IMPORTANCE OF MINING

In a recent address, Herbert Hoover commented upon the economic importance of mining to our country.

"It is a vital part of our national life," said Mr. Hoover. "It is one of these industries without which the nation could not go on for a week. It ranks second only to the agricultural industry in its contribution to our raw materials."

"Its production amounts to nearly 6 1/2 billions annually, providing direct support to probably 10 millions of our people through employment of about two million workers."

"But the industry has a greater importance than even these figures indicate, for, with agriculture, forestry and water power it furnishes the raw materials upon which the whole work of our civilization rests."

"When the raw materials of our mines emerge from manufacture with the added expenditure of labor and capital upon them, their wholesale value is over 15 billions of dollars. And in this, the second stage of their application, they give employment to another two million workers and support to about 10 million more people."

"A large portion of these manufactured commodities must filter through the retail trade, and their total value when delivered to the consumer exceeds 20 billions of dollars. From this distribution comes support of many more millions of people."

"Too great importance cannot be laid on our mining industry, which spells economic prosperity, or disaster, for thousands of communities."

SOME PLAIN TALK ON CRIME

Statistics say that from 1918 to 1926, inclusive, of the 1882 people killed in New York City, only eight were slain by men defending their own lives.

Such figures do not prove that the average person does not need a pistol for defense; they may prove that existing anti-pistol laws have kept many of the 1874 victims from defending themselves. Most of the 1882 killers were free on pleas of insanity, or through frantic appeals of globering sentimentalists who had already robbed innocence of the means to protect itself; for the anti-pistol laws are generally framed and urged by the elements that send flowers and dainties to the woe of the human butcher and degenerate.

Indiscriminate pistol toting may well be declared unlawful, like the possession of poisons or powerful explosives where their menace outweighs their necessity. But by no stretch of the imagination could alien universal pistol-toting be as laudable or as deadly as a law to leave Deconcy helpless and at the mercy of Vice.

The remedy for crime does not lie in forbidding arms for legitimate use or defense, but in better execution of the laws against crime. These laws are too often nullified by hysteria that raves against the loss of life by shootings, while urging the abolishment of crime penalties, thereby making murder a fine art or a psychopathic lark.

WHY COUNTRY BOYS WIN

Despite the great increase in city population in recent decades, country boys, that is boys raised on farms or in small towns, still seem to capture their share of the important places in the business or professional world. The two richest men in America, Ford and Rockefeller, both were country boys, and so likewise was the world's greatest inventor, Edison. The president was a farm boy, and numerous instances could be cited to show that outstanding leaders in business, politics and the professions in this country were recruited from the rural districts. This, in spite of the fact that within the last 50 years the rural population, or those people living on farms and in towns, has shrunk from about 75 per cent to less than 50 per cent of the total population.

There are probably many good reasons why the country boys take high places. Perhaps one reason is that the country boy usually arrives in a big city without friends or influence, with limited cash, but with a fine determination to make good and show the folks back home what he can do. City boys, on the other hand, often have relatives and friends through whose influence they get a "comfortable berth" to start off with, and they gradually settle down to the business routine of a big corporation, enjoy the numerous diversions of a big city where they are thoroughly at home, and where the demands on their spare time are so heavy that it takes a Spartan determination to study instead of play after working hours.

The country boy, determined to show his folks and friends that he can make good in the big town, "saw wood"; his superiors notice the difference between his attitude and that of those who are satisfied with a comfortable, well-paying job, and the result is that they advance the "hayseed" to more important positions when the opportunity offers.

The divine insanity of noble minds, that never falters, nor abates, but labors, endures, and waits, till all that it foresees it finds, or what it cannot find, creates.—Longfellow.

MASTER FARMER'S PLAN

Among the ten outstanding farmers of the south upon whom was conferred the degree of Master Farmer last year is John R. Witt, of Alabama, who for several years was vice president of the state Farm Bureau Federation. His success in conducting profitable farming operations under difficulties makes his views interesting and important to all farmers, wherever located, as the general principles he advocates are applicable anywhere.

In a recent statement, Mr. Witt outlines his farm program for 1928, which is briefly summarized thus:

First—Produce crops economically by intensive preparation, cultivation and fertilization.

Second—Conserve and improve your soil, realizing that the safety of our nation depends upon its productivity.

Third—Strive to be an intelligent farmer by close cooperation with the agricultural departments of the county, state and nation. Read our agricultural papers.

Fourth—Cooperate with farm organizations in buying and selling. This organized effort will better the conditions of our farm people and place them on a parity with people of other vocations.

These points, coupled with a policy of raising food and feed at home, through gardens, cows, hogs and poultry, embrace a safe and sound program which may be profitably followed in any farming community.

GENIUS IN PRISON

From Georgia comes another story of a convict who has improved his opportunities for thinking while detained behind prison bars.

Jeff Harrison, while working in the cotton mills of the Atlanta federal penitentiary under a sentence for mail robbery, has invented a device whereby a loom is automatically stopped whenever a thread breaks, or some other accident occurs. Without such a device, much damage to machinery is frequently caused by such accidents. According to a press dispatch, Harrison's invention may make him wealthy.

This calls to mind the many manifestations of genius which have occurred among prisoners. Some of the great works of literature have been composed behind prison bars and many useful ideas have been evolved through the undisturbed meditations of convicts so confined.

All of which suggests that persons whose movements are not so restricted might profitably take time to do some concentrated thinking. In the hustle and bustle of everyday life we are prone to neglect the beneficial results of such concentration. Possibly it would be a good idea if more of us were shut up occasionally with nothing to do but think.

