraphed President Coolidge as follows: "Permit me to congratulate you on your sweeping victory and to express the hope that your administration may by its success insure to the welfare of the country."

Two Women Governors. For the first time in the history of the country, at this election two women were elected as governors—Mrs. Nellie E. Ross, on the Democratic ticket, as governor of Wyoming.

STROKE FATAL TO SENATE LEADER

DEATH WAS CAUSED BY ILLNESS SIMILAR TO THAT WHICH KILLED PRESIDENT WILSON

SENATOR LODGE DIES

SOLO SERVED IN CONGRESS THIRTY-ONE YEARS; WAS FOREMOST IN PARTY COUNCILS

Cambridge, Mass.—Senator Henry Cabot Lodge died at the Charlestown hospital at 11:11 Sunday night.

Stricken at noon on Wednesday, the senior senator from Massachusetts lingered for four and a half days when the end came.

The hope that revived for a time faded, however, as he lapsed again into unconsciousness and gradually grew weaker. Never from the outset did his physicians offer encouragement in their bulletins.

Establishment of a five acres camp site in the Grand Canon National park for use of the disabled American veterans of the World war has been requested of Stephen D. Marter, director of the national parks in a petition by state officials of the veterans' organization.

With the reopening of Congress only three weeks ahead Senator Lodge was planning to leave the hospital in a few days and get ready to take his seat when the stroke came.

He left him unconscious and a condition so critical that death was considered likely at any time. Senator Lodge had four years still to serve in the United States Senate, where he had represented this state continuously for thirty-one years.

After Senator Lodge was stricken the Lodge home at Nahant was closed and members of the family came to Boston, where they made their home with the senator's son, John C. Lodge.

At the time the end came, Mrs. John C. Lodge and Miss Helena Lodge, a granddaughter of the senator, were in the room with him.

WINSOME CLOTHES FOR GIRLS; SMALL BUT BRILLIANT HATS

"DIFFICULT" and even "awkward" have been applied to the age of the young miss who has passed eleven and is still on her way to seventeen, and sometimes "difficult," at least, is merited. But those who make it a business to create clothes for the young have turned out such winsome things for this between-times period that charm replaces awkwardness and difficulties disappear.

To begin at the beginning, they start out with carefully selected patterns in popular materials. This season they are giving much attention to plain and striped flannels, twills, velveteen, velvet and many dependable woolsens. After fabric they consider color, which and are worn with linen collars and cuffs as a finish.

"When she will she will, and when she won't she won't—and she has signified her intention of wearing small, or at most small to medium-small, hats, with her winter furs. Therefore designers of headwear are busy with these small but important affairs, making brilliant gems of millinery, as full of life and sparkle as jewels. Their task is to take the popular, becoming shapes and vary them endlessly, by means of materials and trimmings, so that "age cannot wither nor custom stale" their infinite variety.

must contribute a cheerful note to the little maid's winter garb. Plaids in many color combinations, red and gold (or silver) embroidery on dark, plain backgrounds, and other colorful embroideries, sparingly used, tone up the day frocks. The elements of neatness and, above all, simplicity are never forgotten when children's clothes are considered. Collars and cuffs which may be kept fresh are everywhere present.

Simple one-piece straight dresses in brilliant plaids usually fasten to one side and are bound at the edges with black braid. Narrow black leather belts are worn with them. Plaid skirts with plain bodies worn with

A group of new models, just launched, is shown here. The shapes are almost identical, but each has an individuality that gives it distinction. At the top a brilliant satin elle in black makes a background for a shaped band of leopard skin brocade, ending at the sides in metallic ribbon bands that terminate in hanging loops. This is certainly a very original conception and most becoming to certain types of faces.

The bit of splendor at the left is made of velvet, with an aimless pattern of gold braid making a tracery over it. Colored jewels are scattered about in the pattern and, just to show that there is no end to its affluence, a long ostrich fancy falls like a scarf from one side. One can imagine this hat in the rich fuchsia shade, or any other of the season's favorites.

and metallic threads and thereby hangs a tale. In this instance several tails of brown fur are posed at each side, where two or three of them snuggle against the puff of hair that peeps from under the turban.

A very regular looking affair occupies the center of the group, made of satin, with sectional crown and rich embroidery of colored silk, which probably reveals the glint of metal threads. A close-fitting turban finishes the group, with embroidered crown and facing of metal tissue, which makes a background for ornaments of embroidery and fur.

The all fur hat is, so far, conspicuous by its absence, but bands, fringes, ornaments and tiny pels are plentiful in trimmings, which include furs dyed in pastel colors.

For Women In Good Health

Read How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Changed Conditions For These Housewives

Back Don't Bother Me Now
Lincoln, Nebraska.—"My back would bother me so and when I had to do any heavy lifting it made me sick to my stomach with the pains in my back. I have my housework to do and four babies to take care of so when I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I took it and I feel better. My back don't bother me and I can eat more and work. I do all my housework and washing for six in the family. I will tell other women to take the Vegetable Compound and you may publish my letter."—Mrs. CHARLES F. DOLEZAL, 1201 Garber Ave., Lincoln, Nebraska.

Felt Better At Once
Volga City, Iowa.—"I will tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was all run down and could hardly be on my feet. I was so cold I could not keep warm. I had numb feelings and then heat flashes would pass over my body. I had severe pains in my sides and was very nervous. I saw your advertisement in the newspapers so I thought I would try your medicine. My husband got me a bottle of the Vegetable Compound and I began to feel better as soon as I started taking it. I have taken it off and on for three years now. I keep house and do all my work for my husband and two little boys and make my garden. I feel fine and I tell others what the medicine has done for me. I think it is the best medicine in the world for women."—Mrs. THOMAS GRINDLE, Volga City, Iowa.

Can Do Any Kind of Work
Fouke, Arkansas.—"I had the 'Flu' and after that I had a pain in my side and was not able to do my work I was so weak. I found an advertisement in a paper and it told what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do, and I took it. Now I can do any kind of work I want to. I think every family ought to keep it in the house all the time and I intend to do so."—Mrs. DORA PHILYAW, R.R. No. 2, Fouke, Arkansas.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?" 98 per cent of these replies are "Yes."

This shows that 98 out of every 100 women who take this medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This goes to prove that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—can and does do good work. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Willing to Accommodate
The Salina (Kan.) Journal would award a blue ribbon for optimism to the gentleman who, though broke, walked into a restaurant at Herington and ordered a 70-cent meal. He refused to be sad after he had finished it and had not the price. So, determined to be satisfied whatever happened, he approached the cashier and said: "I haven't any money and didn't have when I came in. If there's any work to do, I'll work. If you want me arrested, I'll wait until you call an officer; or, if you want to fight, that will be all right."

The Bureau of standards says nitric acid should be used to remove the old mercury from old mirrors only if they were made in the days when tin amalgam was used. For the more modern mirrors it suggests trying one of the reducing solutions used in photography, such as a solution of "hyppo" and potassium ferricyanide (red prussiate of potash).—Washington Star.

RAILROAD OFFICIAL WARNING AGAINST INCREASING TAXATION

DEL MONTE, Calif., Oct. 25.—Taxpayers of California, in county, municipal, state and national taxes in 1923, paid considerably more than $500,000,000 in taxes, or substantially the value of all the products of the soil of the state, fruit and farming, in their raw state.

This was one of the facts given the California Bankers Association a prominent railroad man, in an address here today on the increasing burden taxation is placing upon the workers and producers of the country.

"One seventh of the income of our people now goes to taxes," he said. "We are paying three times as much per capita in taxes as we did in 1912."

The speaker declared that "only the most shallow of thinkers believe taxation rests where it is initially placed," adding that "it is an element in the cost of every bit of food put in the mouth, of every garment worn, of every roof that shelters, of travel and entertainment, and, at the end, in the cost of death itself."

