FARMERS STUDY THE AGRICULTURAL OUTLOOK

As an example of the increase in the use of business methods in farming, the following paragraph from a Nebraska newspaper is well worth reading and pondering:

"Farmers of the section around Alliance will attend a big agricultural outlook meeting to be held here Monday. It will be an all-day session, at which various agricultural problems will be discussed.

"Several able speakers from the agricultural college of the University of Nebraska are on the program. An attempt will be made to determine the acreage of wheat, potatoes, corn, barley, rye and other crops to be raised during the coming year."

Farming has largely been a business conducted more or less "by guess or by God," with no attempt made to study available statistics or information relating to the amount of acres in crops, the production of livestock, trend of prices, or probable trend in supply and demand of the various farm products. The best guesser usually made the most money and was regarded as merely "lucky."

Times are surely changing when the farmers of a community gather together and study the best available information from government and state statistical and marketing sources, with a view of planting the crops which have the least surplus on hand over the country and world, and studying the probable trend of supply and demand for their products as determined by the studies of the most able economists and marketing specialists in the country. While the Nebraska farmer has long been noted for his efficient use of machinery and equipment to lower his production costs, this further study of the agricultural outlook should surely make them still more efficient as farmers and business men.

Even an officeholder is entitled to some protection against slander, according to the view of Justice MacLean of Melville, Sask., who awarded $500 damages to W. R. Fansher, a member of parliament, in a suit against Henri Peran, in a political campaign Peran charged that Fansher had been "bought by the Conservative party."

LAW ENFORCEMENT, NOT MORE LAWS, IS PRESENT NEED

In considering a remedy for crime, the following statement constitutes the keynote of the report made by the subcommittee of the National Crime Commission: "There is now a tendency to insist upon harsher punishment as a cure-all for all crime, whereas of far greater importance, it will be found, is the building up of police and court management capable of catching and convicting a far larger percentage of the individuals who commit crime."

Law enforcement is the real answer to crime prevention. Arrests for robbery in England, Wales and Canada average 84 per cent, in the United States, Cleveland and Baltimore top the list with 49 per cent and 47 per cent respectively, while other cities dwindle down to as low as 3 per cent. The ratio of convictions to known crimes of robbery and the ratio of convictions to the number of arrests made run as strongly in favor of England and Canada as do the first figures mentioned, and make as unfavorable a showing for the United States.

Such figures tell a striking story and show that there must be, first, efficient police and, second, elimination of loopholes in legal procedure to promote the escape of the lawbreaker.

Commenting on the situation, the Portland Oregonian says the crime situation has reached a point in many of our cities where the luckless lawbreaker who is occasionally caught and convicted actually attributes his misfortune to an act of God, as he would in case of a disastrous storm, shipwreck or earthquake.