WHEN PROMOTERS USE "CHARITY" TO DECOY TRUSTFUL CONTRIBUTORS

Investigations of Various Schemes for Defrauding Public Out of Money Disclosed by Bankers Association—Many Kinds of Fake Industrial Promotions Used as Bait.

By W. R. MOREHOUSE

Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

MILLIONS of dollars raised under the disguise of charity go to line the pockets of promoters. Ticket sales on raffles are commonly used, and while the loss to any one person who buys a ticket is small the aggregate loss for the United States runs into millions of dollars. Usually the promoters of these schemes first make a contract with some charitable institution to conduct a campaign for funds on behalf of the institution. They are to run the campaign in the name of the institution and share the proceeds. The whole scheme is often one of deception. To those who have been led to believe that their contributions go practically 100 per cent to charity, the following case we investigated should prove illuminating.

W. R. MOREHOUSE

was nothing to convey any other impression. Apparently it was open and above board and was being conducted by men who were contributing their time gratuitously.

For several days a new automobile mounted on a truck, was driven up and down the streets, with banners telling about the drive for funds for the charitable institution. One day the truck would go by displaying one of the popular makes of automobiles. A few days later it would parade by displaying some other popular make. Periodically the truck would pull into the curb where it would park for several hours while the promoters pleaded with passers-by to take tickets on the raffle and thereby help a deserving charitable institution to meet its bills.

Thousands "Touched"
Thousands of people, touched by the appeal for help, bought tickets, the total sale running into the thousands of dollars. Contrary to the belief of the ticket buyers their contributions did not go 100 per cent to charity. Instead the charitable institution received but 26 cents on the dollar, the promoters getting 52 cents on the dollar as their net profit, or twice the amount received by charity, while the remainder of 22 cents on each dollar represented the amount charged against gross sales by the promoters as expenses.

In other words, every person who bought a 50 cent ticket for the sake of charity, contributed but 13 cents to charity and 37 cents to those promoting the scheme. Whether you give to charity or make an investment it will pay you to get the facts! Unfortunately there is a general impression abroad that wildcat promotions are confined to oil, mining and new inventions. The truth is, many stock selling promotions are operated under the name of other industries.

False Claims
A certain group of promoters investigated offered for sale stock in a proposed woolen mill. In order to sell the stock they resorted to the use of misrepresentation and false claims. After renting space on the ground floor of an office building fronting on a busy street they began their campaign. Orally and by printed advertisements extravagant claims were made for the proposed corporation which were grossly false.

another branch of education. Mr. Washkowsky went to the cobbler and found his shoes, but not the money, which we cannot but feel is not remarkable. We hope he will find it, but he hasn't yet, which again should cause no astonishment.

But what we would like to hear from the American Bankers Association is what steps it is taking to discourage people of magpie habits from keeping their money in stoves, shoes, mantle clocks, behind wall pictures, under floor boards and similar places. We have made no exact calculation but from casual evidence we are inclined to believe there are enough funds hidden away in such places in this enlightened and progressive country to pay off the national debt. Not that we advise paying it off, because that would leave congress nothing to fuss with Mr. Mellon about; but if deposited in banks our banker might have some to lend when we need it which he now never has; he says money is very scarce. We hold it is not; it is merely in Mr. Washkowsky's shoe.

Seeing that we have been pursuing education, or something called that for several centuries, we cannot but feel this is a bad showing and that the bankers association is somehow responsible. It hasn't sufficiently impressed on the people that it has banks and what they are for. Mr. Washkowsky hasn't heard. And there are a lot of him in this country.—Kansas City Star.

Sidelights

Something to think about: Twenty English prisons are offered for sale because they lack occupants; American jails are filled and many more ought to be. Did the reaction from the war reduce crime in England and increase it in the United States?

STRICTER EXAMINATIONS WILL KEEP DOWN DEATH TOLL

By Erwin Greer

President of Greer School of Electrical and Automotive Trades, Chicago, Ill.

Several years ago, when we were brand new at the automobile game, we felt that it was rather an insult to suggest that automobile drivers be compelled to submit to an examination as to their fitness for driving a motor car. We believe we did concede at that time that it might be all right to submit chauffeurs to such an examination, but the fact that we had money enough to own a car seemed to convince us that that was sufficient guarantee of our ability to drive. Later, some of us conceded that it might be all right to examine the new driver, but that those of us who had owned cars for any length of time surely should not be submitted to such humiliation, and now we believe the most of us have finally come to the conclusion, especially in view of the ever-expanding accident list which obtains in most cities of any size, that every person who is permitted to sit at the wheel of an automobile should first undergo a thorough examination, not only as to their mechanical ability for driving an automobile, but as to their fitness mentally to act in case of emergency.

We well know that many of our owners claim that their wives and daughters are much better drivers than they are, which is probably the case in many instances, and it is a fact that many women do make good drivers, but we also know it to be a fact that, as a rule, women do not make nearly as good automobile drivers as men. Of course, there are instances where just the reverse is true, but we are speaking in generalities. It is not the idea to harass the woman driver, and in order to make it appear fair at least, we are willing to be compelled to take an examination along with her, as we firmly believe that the time has come when one who handles the wheel of an automobile should undergo the strictest sort of an examination in regard to their driving ability. Nineteenth of all the accidents could be averted if all drivers were reasonably capable. We must start somewhere to keep down our accident roll—it is getting away from us.