He showed that increased taxation cannot be justified merely because the money collected is spent for good purposes.

poses, that the effect upon the people from whom the money is taken must be considered.

In presenting figures as to California, he said he did so simply as a convenient illustration. "The picture is much the same everywhere," he added.

"In 1880," said the speaker, "the United States Government expended for all purposes $267,000,000. Now in the year 1924 with the war six years behind us our national expenditures are thirteen times as great as they were in 1880. There is not a property owner, or wage earner, or purchaser of anything in this country who does not feel this burden.

"In California in 1880 it cost us $3,871,000 to run the state and the total state debt was $3,133,000. In 1924 it cost us $7,000,000 to carry on our state operations and in 1922 our net debt had risen to $76,000,000. This net debt increased in just twelve years, from 1910 to 1922, from $10,000,000 to $76,000,000.

"The taxpayers of California, in county, municipal, state and national taxes in 1923, paid considerably more than $500,000,000 in taxes, or substantially the value of all the products of the soil of the state, fruit and farming, in their raw state.

"In 1902 the cost of government in California municipalities was $15,325,000. In 1924 it will be in round figures substantially ten times that amount.

"More striking still is the fact that these municipalities have borrowed vast sums against the future, mortgaging the individuals within their corporate limits for that purpose. In 1902 the bonded debt was $10,500,000. In 1923 the municipalities had increased this amount twenty-fold, or to a total of $201,000,000.

"In 1902 the cost of county government in California was $14,896,000 and in 1923 this had grown to $200,000,000 or fourteen-fold. The debts of these counties in 1902 were less than $3,000,000. The debt is now more than fifty times as much, being in excess of $170,000,000, which somebody, sometime must pay.

"The increase in population in that period in California has been from 1,485,000 in 1900 to 4,200,000 in 1923, or about three-fold only.

"I am not criticizing these expenditures in themselves. These expenditures generally have been for good purposes.

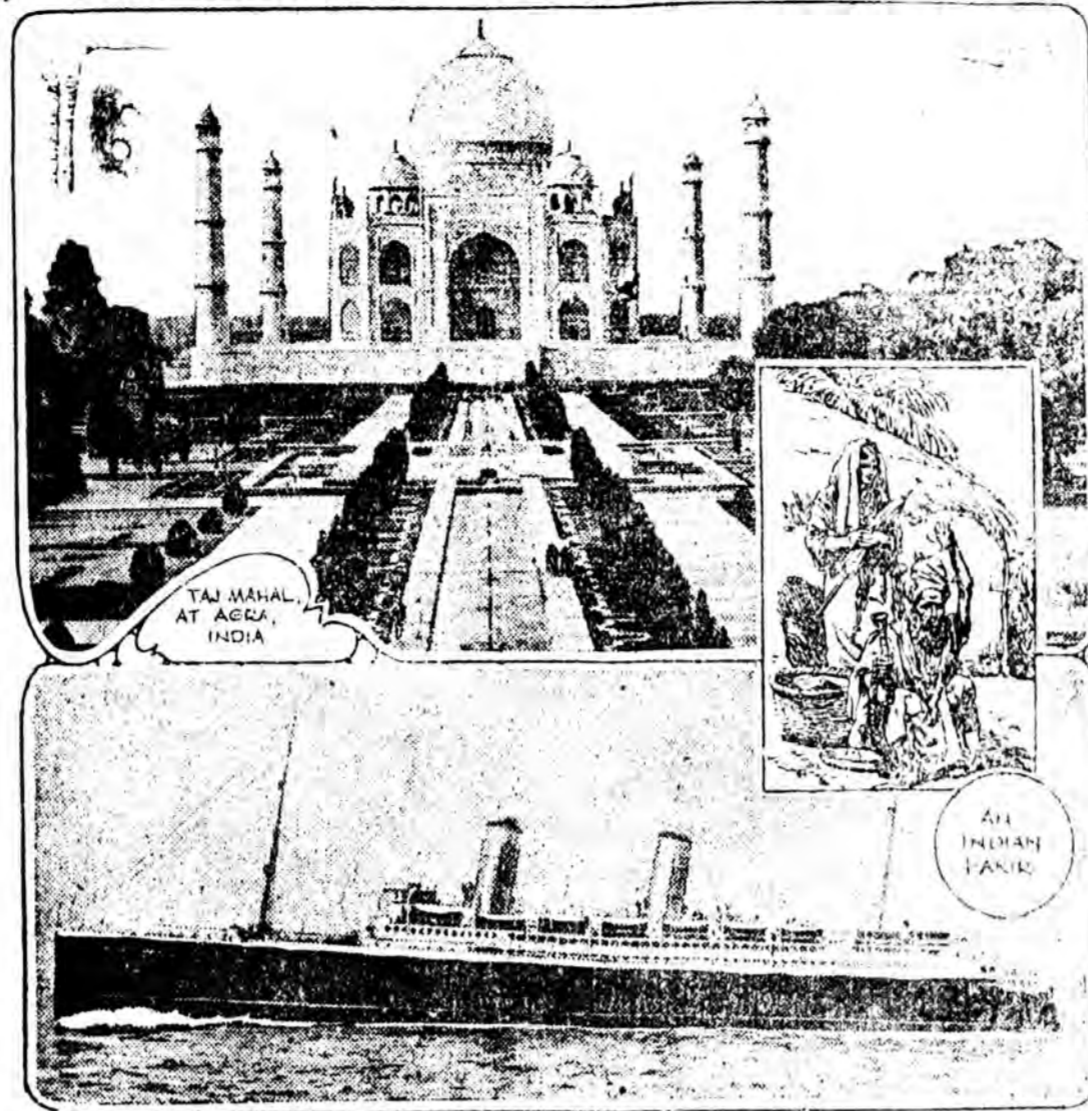

"But in our collective life as a municipality, or as a county, or as a state, we are subject to the same laws of economy, the same rules of business, the same sense of justice and fair play that govern our private relations. No doubt each of us would like to have the finest of automobiles, a fine house with gardens and lawns encompassing it, perhaps even a private golf course of our own if our ambitions run high, and maybe a yacht on the bay. But we don't have them for the very simple reason that we cannot afford them. There is a limit upon public expenditures just as there is upon private expenditures and the municipality, county, state or nation that does not realize that fact is headed for ruin.

"The national and state administrations of our government should be upheld in their efforts to exercise a reasonable economy in public affairs and uphold vigorously. The President of the United States and the Governor of this state are endeavoring to carry on our public business with a reasonable economy. A very great achievement of President Coolidge's administration is the great reduction in national expenditures and the handling of the finances of the nation so as to lessen tremendously the interest on the national debt.

"This is a time of great unrest. It is the aftermath of war, or rather the accompaniment of war. For up to this time, and until the adoption of the Dawes Plan in Europe, there has really been no peace in the most populous of the civilized sections of the world. Further, our social structure is changing with the advance of science. Items that were luxuries a few years ago are now necessities. The automobile is a vivid example of a creation of an almost new universal desire. In such times as those demagogues invade the public ear. They promise the moon to those who appear to want it. There are few men in places of great responsibility in the United States today, no matter in what line of human activity but have risen from the ranks. Their roll call is most eloquent answer to the demagogic statement that this government is controlled by predatory wealth. The old fashioned virtues of thrift, industry, integrity, initiative, constructive action and human care in order that we may have both clean minds and sturdy bodies; these are all discarded by the orators who are throwing chaff across the nation. They would have us make ourselves rich by taxing ourselves. They preach a destructive discontent rather than a constructive initiative. Certainly all of their plans are absolutely heedless of that one vivid conclusion written across the history of every country, and that is, the excessive cost of government and the excessive taxation of its people spell ruin and disaster."