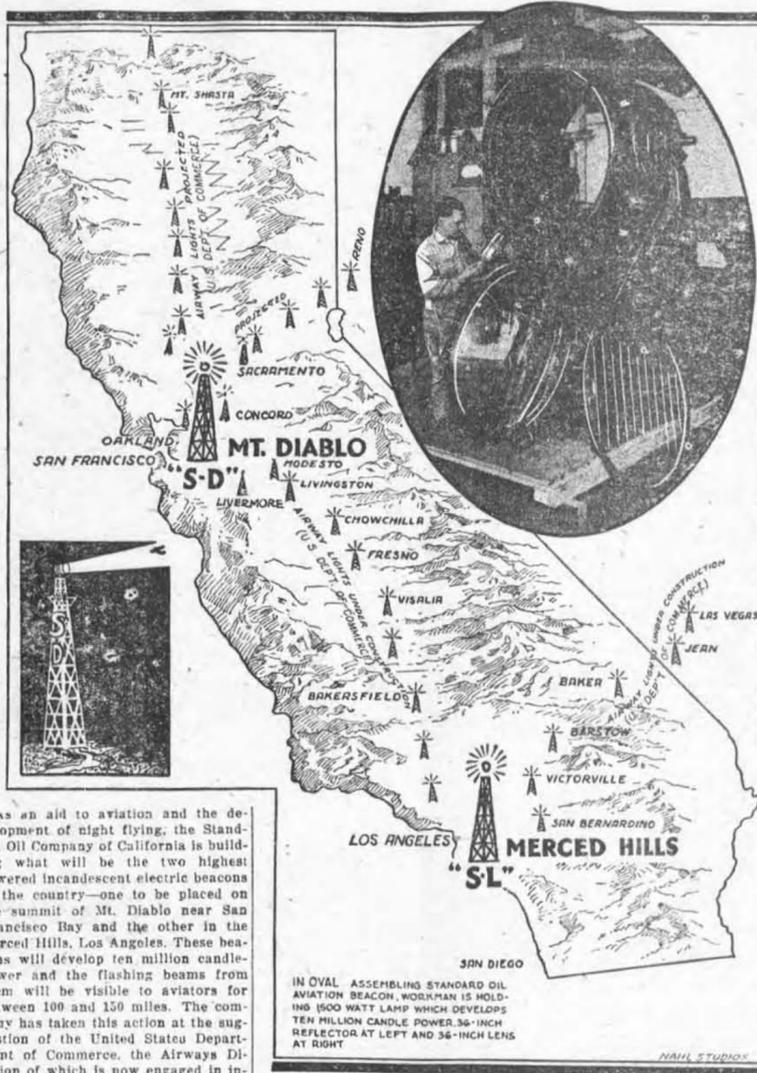

As a crime remedy, the public is generally offered a law prohibiting the sale of small arms to law-abiding citizens. The trouble with such laws is that they are contrary to the second amendment of the United States Constitution, and the criminal pays no attention to them. The honest citizen is, however, harassed with another prohibitive measure.

Students of the crime situation feel certain that prohibiting sale and ownership of small arms to law-abiding citizens would in no way check the crime wave, but would make more lawbreakers out of honest persons who felt they had a right to own a gun, and leave the criminal more free than ever to carry on his depredations without fear of occasional injury by home owners or persons protecting their property from unlawful attack.

A law is proposed in the Alberta legislature to conform to the ideas of the India girls of that province, by reducing their marriage age from 16 to 14 years. Clergymen report that the young girls select their mates according to their tribal custom and live with them regardless, when unable to be married because of being under age.

BEACONS FOR NIGHT FLYERS

As an aid to aviation and the development of night flying, the Standard Oil Company of California is building what will be the two highest powered incandescent electric beacons in the country—one to be placed on the summit of Mt. Diablo near San Francisco Bay and the other in the Merced Hills, Los Angeles. These beacons will develop ten million candlepower and the flashing beams from them will be visible to aviators for between 100 and 150 miles. The company has taken this action at the suggestion of the United States Department of Commerce, the Airways Division of which is now engaged in installing lights to mark the airways from Los Angeles to San Francisco and from Los Angeles to Salt Lake City. The Department of Commerce is also projecting a series of lights northward and eastward from San Francisco, as indicated in the chart above. These official airway lights are set at frequent intervals and are of three million candlepower each.

The government will give the light on Mt. Diablo the official designation of "SD," standing for "Standard- Diablo," and "SL," signifying "Standard-Los Angeles," for the light in the Merced Hills.

The light for this type of beacon, built by the Sperry Gyroscope Co., is furnished by large 1500-watt incandescent lamps especially manufactured for the purpose. The reflector and lens of the beacon are 36 inches in diameter. The light is equipped with an ingenious device holding two of the incandescent lamps—one directly in front of the focal point of the reflector. In the event of this lamp burning out the second lamp is automatically thrown over to take the place of the one that has gone out. This is done almost instantly so that there is no interruption in the operation of the beacon. The beacon itself makes six complete revolutions per minute. An automatic astronomical clock turns the beacon on at sunset and off at sunrise. This clock automatically compensates for the constantly changing hours of sunset and sunrise.