Globe-Girdling by Sea and Air Is Popular Nowadays

Voyaging around the world was considered a rare and difficult experience not so many years ago, but now even the aviators—"Maggiellans of the Air"—circle the globe, as well as palatial ocean steamships. Looming this great loop is quite the popular thing nowadays, and when anyone says "Haven't you been around yet?" you are supposed to know that they refer to the amp waist line of Mother Earth. And, speaking of Mother Earth, reminds one that Dan Cupid is the pilot of many of these voyages and that as a match maker he and Mother Earth work well together in seeing that the right young man and the right young lady get to know each other very well during 130 days of proximity. As a first aid to matrimony the around the world cruise is alleged to be quite effective.

The "Empress of France," which leaves New York Jan. 14, 1925 to circle the globe and returns to New York May 23, is an oil burner of 18,400 tons gross register and is a favorite ship of H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, when he returns from England across the Atlantic to Canada and his famous "E. Ranch" near Alberta. The "Empress of France" knows the way around the globe because she has "put a circle round about the earth" already, even if it wasn't in forty minutes. Her first voyage under the guidance of expert navigators was completed without a hitch. When her passengers wave good bye to their friends on the pier in New York and Miss Liberty towering above the harbor on Jan. 14, 1925, they may say with Monte Cristo, "The world is mine!" Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, Algiers, Monaco and Naples are among the first ports reached, then the ship moves on to Palestine, Egypt, India, Ceylon, the Philippines, China, Japan, the Hawaiian Islands, Victoria and Vancouver, San Francisco, the Panama Canal, Havana and many other places of interest en route. Owing to lack of space the list is far from complete.

One of the many wonders seen will be the world famous Taj Mahal at Agra, India, which is said to be the most beautiful building on the globe. The Taj Mahal was erected by the Emperor Shah Jehan in memory of his wife, and it is claimed that the construction of this exquisite jewel among the buildings of the world cost $15,000,000 and kept 20,000 men busy for 17 years.

May Be Bride of Prince of Wales

Princess Ileana of Rumania, whose mother, Queen Marie, is supposed to have an "understanding" with the Prince.

There are those who say that the Prince of Wales and the Queen of Rumania have an excellent understanding. If that be true then the prince's fate is sealed. He is dealing with "a woman who gets her own way." The little Princess Ileana is young and beautiful, but what is far more to the point, her mother is one of the cleverest diplomats in Europe, and has already seated two of her daughters on thrones. She went to the Paris Peace conference armed with 64 passes, 22 fur pieces, 31 corsets and 80 pairs of slippers, and with feminine charm enthralled the entire corps of diplomats.

In an article in Hearst's Internationalist for November, Mabel Potter Duggett tells of an interview with the queen, at the time of the Paris Conference. The interview evolved into a heart-to-heart discussion of feminine strategy, older and subtler than all the warring of prime ministers, and into a visit to the queen's boudoir. There was "the little gown trimmed with point de Milan for the reception at the Italian embassy," and "the white mousseline de soie with the hand-painted rosettes that Mr. Lloyd George would like," and "the gown of cloth of gold in heavy gold embroidery especially designed for a luncheon with President Wilson."

"Yes," the queen told her interviewer, "one must have clothes, and the wit to wear them, too. One must have looks. Then one must have charm. And the greatest of these is clarity."

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 25.—At the first session of the Senate at the City of Washington, today, the third day of December, one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three, JOINT RESOLUTION, PROPOSING AN AMENDMENT TO THE CONSTITUTION OF THE UNITED STATES.

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following articles is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by the legislature of three-fourths of the several States, shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a part of the Constitution:

"ARTICLE
"Section 1. The Congress shall have power to limit, regulate, and prohibit the labor of persons under eighteen years of age.
"Section 2. The power of the several States is unimpaired by this article except that the operation of State laws shall be suspended to the extent necessary to give effect to legislation enacted by the Congress."

How To Choose Wallpaper

All the leading decorators and the magazines devoted to the artistic aspects of the home are united strongly concerning the use of wallpaper, instead of the cold, naked-plastered walls that have been in vogue for several years past.

When such authorities as House and Garden, Good Housekeeping, Country Life, Pictorial Review and Arts and Decorations carry articles on wallpaper, the amateur home decorator may know that she is choosing a correct wall treatment when she selects wallpaper. She has only to consider her individual decorative problems when she goes forth to select her papers.

Wallpaper is infinitely more than a mere wall covering. It is a real decoration, something that adds quality, character, texture, life, to the empty room even before the first piece of furniture is brought into the room. Hence the task is solely decorative. It balances the home-maker to study well a few basic principles and choose her papers with care.

Avoid cool colors—green, blue and gray for north rooms, and choose instead warm tints, yellow, or gay flower designs that carry several cheerful colors. Use the cool colors, if you especially like them, only in south rooms that get a great deal of light. Use rather plain papers, or those with very tiny designs, in small rooms, to secure an effect of greater space. Living rooms and halls should not strive to be dainty, but should have practical paper that will not show soil too easily and that can be patched unnoticed. Use dainty flower papers for bedrooms.

FIRE!

Insure your property from loss by FIRE. Fires come unannounced and if you are protected by an insurance policy in a good, reliable company, such as the Liverpool & London & Globe or the New Zealand, for which I am an agent, your losses by fire will be promptly and fully paid.

Phone Permits Several to Listen or Talk at Same Time

To save time in large offices and eliminate the necessity for making repeated calls on the telephone, a small switch-

With it, the speaker can communicate with a number of offices and receive replies at the same time. It is designed especially for executives and managers.

Figuring Water Required on a Farm

A certain quantity of water is required as the daily output of every water-supply system, whether it is pumped by wind or power and a storage tank must be provided for holding the water until it is used, and for storing the surplus. If a windmill is used to pump the water a tank large enough to hold a three-day supply of water should be provided in order to furnish water over a period when there is little or no wind. If engine-driven pumps are used the tanks need only be large enough to hold a single day's supply, as the engine can be operated at any time regardless of weather conditions. The amount of water required for all purposes from isolated water-supply plants, is, on the average, as follows: For

All household and toilet purposes show 25 gal. for each member of the family; allow 10 gal. for each horse, 10 gal. for each cow, 2 gal. for each pig and 1 gal. for each sheep. Applying the rule the minimum allowance for a family of five persons for household purposes only will be 125 gallons. In order that ample pressure will be obtained on all roads the storage tank should be elevated at least 10 ft. higher than the highest tap and the higher the tank the greater will be the pressure.

Tractor Guided Like Wheelbarrow Takes Place of Switch Engine

Run by storage batteries, a small electric truck for switching cars and towing lighters on canals has proved successful in Germany. It is guided somewhat like a wheelbarrow with two long handles between which are the starting and control levers. The tractor has power sufficient to pull or push seven small freight cars.

A detachable running-board ice box of the kind shown in the illustration has been found to be of great value on sailing yachts. It is made of heavy galvanized iron, has a compartment for the ice, and a compartment for fruit and soft-drink bottles can be packed, and another compartment for bread, cakes and food that must be kept dry. Two hinged covers are fitted to the top, as indicated, and a slat grating is provided in the bottom to allow easy drainage. The whole arrangement is fastened to the running board by means of four bolts passing through two angle-iron brackets, which are riveted to the ends of the box, and through holes drilled through the running board and bushed with ferrules. The ferrules are screwed up out of brass stock and are secured with a fine-pitch thread so as to permit screwing them into the wood; these have a nicer appearance when the box is detached than plain drilled holes. A drain hole is drilled through the bottom of the ice compartment and through the running board. A 3/8-in. nut is soldered in this hole and a screw plug fitted in, a rubber washer being provided under the head.

Iron and steel rust causes damage estimated at $3,000,000,000 in the United States annually.

BUSINESS REVIEW FOR OCTOBER

The Situation in General
Arizona business showed an upward swing in October, but from general reports gains less than were expected, and complaints were forthcoming in some lines and localities.

Ginning of the cotton crop is about half finished, and production should not be far below 100,000 bales. The price receded after its September advance, and the market has not been as favorable as had been believed indicated. Hay prices continue good, and the state's crop is now reported as 645,000 tons. Indications point to a successful winter lettuce season.

Range conditions over the state remain unsatisfactory, and certain markets for cattle render the outlook unfavorable.

The copper market registered an advance during the month, closing at 13 1/4 @ 13 1/2 cents a pound. Shipments of the metal so far this year are reported as setting a peace time record, and with domestic consumption at the heaviest figure ever recorded, any increase in European buying will have a good effect.

Checking transactions in principal cities of the state as reported to the Arizona Industrial Congress showed a general gain over September, but in seven cases out of ten were below figures for October, 1923.

Agriculture
With half the cotton crop ginned, Arizona is approaching the end of another agricultural season with generally satisfactory results.

Cotton showed a slight decline in condition during October, official forecast of production standing at 92,000 bales the 18th. Indications point to better average yields in the Yuma and upper Bill valleys and the Postville project than in the Salt River Valley, and picking in Yuma county is considerably ahead of Maricopa. The price of cotton receded close to three cents a pound during the month, and a number of growers are reported to be holding their crop. The market has been less favorable than was expected.

Prospects for the winter lettuce season are good, as there appears to be little chance of competition on early shipments from the Imperial Valley, owing to the recent water shortage there, although Imperial acreage has not been greatly reduced. Carlot movement from the Salt River Valley is expected to begin soon after November 20th. There are about 3,200 acres in this district, and about 300 in the Toltec-Eloy section, while Yuma Valley acreage is reported as high as 900.

Average of peas in the Salt River Valley has shown a considerable increase, about 1,000 acres being indicated, of which one-third is reported for winter shipment and the rest for spring.

Pat cattle prices were maintained at about the same level during the month. Salt River Valley packers paid 6 1/2 to 7 cents a pound for fed steers, and some went to Los Angeles at corresponding figures.

During the past two week about 90 per cent of the Salt River Valley feeders signed up with the co-operative sales plan of the California Cattleman's association, with an additional number from Yuma and some range cattlemen.

Mining
The copper market advanced again in October, gaining around half a cent a pound to close the month at 13 1/4 to 13 1/2. Over-subscription of the German loan under the Dawes-Young plan was a contributing factor, and it is likely that increased purchases were largely speculative in character.

Consumption of the red metal continues at a rate declared to be a peace time record, with the heaviest domestic consumption in the history of this country. Copper shipments for the first nine months of this year averaged 219,000,000 pounds a month, the total being 1,156,260,000 on domestic account and 815,204,000 for European delivery. The latter figure is interesting as showing that, contrary to common belief, Europe is and has been buying a great deal of copper although hitherto prevented by post-war troubles from taking enough for all increasing requirements.

80-called surplus stocks on hand showed an increasing during the third quarter, amounting on October 1, to 273,503,000 pounds, against 224,390,000 on July 1.

In Arizona no material change has occurred in operations of the large producing mines.

Some activity is apparent in the development of prospects and properties not yet of a producing class. Among recent developments may be mentioned the announcement that the Verde Jerome shaft will be sunk from 150 to 1,000 feet; the reported opening of a new body of sulphide ore by the Kay Copper corporation at Canon; and resumption of work at the North Battle at Superior after a brief shutdown.

The new mill of the Sheldon Mining company at Walker is in operation, capacity being reported as 200 tons a day. A sampler for custom ores is operating at Kingman.

Railroads

Freight tonnage of the Arizona Eastern in October was 371,783 tons, compared to 325,110 in September and 370,031 in October, 1923. Arizona tonnage of the Santa Fe in September was 121,854, against 117,390 in August and 111,574 in September of last year. August tonnage of the El Paso and Southwestern in Arizona was 220,635, compared to 214,917 in July and 201,636 in August, 1923.

Consolidation of the El Paso and Southwestern system with the Southern Pacific became effective November 1, with consolidation of the Arizona Eastern with the Southern Pacific scheduled to follow on the 8th, resulting in adjustment of rates on the respective roads to a one-mile basis, with accompanying benefits to intrastate shippers.

Actual construction of the new Southern Pacific main line through the Florence-Casa Grande and Salt River Valleys has started, first operations beginning near Chandler.

Banking
Checking transactions in principal cities of the state for October exceeded September figures in every instance except one, but in a majority of cases were below those of the corresponding month last year.

Progress Reports From About The State

BISBEE—Business conditions improving, due to better sentiment in regard to copper. Last season has been profitable one to truck farmers. Plans for a much larger acreage of Valencia onions are going forward.

PHOENIX—Business showed improvement. Price of cotton less favorable than was expected. Building permits aggregated $144,729 in value in October, against $214,016 in September and $217,424, in October last year. Good returns for early lettuce indicated. Citrus fruit harvest going ahead with good market.

TOMBSTONE—Shipments of silver-lead ores amounted to 10 cars in October. Business showed increase in all lines. Cattle ranges are in poor shape, and stock is being moved out of lower (w)hite feeding grounds in large numbers.

TUCSON—October building permits totaled $121,482, against $108,708 in September and $68,770 in October, 1923. Banking transactions show large advance over last month and last year. Business seems to be picking up. New arrivals reported daily.

YUMA—First shippings of alfalfa hay will be ready to cut in ten days. Very good grade assured. Hay selling at $22 a ton on cars. Weather excellent for picking cotton. Ginnings to October 30 were 11,850 bales. Indications are picking will be finished by end of year. Cotton is selling at 22 cents a pound, a decline of 3/4, during the month. Seed has gone up $5 a ton, now selling at $22. Many farmers holding crop. Lettuce is up to good stand, with outlook for early crop.

DAVID BURRILL LEE

SYNOPSIS—Bud Lee, horse breeder of the Blue Lake ranch, convinced Bayne Trevors, manager, is deliberately wrecking the property owned by Judith Sanford, a young woman; her cousin, Pollock Hampton, and Timothy Gray, decides to throw up his job. Judith arrives and announces she has bought Gray's share in the ranch and will run it. She discharges Trevors, after shooting him twice in self-defense. The men on the ranch dislike taking orders from a girl, but by subduing a vicious horse and proving her thorough knowledge of ranch life, Judith wins the best of them. She decides to stay for a while at least. Judith becomes convinced that her veterinarian, Bill Crowley, is treacherous. She discharges him and gets back Doc Tripp, her dead father's man. Pollock Hampton, part owner, comes to stay "for good." Trevors accepts Hampton's invitation to visit the ranch. Judith's messenger is held up and robbed of the monthly pay roll. Bud Lee goes to the city for more money, getting back safely with it, though his horse is killed under him. Both he and Judith see Trevors' hand in the crime.

In the clump of brush, close to the outer fringe, behind a low, broad boulder, a man had lain on his belly no longer ago than yesterday. Broken twigs showed it, a small brush crushed down told of it, the marks of his toes in some of the softer soil proclaimed it eloquently. And, had other signs been required, there they were: two empty brass cartridges where the automatic ejector had thrown them several feet away.

While Judith visualized just what had occurred, saw the tall man—he must have been tall for his boot toes to scratch the earth under while his rifle-barrel lay for support across the boulder in front—resting his gun and fringing down into the canyon—Lee was back at her side, saying shortly: "What do you think? There's a plain trail up here, old as the hills, but tip-top for speedy going."