The beacons will be mounted on 75-foot steel towers. The symbols SD and SL will be hung on the side of the towers as a mark of identification in letters twelve feet high outlined in neon lights.

These lights complement the existing system of daylight airway signs which the Standard Oil Company maintains at some 500 points on the Pacific Coast. These signs are painted on the roofs of its warehouses and give the name of the town in which located. They can be read by aviators at a height of several thousand feet.

Sidelights

Nancy Ann Miller of Seattle participated in a two-day wedding ceremony which changed her name to Her Highness, Maharanee Devi Sharmista Holkar, as third wife of a Hindu potentate at Barwaha, India. Another way to get many columns on the front pages.

They take their kissing seriously in Redding, Calif., where Miss Octavia Hufford had H. L. Gimblin arrested for using caveman methods in connection with the osculatory art. Three trials have resulted in hung juries and the town is split into two factions over the case.

Haircuts should be avoided when the moon is full, according to a London seer, who declares that hair, like other vegetation, contains more "sap" at that time. It should be cut just before the new moon, he says, presumably because the sap is then in the head and not in the hair.

Mothers are seldom referred to in a flippant manner, but a Toronto bakery disregards custom and tradition by displaying this sign: "Pie like mother used to make, 6 cents; pie like mother tried to make, 12 cents."

Mrs. Belle de Rivera, 80, who founded the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs, approves modern women as contrasted with those of her early recollection. She declares that the married woman of former generations was a "poor, pitiful creature, absolute in her submission to her husband."

Another of life's little ironies is seen in a recent occurrence in Toledo, Ohio. A physician called to treat a man injured by a fall on a slippery sidewalk jokingly remarked to his patient that he should "watch his step next time." Then leaving the house the doctor fell on the same sidewalk and broke his own leg.

AL SMITH AND TAMMANYISM OR A DEMOCRAT THAT CAN WIN?

The following article was sent to The Patagonian with a request that it be published. The author withholds his name, as he desires the subject matter to be considered without considering its source:

"Sir: A great deal is being said about the religion of Governor Smith apropos to his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination; so much, in fact, that it looks like a concerted effort to force a religious discussion for the sake of covering up other more important aspects of his availability. To be sure, there are a number, how large will never be known, but perhaps a considerable number, who would vote against Mr. Smith because he is a Catholic, but so far as can be judged from the feelings of personal acquaintances, other considerations will have more effect (at the polls). Many of us who have regarded the governor of the Empire State as an interesting personality never knew what he was a Catholic until his fool friends so truculently demanded to know whether a Catholic could have the benefit of his constitutional rights. Many of these friends, by the way, have not so fondly cherished other constitutional clauses, if we believe the stories they themselves tell of their own unrestrained thirst. Smith's religion makes but little difference with most of us, and in truth in the light of his own answers to questions put to him, considered with the traditional teachings of his church, would lead an impartial observer to conclude that Smith was not a very good Catholic anyway.

Last year some well-meaning Christians held a conference at Lausanne, in the vain hope of securing unity among all believers. The pope was asked to come in, but his answer was short, that they must all accept the dogmas and canons of the Roman church, as a first requirement, but evidently he did not take the proposed union seriously, even kindly. When it is recalled that a previous pope, some years ago, denied the legitimacy of any marriage not solemnized according to the rites and blessed by an ordained agent of the papacy, which is generally regarded also as the present attitude of the church, it is quite natural that any people not suffering from too much interjority complex, would recognize that they were being high-batted. While this is only politics for the semi-civilized hordes that belong to the Roman church, and Governor Smith would probably deny any such belief, it may nevertheless be put down as the principal reason for whatever dislike there is of the Catholics, in which other sects suffer by sympathetic reaction. The course of the church authorities is doubtless dictated by the belief that such an assumption of authority strengthens them with the illiterate mass, though it leads outsiders to size it up as merely swelled head. It should provide amusement rather than resentment.