"And," said Judith without looking up, "it runs down into the next saddle, to the north of that ridge, curves up again and with monuments all along the way, runs straight to the Upper End and comes down to the northeast to the lake. It's the old Indian trail. If the man we want turned east, then he went right on to the lake before he stopped putting one foot in front of the other. Unless he hid out all night, which I don't believe."

"What makes you think he went that far?"

"There's no other trail up here that gets anywhere. Now," and she rose swiftly, confronting him, "the thing for you to do, Bud Lee, is to get back to your horse, take the road, make time getting to the Upper End and see what you can see there."

Hurrying back to their horses, they rode to the ranch-house where Judith, with no word of adieu, left Lee to go to the house. Lee made a late lunch, saddled another horse, and when the bunk-house clock stood at a quarter of four, started for the Upper End.

"That girl's got the savvy," was his one remark to himself.

CHAPTER VI

Under Fire

Lee, coming to the water's edge, sought to guess where the old Indian trail came down. And here again, starting him for a second time, Judith rode up.

"She, too, had a fresh horse; she too now carried a rifle across her arm. Bud Lee frowned.

"One of us," he said calmly, looking her straight in the eyes, "is going back. Which one?"

"Neither," she retorted promptly. She even smiled confidently at him. "For I won't. And you won't."

"Do you need to be told," he asked her coolly, "that this is no sort of job for a girl? You'd only be in the way."

"If you want glittering generalities," she jeered at him, "then listen to this: A man's job, first, last, and all time, is to be chivalrous to a woman! And not a bumptious boor!"

"Look!" exclaimed Judith. "Some one has been repairing the old cabin! He's made a bench yonder under the big tree, too. And he has walled in the spring with rocks, and . . . Who in the world can it be? There's even a little garden of wild flowers!"

Bud Lee, for no reason clear to himself, flushed. He offered no explanation at first. Here he spent many an hour when the time was his for idling; here upon many a Sunday, when work was slack, did he come to smoke alone, loaf alone, read from the few books on the cabin's shelves.

"Maybe," he suggested at last, when it was clear that Judith was going straight to the door, "this is where our stick-up gents hang out. Choice place for a cutthroat to hibernate, huh?"

"I don't believe it," answered Judith positively. "The man who made his hermitage here has a soul! I'd rather own this cabin and live here, than have a palace on Fifth avenue!"

She knocked at the door, knowing that silence would answer her, but hoping to have a man, calm-eyed, gentle-voiced, a romantic hermit in all of his picturesqueness, come to the door.

"Going in?" asked Lee in well-studied carelessness.

"No," she told him freezingly. "Why should I? Would you want people poking about into your home just because it was in the heart of a wilderness and you weren't there to drive them out?"

"No," answered Bud gravely. "Now that you ask me, I wouldn't! Let's go find that trail."

"But," continued Judith, "not being a fool, and realizing that one of the men we want might possibly be in hiding in here, I am going to peek in."

"Not being a fool," he repeated after her, adding gently, "and being a girl, which means filled with curiosity."

A disdainful shoulder gave him his answer. The door was unlocked, after immemorial western custom, and Judith opened it. Lee heard her little gasp of pure delight.

"He's a dear, the man who lives here!" she announced positively. "You can just tell by looking at his horse."

A disdainful shoulder gave him his answer. The door was unlocked, after immemorial western custom, and Judith opened it. Lee heard her little gasp of pure delight.

Looking in over her shoulder, Bud Lee wondered just what in his one-room shanty had caught her enthusiasm. There was the rock fireplace with an iron hook protruding from each side for coffee-pot and stew-pot; a bunk with a blanket smoothed over cedar boughs; a shelf with a dozen books; little else, so far as he could see or remember, to catch at Judith's delight. Yet she, looking through woman's eyes, read in one quick "peek" the character of the dweller in this abode. One who was content with little, who loved a clean, outdoor life, and who was tranquilly above the pettiness of humanity. Judith closed the door softly.

Going straight across the plateau, she showed him where one could clamber up a steep way to the ridge. Once up there, it was but ten minutes until, in a hollow, they found the monument marking a trail, a stone set upon a boulder.

It was after five o'clock. When following the trail back and forth in its winding along the side of the ridge, they found the signs they sought, it was fast growing dark. But there, in a narrow defile where loose soil had filtered down, were tracks left by a large boot. Lee went down on his hands and knees to study them in the dusk. He got up with a little grunt and moved down the trail. Again he found tracks, this time more clearly defined. So dark was it now that they had lighted several matches.

"Two men," he announced wonderingly. "Fresh tracks, too. Made this morning or last night. I'll bet. One coming east from Indian Head. The other coming west from the plateau behind us. Who's he? Where'd he come from?"

"He's the second of the two men who shot at you," said Judith quickly. "Don't I know every trail in this neck of the woods, Bud Lee? He followed another old, worn-out trail on the south side of the ranch. They met here just as I know they would!"

"What for?" Lee frowned through the darkness at her eager face. "What would they want to get together for? If they had any sense they would scatter and clean out of the country."

"Unless," Judith reminded him, "they don't intend to clean out at all! Unless they mean to stick to the cliffs and try their hands again at their sort of game. They'll figure that we will expect them to be a long way from here by now, won't they? Then where would they be safer than right here in these mountains? Give me a rifle and something to eat and I'll defy an army getting me out of here. And think of it: If this is Trevors' work, if he means business, think what two gunmen on these heights could do to us. They could pick off a three-thousand-dollar stallion down in the pens; they could drop more than one prize bull or cow; and" she added sharply, "if they thought about girls as some men think, they could take a chance on scaring Judith Sanford out of the country."

Lee stared at her a long time in silence.

"I wouldn't have said," he offered finally, "that Bayne Trevors would make quite so strong a play as that."

"You wouldn't! Then look him in the eye! And where's his risk, if he's picked the right men, if he sees them through, keeping the back door open when they want to run for it? You just gamble your boots, Bud Lee, that Bayne Trevors . . ."

Without warning, without a sound of explosion came a wiry whine into the still air, a little venomous ping, and a bullet sped by just over their heads. But, through the gloom, they both saw the flash of the gun as it spat fire and lead, and, as though one impulse commanded them Judith's rifle and Bud Lee's went to their shoulders and two reverberating reports rang out in answer.

"Lie down, —n it!" cried Bud Lee to the girl at his side, as again there came the flash from the cliffs off to the right and as again he answered it with his rifle.

"Lie down yourself!" snapped Judith. And once more her rifle spoke with his.

For one instant, framed against the darkening sky along the cliff edge five hundred yards away to the right, they saw a silhouette of a man, leaping from one boulder to another, a man who looked giganticly big in the uncertain light. They fired; he jumped again and passed out of sight.

"Got his nerve," grunted Lee as he pumped lead at the running figure.

As an answer there came the third flash, the bullet striking the trail in front of them. And then the fourth flash, from a point a hundred yards to the left of the other.

"That's Number Two," muttered Lee. "They've got us in the open,

Between Them—a Man Lay Helplessly.

Judith. Let's beat it back to the cabin."

"I'm with you," said Judith, between shots. "It's just foolstink . . . bang! . . . sticking out here" . . . bang! . . . for them to pop us off!" Bang! Bang!

They ran then, Bud slipping in front of her, his tall body looming darkly between her and the cliffs whence the shots came. He slid along the sharp slope to the plateau, putting out his arms toward her. And as she came down, Bud Lee grunted and cursed under his breath. For there had been another flash out of the thickening night, this one from the refuge toward which they were running. A third man was shooting from the shelter of the cabin walls. And Lee had felt a stinging pain as though a hot iron had scorching its way along the side of his leg.