"But" Governor Smith has serious offenses to answer for: He is a member of the most immoral political organization of any age in this country, and apparently he is not only in high standing in Tammany Hall, but so far as he has made known, has never repudiated their course of bribery, spoliation, and graft. On this account his nomination would be peculiarly unfortunate this year, when the frauds and stealings of the Harding administration, not approved by Coolidge, but by no means sufficiently disapproved by him, have made the Republican party particularly vulnerable, and given the Democrats a chance they may not have again in a generation to offer the country clean government. But with Smith, voters will only be allowed to compare Tammany's sleek manipulation with Harding's inefficiency and oily crookedness, between which it would be hard to choose, and the nomination of Smith would therefore be not only a blunder but a crime against the public welfare.

Another principle is also involved that has great weight with many, and that is the continuation of prohibition as a national policy. Smith is not only theoretically wet but also militantly wet. While such a position is ethical enough in a private person, or even in a legislator, it is distinctly un-American and a dangerous attitude in an executive who has sworn to uphold and enforce the law as it stands. It is impossible to believe that a man feeling as he does will go to any great lengths in enforcing a law that he does not believe in and indeed is using his influence to change or repeal. Certainly his supporters seem to expect nullification of the 18th Amendment at once, if Smith is elected president. His course as governor gives reasonableness to this belief. He secured the repeal of a law in his own state designed to aid in the enforcement of the dry law, and has always stood as the champion of the wet party. In view of these two things, I cannot think, as is assumed by so many, that Smith would carry his own state so easily as a presidential candidate, which is the only excuse anybody has for nominating him.

"Smith accept Tammany methods; he wants to go back to the disgraceful conditions before prohibition came in and it is inevitable that the miracle of social improvement accomplished by dethroning John Barleycorn would be to a large extent obscured by his presence in the White House. Those who have perceived the true significance of prohibition will certainly have none of Smith, and in all likelihood in his defeat he will carry down many a good Democrat who may be serving reluctantly under his leadership.

"Nobody has raised the point yet, but one should like to know how the governor stands on the slavery question. Does he want to bring back involuntary servitude? This seems no more reactionary than his prehistoric ideas on prohibition and Tammany systems. This argument applies to the whole United States, but there is a peculiar addition to it for the people of Arizona. Taxes here are high, the later administrations have not given universal satisfaction, by any means, the last election was won by a hair, and the disaffection caused by Smith's nomination will in all probability defeat the Democratic candidate for governor, as well as others. In the event of his nomination, Arizona and several other states will go definitely into the Republican clutches, which will account for the fact that all Republicans from Hughes and President Butler down to ward-healers, are in favor of giving Smith the Democratic nomination. Let us be warned.

"Respectfully,
"B. E. WARE."

He had brought snowshoes for her, along with an invitation from the Captain and Gram for her to come to the Big House until the snow was over. But Gay did not wish to leave. Now that Rand had come, the beauty of the snowstorm was increased a hundredfold. At his urging, however, she went up to put on stout boots and knickers, for a short run through the woods on snowshoes. Rand helped her through the window and slipped the clumsy shoes over her boots showing her how best to plod along in them.

Gay floundered clumsily at first, but finally, with Rand holding her hand, they set off into the woodland. There was no breath of wind. The air was clean, cold, but not stinging. It seemed to her that the snow that touched her lips tasted of salt. Constantly she cried out with delight, at the festooning of the trees, the draping of the rocks, and on the sea-side, the great caves of ice and snow which glistened and shone like jeweled castles towered and turreted. Never had she seen the water so dark a blue, so cold.

Tears came to her eyes, tears of wonder at the beauty of the snow-white island, and she stumbled and fell, laughing. Rand helped her up and saw the tears that glistened on her red cheeks.

"You have hurt yourself?"
"No." She put her arms around him, looking anxiously into his eyes, eager that he should understand. "It is because it is so beautiful. Doesn't it make all the little things in the world seem petty, and foolish, and not worth struggling about?"