"Hurt much?" asked Judith quickly. Without waiting for an answer, she pumped two shots at the flash by the cabin.

"No," grunted Lee. "Just scared. And now what? I want to know."

Bud Lee, in the thicker darkness lying along the edge of the plateau, sat with his back against the rocks while he gave swift first aid to his wound. He brought into requisition the knotted handkerchief from his throat, bound it tightly around the side of his leg and said lightly to Judith:

"Just a foot scratch, you know. But I've no hankering to dribble out a load of blood from it."

Judith made no answer. Lee took up his rifle and turned to the spot where she had been standing a moment ago. She was not there.

"Gone!" he grunted, frowning into the blackness hemming him in. "Now, what do you suppose she's up to? Fainted, most likely."

He got up and moved along the low rock wall, seeking her. A spurt of flame from the east corner of the cabin drew his eyes away from his search and he pumped three quick shots in answer.

Again he sought Judith, calling softly. There was no answer. Once more came the spurt of flame from the shelter of the cabin wall. Then fifty yards off to Lee's right, some fifty yards nearer the cabin, another shot.

The first suspicion that one of the men from the cliffs had made his way down to join issue at close quarters, was gone in a clear understanding. That was the bark of Judith's rifle; she had slipped away from him without an instant's delay and was creeping closer and closer to the cabin.

"D—n the girl!" cried Lee angrily. "She'll get her fool self killed!"

But as he ran forward to join her, he realized that she was doing the right thing—the only thing if they did not want to lie out here all night for the men on the cliffs to pick off in the morning light. He knew that she could do everything that was a man's work and which a woman should know nothing about.

Frowning into the night, he thought that he could make out the dim blur of Judith's form. The girl was standing erect; shooting, too, for again the duel of red spurts of flame told where she and her quarry stood.

Meanwhile Lee ran on, changing his original purpose, swerving out from where Judith was moving forward, turning to the left, hopeful to come to close quarters with their assailant before she could go down under that sharp rifle-fire or could bring down the other. For certainly, if she kept on that way, the time would come when some one would stop hot lead.

Lee shifted his rifle to his left hand, taking his revolver into his right. From the cliffs came a shot and he grunted at it contemptuously. It could do nothing but assure those below that there was still some one up there.

"Three of them to our two," he estimated, "counting the two jaspers on the cliff. Two of us to their one, counting what's down here. And that's all that counts right this minute."

A shot from Judith; a shot from the cabin; two shots from the cliffs. The two shots from above brought fresh news; not only were they closer together, but they indicated the men up yonder were coming down. Lee hurried.

Then, at last, his narrowed eyes made out the faint outline of that which he sought. Close to the cabin, low down, evidently on his knees was the most important factor to be considered now. Still Lee was too far away to be certain of a hit and he meant with all of the grim determination in him to hit something at last. He ran on, drawing the fire away from Judith. A rifle ball sank close to his side, another and another. He lost the dim shape of the kneeling man, who, he thought, had risen from his knees and was standing, his body tight-pressed to the cabin.

"Why the devil doesn't he run for it?" wondered Lee.

But evidently, he the reason what it might, the man had no intention of running. A bullet cut through Lee's sleeve. At last Lee answered. He ran in closer as he fired and, running, emptied his revolver, jammed it into his waistband, clubbed his rifle . . . and realized with something of a shock that there were but two rifles on the cliffs to take into consideration. That other rifle, at the cabin, was still. Out of ammunition? Or plugged? Or playing 'possum? Which?

"Stop shooting!" he shouted to Judith.

"I'm coming!" she cried back to him.

Almost at the same instant, their two rifles ready, they came to the cabin. Between them on the ground a man lay at the corner, moving helplessly, groping for his fallen gun, falling back.

"Open the door," said Bud. "I'll get him inside and we'll see who he is. Hurry, Judith; those other jaspers are working down this way as fast as they know how."

Judith, taking time to snatch up the fallen rifle, ran around to the door. Lee slipped his hands under the arm-pits of the wounded man and dragged him in Judith's wake. In the cabin, the door shut, Lee struck a match and went to a little shelf where there was a candle.

"Bill Crowley?" gasped Judith. Almost before Lee saw the man's face he saw the canvas bag tied to his belt, a bag identical with the one he himself had brought from the bank at Rocky Bend.

"The man that stuck up Charlie Miller," he said slowly. "And there's your thousand bucks, or I'm a liar. I got something of their play now; those two fellows up there were waiting to meet him and split the swag three ways. And I've got the cuss; they'll be asking a look-in yet."

Lee knelt and with quick fingers sought the wound. High up near the throat, that was bleeding profusely. At first that seemed the only wound. But in a second Lee had found another. "This was in the leg, and this, like Lee's was bound tightly with a handkerchief."

"Got that, first rattle out of the box?" commented Lee. "See it? That's why he stuck on the job and didn't try to run for it. Looks like a rifle ball had smashed the bone."

He didn't look up. His fingers, busy with the string at Crowley's belt, brought away the canvas bag. There was blood on it; it was heavy and gave forth the mellow jangle of gold.

"You win back your thousand on tonight's play," he said, holding up the bag to Judith, lifting his eyes to her face.

But Judith shrank back, her eyes wide with horror.

"I don't want it! I can never touch it!" she whispered.

Suddenly she was shaking from head to foot, her eyes fixed in terrible fascination upon Crowley's face. Lee tossed the bag to the bunk across the room, whence it fell clanking to the floor.

"Now she's going to faint," was his thought. "Well, I won't blame her so d—n much. Poor little kid!"

But he did not look at her again. He tore away Crowley's shirt to discover just how serious the wound in the chest was. Unless Bill Crowley bled to death, he stood an excellent chance of doing time in the penitentiary. Lee stanchied the flow of blood, made a rude bandage, and then, lifting the body gently, carried it to the bunk.

"Now," said Lee, speaking bluntly, afraid that a tone of sympathy might merely aid the girl to "shake to pieces," "we've got a chance to be on our way before Number Two and Number Three get into the game. Let's run for it, Judith."

Judith shook her head.

"We'll stay here until morning," she said finally, her voice surprising Lee, who had looked for a sign of weakness to accord with her sudden pallor and visible trembling.

"What for?" he wanted to know. "We'll have another fight on our hands if we do. Those fellows, this deep in it, are not going to quit while they know that there's all that money in the shack!"

"I don't care," said Judith firmly. "I won't run from them or anybody else I know! And, besides, Bud Lee, I am not going to give them the chance to get Crowley away. . . . Do you think he is going to die?"

"No, I don't. Doc Tripp will fix him up."

"Then here I stay, for one. When I go, Bud Crowley goes with me! He's going to talk, and he's going to help me send Bayne Trevors to the pen."

Bud Lee expressed all he had to say in a silent whistle. He'd made another mistake, that was all. Judith wasn't going to faint for him tonight.

"Then," he said presently, setting her the example, "slip some fresh cartridges into your rifle and get ready for more shooting. I'll put out the light and we'll wait for what's next."

Judith replenished the magazine of her rifle. Lee, watching from under the low-drawn brim of his hat, noted that her fingers were steady now, Crowley moved in his bunk, lifted a hand weakly, groaned and grew still. Lee rearranged his bandage.

"Put out the light now?" he asked Judith.

"No," she answered. "Since we've got to spend the night with a man in Crowley's shape, it will be more cozy, won't it, with the light on?"

She even put out her hand to one of the books on the shelves which she could reach from her bench.

"And now," she added, "I'm sure that our hermit won't mind if we peep into his library, will he?"

"No," answered Lee gravely. "Most likely he'll be proud."

Lee found time to muse that life is made of incongruities, woman of inconsistencies. Here with a badly hurt man lying ten feet from her, with every likelihood of the night stillness being ripped in two by a rifle-shot, Judith sat and turned the pages of a book. Bud Lee flushed as he watched her. She turned the pages slowly, came back to the fly-leaf page, read the name scrawled there and, turning swiftly to Lee, said accusingly:

"David Burrill Lee, you are a lumbag!"

"Wrong again," grinned Lee. "A hermit, you mean! A man with a soul!"

"See?" answered Judith. But, under Bud Lee's teasing eyes, the color began to come back into her cheeks. She had been a wee bit enthusiastic over her hermit, making of him a picturesque ideal. She had visioned him, even to the calm eyes, gentle voice. A quick little frown touched her brows as she realized that the eyes and voice which her fancy had bestowed upon the hermit were in actuality the eyes and voice of Bud Lee. But she had called him a dear. And Lee had been laughing at her all the time—had not told her, would never have told her. The thought came to her that she would like to slap Bud Lee's face for him. And she had told Tripp she would like to slap Pollock Hampton's. Good and hard!

She had called him a dear. And now she wants to slap his face. Well, well! What next?

Insect-Eating Plant

An insect-eating plant is the sundew, so called because of a shining sticky substance secreted by glands in the sunlight like a rare gem, says the Detroit News. By means of the sticky mess, the sundew attracts and entangles its prey. Then the edges of the leaf curve inward, forming a sort of stomach into which an acid secretion is poured to digest the meal. The portions which cannot be digested are later thrown out and the trap is set for the next victim.

The sundew seems to know when food is near, or if meat is placed close to it the plant slowly reaches out for it. If a portion is placed within a few inches of the plant the leaf will bend toward it until the tiny hairs enfold the delicacy and the sticky substance completes the grip.

POULTRY

SOUR MILK PRODUCES LARGER SIZED EGGS

It is estimated that approximately one-half of the farm eggs marketed weigh less than 22 ounces to the dozen. This condition can be remedied to a great extent by paying more attention to the balancing of the ration to increase the size of the eggs produced. The poultry department of the University of Idaho, at Moscow, has been working for ten years on the influence of certain foods on the size of eggs produced. During this period, very definite results have been obtained. It has been found that a combination of wheat, corn and oats in the scratch ration gave larger eggs than a ration of wheat alone, or one in which corn, oats, barley or peas were used with the wheat. The grains ranked in their ability to increase the size of eggs, as follows: corn, oats, barley, peas and wheat. When grains were fed without a dry mash, small eggs resulted.

The outstanding results were obtained when certain protein foods were fed. Pens of single-comb white leghorns gave much larger percentage of marketable eggs, when fed sour skim milk in unlimited quantities than when 20 per cent oatmeal, 20 per cent tankage or 20 per cent peameal were used in the dry mash. When 20 per cent oatmeal was used in the dry mash and unlimited sour skim milk given only 17 per cent of all of the eggs produced were below 22 ounces to the dozen. When an unbalanced ration was used, containing in the mash only bran, shorts, cornmeal, and ground oats, in equal parts 62.5-70 per cent of the eggs produced were below marketable size. Peameal alone, in the dry mash, did not give any increase in the size of eggs produced over the dry mash not containing it. Eighty-five per cent of the eggs produced were above standard weight, when the dry mash contained 10 per cent oatmeal and unlimited sour skim milk was given. The cost of producing the eggs with this ration was too high, however, and the profits over feed cost did not justify the use of the oatmeal. Tankage in the ration gave a larger percentage of marketable eggs than did oatmeal. Milk whey does not contain sufficient animal protein to give the larger eggs. When dried buttermilk was given with peameal, the eggs produced were large, but the cost of producing was too high.

The largest number of marketable eggs at the lowest feed cost, resulting in the greatest profits, have been obtained by the use of 20 per cent peameal and sour skim milk.

Poultrymen Disagree on Merits of Drawn Fowls

Poultrymen still discuss the relative merits of drawn or undrawn poultry. The practice varies in different communities. Opening the body involuntarily exposes to the air the internal surfaces and thus decomposition is hastened. On the other hand, the viscera decompose more rapidly than other parts of the body, and if left in the bird they may taint or infect the rest of the flesh.

Housing Different Hens

For often we find hens of all sizes and ages being housed together in one pen, all getting the same food and some treatment and each expected to do as well in egg production as the other. This method of housing the different hens should not be resorted to, as such methods will not bring in the best returns.

Poultry Hints

A flock of standard bred Barred Plymouth Rocks round out a well-balanced farm program.

There are undoubtedly more chicks lost each season through overfeeding and killing than through any other one cause.

The number of eggs a hen will lay per month depends on her capacity to digest food. Do not breed from birds with pinched backs, little depth in rear and which lack fullness in the abdomen.

Ducks can be profitably bred for four years. Geese can be bred for only three years for a period that seems profitable.

Where chicks that are hatched from pullet eggs are smaller, they fail to overcome this defect, but make slower growth during the entire season.

There is perhaps no greater factor contributing to the lowering of the quality of chicks than the continued breeding from pullets mated to cockerels.

Is Your Work Hard?

Is your work wearing you out? Are you tortured with throbbing back, ache-ful tired, weak and worn out? Then look to your kidneys! Many occupations tend to weaken the kidneys. Constant backache, headaches, dizziness and rheumatic pains result. One suffers among kidney irregularities, feels nervous, irritable and worn out. Don't wait! Use Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic to weaken the kidneys. Workers everywhere recommend Doan's. They should help you, too. Ask your Neighbor!

Raleigh in North America

Queen Elizabeth's infatuation for Raleigh kept him from going to Virginia with his first expedition for colonization. It is said that the queen promised to defray all expenses of the expedition if Raleigh would not go himself. The result was that Raleigh never saw the territory which is now the United States. But several years later, in 1584, Raleigh went to South America at the head of an expedition to conquer Guiana. On his way back to Europe he stopped in Newfoundland. This was the only time Raleigh ever set foot on the North American mainland.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Fortress to Be War Museum

The Vincennes fortress, just outside the walls of Paris, which withstood countless sieges and served as a prison for political offenders under Louis XVI and other Bourbons, is to become a war museum.

It was here for long years that the "Man With the Iron Mask" is reputed to have been shut up, and against the walls of Vincennes the duke of Enghien was executed in the dead of night by order of Napoleon.

Evidently Not "What's this here 'third degree'?" "Ain't you married, man?"

French Give Anatole France State Atheist Funeral

The first atheist national funeral ever held in France at the expense of the state was that of Anatole France, the famous writer. Herewith is a view of the procession leaving the Quai Malaquais in front of the birth place of the dead author.

MAKING GOOD IN A SMALL TOWN

Real Stories About Real Girls

By MRS. HARLAND H. ALLEN

(Copyright 1924, Western Newspaper Union)

THE CANDY KITCHEN

AMERICA'S notorious sweet tooth must be satisfied. And for the girl who knows what candies are America's "best sellers" and how to make those candies, there is money in helping to satisfy it. That's the declaration of financial independence made by a small town girl who has proved her statement.

"But ordinary candies, like fudge and taffy, that everybody makes," she asserted, "don't pay well. And with practically the same materials, you can make the expensive chocolates and bon-bons."

This girl has found the "best sellers" to be fancy chocolates and fudges, cream caramels, nut brittle and butterscotch. She maintains that it is better to specialize in only one kind of candy or, at most, only a few choice varieties, rather than to attempt too many kinds and have them imperfect.

The girl who proposes to run a "candy kitchen" in her home needs to consider three factors: instruction, equipment and supplies, and marketing. If she doesn't know how to make the kind of candy she wants to sell, she must, obviously, get some preliminary instruction, and she should procure a book that gives explicit directions for the making of the most intricate candies.

Her equipment will be a range, (preferably gas), a thermometer, scales, measuring cup, quart measure, spatula, case knife, long sharp knife, wooden spoons, tablespoons, teaspoons, canned pans, saucers or candy kettles, double boiler, mint dropper, bonbon dipper, marble slab or table, or porcelain table, or large white tray. She may simplify or elaborate upon this equipment according to the extent of her business.

As for her market, the novice had best begin on a small scale, selling to personal friends and acquaintances. She will probably have plenty of orders for the holiday times, and she may avoid the anti-holiday slump and stimulate all-the-year-round trade, by advertising the "Saturday Special," the box to take home for the Sunday treat. She may advertise her "strictly home-made wares" in the local papers; and she may further announce them by a card, accompanied by an attractive-looking plate of candy, in her window.

The candy-maker should box her wares neatly and attractively, and should adopt a trade name for use on the boxes and in advertising. She should never include broken bits of candy, crumbly fudges or trimmed-off edges in the boxes, but should save them in a "stock kettle" for later use.

If she wastes nothing—material, paper, string, boxes or time—she is sure to attain financial success through her "candy kitchen."

JOHNSON HONORED BY FIVE NATIONS

Bolshevik battles, a czar of all the Russias murdered with his family in a lonely provincial town, the historic retreat of Czechoslovak forces from western Russia to the Pacific, clash after clash for five months with German and Austrian war prisoners and Russian Reds, cold, hunger, the slow withdrawal of allied troops with all the hardships of panic, food shortage, and broken down transportation—all of these, woven together into the story of Col. B. O. Johnson, Legionnaire, make of it a veritable Arabian Nights tale.

Colonel Johnson, now resident at St. Paul, Minn., but formerly of Livingston, Mont., was appointed chairman of the transportation committee for the national convention of the American Legion. He is a vice president of the Northern Pacific railroad.

In the fall of 1917 Colonel Johnson went to Siberia as a member of a railway engineers' outfit to move military supplies from Vladivostok on the Pacific to the Russian front. Finding that the front was collapsing, he was sent with a few other American engineers to learn conditions. After 5,000 miles across north Asia, they learned that Russia was out of it and helped to move 50,000 Czechoslovaks, Serbs and Rumanians across Siberia to Vladivostok. For five months they battled with 600,000 enemy prisoners of war, aided by the Reds. The prisoners were returned to camps, the Trans-Siberian railroad was controlled and a way opened into Austria.

Colonel Johnson was with the Czechs as they surrounded Ekaterinburg, while Czar Nicholas and his family were prisoners there. He interviewed many Russians who were in the city when the imperial family was murdered. He got at first hand a story of the assassination, which appeared in the press. He is one of a few Americans who have stood in the very room where the last of the Romanoffs, who ruled Russia for 300 years, met his fate.

After the armistice in 1918, Colonel Johnson, with American, British, Japanese and Chinese engineers, was placed in charge of the Trans-Siberian railroad to transport supplies to Admiral Kolchak in his battle against the Bolshevik government. Kolchak swept on to within 200 miles of Moscow. Then the break came. After a decisive defeat on the Volga, Kolchak's forces were routed.

A great evacuation movement from European Russia set in, as the Bolsheviks pushed an into western and central Siberia. Colonel Johnson and a few American and British engineers between Omsk and the front had charge of transportation of the retreating army. In September, 1919, they passed 45 trains eastward per day. Winter came on, demoralization grew, typhoid fever, smallpox and starvation added to their troubles. All of the food was ordered out. On November 12, Colonel Johnson left Omsk with the last allied train and the Reds moved in the next day.

Five months later the last trains dragged into Vladivostok after six terrible winter as military forces have ever known. Locomotives broke down, food was lacking, disease raged, panic and demoralization reigned, and the men were abandoned. Five months went by in that journey of 4,500 miles. This ended allied intervention in Siberia.

All left but the Japanese. They chose to remain and the ladies for coordination of allied efforts continued. Colonel Johnson stayed on for two years, laying under his control American-trained Chinese and Japanese engineers. So much was accomplished in restoring the traffic on the Trans-Siberian that Colonel Johnson was decorated by the President of China and the emperor of Japan, as he had been by the French President and by Serbia.

Test for Einstein Ether Theory

View in the experimental station at Clearing, Ill., where Prof. A. A. Michelson and Prof. G. Gale of the University of Chicago are testing Einstein's "ether drift" theory. Approximately a mile and a quarter of 12-inch water pipe, formed in a rectangle 1,200 feet wide by 2,000 feet long, will be used in the experiment. Rays of light will be flashed around this circuit in opposite directions by means of mirrors at each corner. When the beams come back to their starting point they will make a fringed impression. If the fringes of the opposing rays are superimposed, Einstein is wrong and his theory that there is no such thing as ether will be seriously disputed. If, however, there is a displacement of the fringes due to the fact that it takes one beam longer to make the circuit, then Einstein is right.

FORTUNE IN A STONE?

Photograph of the 120-pound crystal stone which was discovered on the desert of southwestern Kansas by A. E. Case, a Chicago lawyer. The stone is on display at a jewelry store in Chicago, and has caused no end of speculation as to what manner of stone it can be. In a natural light it appears a dark green mass, nearly black. Illuminated, it burns with reflected fires and takes on a brilliant green radiance. Small chips which have been taken from the stone are valued at $50 each, and have been announced as better than aquamarines, which they resemble.

IS SHE DANGEROUS?

This is Countess Catherine Karolyi, wife of Count Michael Karolyi, former President of Hungary, photographed just after she landed in New York for a series of lectures. The head of the National Security League attempted to prevent her entering America, alleging that she was known in Europe as a dangerous Communist and was called "Red Catherine" over there.

Church for Los Angeles Armenians

Serious Fire Stopped by Dynamite

The walls of the County Savings and Loan Association building in Gowanda, N. Y., crashing after they had been dynamited to check the fire which swept through the business district of Gowanda, nearly wiping it out. The photographer was showered with bricks and mortar while taking this picture. Dynamite was resorted to after all available fire apparatus had been used in vain.

Publicity for Royalty

A book containing 61,120 newspaper clippings on the activities of the prince of Wales during his visit to Long Island has been completed by a shipping bureau and sent to London. The volume weighs 325 pounds. To classify the mass of clippings 22 experts worked night and day for two weeks on a job which under ordinary circumstances would have taken three months. The bureau says that no President of the United States ever received so much publicity in so short a time.

Boosting for His Job

Sam, implicated for jury service at a murder trial, had seemed a little too anxious to serve.

"Do you know the accused?" he was asked.

"Yassuh—that is yassuh," he replied, realizing that if he made an affirmative answer he would be disgraced on a job which under ordinary circumstances would have taken three months. The bureau says that no President of the United States ever received so much publicity in so short a time.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Should Use Swamp-Root

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Biggest Waves

The tides are simply vast waves with a length from crest to crest equal to half the earth's circumference. As the tidal wave approaches the shore the water encroaches more and more on the land until the crest arrives, when it is high tide. Similarly, the arrival of the trough of the tidal wave brings low tide.

Always tell a joke when you pay an old bill. You are sure to get it laughed at.

Do You Cough?

I am a practical nurse and have found the 'Golden Medical Discovery' to be of great benefit to those recovering from sickness which had left them in a weakened condition. It enriches the blood, improves the appetite and aids digestion. I can conscientiously recommend this medicine."—Mrs. C. E. Smith, 230 E. Dittmar Ave.

Laxatives do not overcome constipation

LAXATIVES and cathartics provide temporary relief only. Their continued use leads to permanent injury. In time, says an eminent physician, an almost incalculable amount of harm is done by the use of pills, salts, mineral waters, castor oil and the like.

Physicians advise lubrication for Internal Cleanliness

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt the habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.