Rand kissed the tears from her cheeks. "I knew you would feel it. It always gives me an idea it must be sort of pleasant to be dead."

"Oh, no. They cannot see it."
"No, but I dare say it feels as good as it looks. Are you happy, Gay?"

"I never knew what a really happy moment was until—just now. I am laughing for joy, I am weeping for joy, I am adoring you for the same reason."

Now and then a small scared rabbit stumbled through the snow-laden brushwood, scurried quickly to cover. A snow-bird chirped anxiously on a burdened bough. Once in a while, loosened by the sun, a little shower of snow pelted them.

"It's great fun being in love with you, Rand," she said. "It seems to give me a sort of mortgage on all the outside world."

When they had returned again to the window on the valley-side, Rand helped her up and unstung the snowshoes from her feet.

She put her hands on his shoulders. "Rand, I wish it could go on forever."

"Snowing?"
"No. This. Having you like this, loving you like this, being with you like this." She drew him close to her, and held him tightly with her arms. "All of it. I love it. I never knew what it was to be so happy."

Rand kissed her, their cold lips warming to the caress. But his dark eyes were very dark indeed beneath the long lashes, and his smile was a little stern when he said:

"Would it be as dear, I wonder, if it were going to last forever? Or isn't it all the sweeter because it is just for a year?"

Gay held him closer. She did not answer.

"Because you know, beloved," he said, and his smile was ready now, though his eyes were clouded dark, "I am everything in God's world that you thoroughly do not like."

"Yes. And the one thing in it that I love with my whole heart," she whispered.

"Well, I ought to be satisfied with that," he said cheerfully.
"And so ought I," said Gay. But she was not.

"Oh, fools rush in," she quoted lightly. "I crave experience. I have never been snowbound. And it is so sweet having you risk the storming elements to see me."

"Now if we were married," he said, "we could be snowed in together, and the rest of the world snowed out—for all the rest of our lives."

Gay's arm tightened about his shoulder. When she spoke, her voice, although she strove to make it light, was husky. "Not for the rest of our lives. The spring would bring a thaw."

"And we'd fight, wouldn't we? Over who should shovel the snow? I'd say, wife, dear,"—and then, as Gay flushed, he repeated it, teasingly— "Wife, dear, you believe in work, you adore work, you worship work, therefore you shovel the snow."

Gay's warm lips silenced his mocking. Then she said, "Run along to thy feather bed, thou sluggard. Sleep, drowse and be lazy, for tomorrow you shovel my snow."

"But when you are snowbound—alone, alone—remember what I told you, we might be snowbound together." And then he shot off suddenly into the storm, and Gay closed the window, smiling at it, merely because Rand had sat there. For her joy in his presence was an unceasing marvel to her.

All night long the snow fell, and whenever Gay turned and awakened she could hear the breathless kissing of flake on flake. And when morning dawned she was snowbound indeed. All her lower windows were blinded with it. Her piazza was solidly banked.

And it was Thanksgiving. They had planned for a party dinner at the Captain's, Alice Andover, Auntalmiry and Gay as guests, and after dinner, Rand and the Budling boys had arranged to take the girls skating. Now it was Thanksgiving—no dinner, no party, no Rand. It was a disconsolate Gay who wandered moping around the pretty house, from room to room.

"Thanksgiving, brrr! Not a thing in the world to be thankful for—until the snow melts—and Rand comes."

She had no hope of getting out of her prison that day. The entire valley was plunged in snow. The Apple Tree was just a low white roof showing in a high white plain.

It was noon when she heard voices beside the pine tree that stood at her porch. She ran to the window of her bedroom and looked down. Rand and the Budling boys were there. They had ropes, and a short ladder, and a basket. No need of a ladder to reach to the branches of the pine, for its lower branches were buried and Rand pulled himself up easily into the tree, while the boys below raised a long plank, steadied it against the tree, raised and shoved it slowly up to him. And wedging it firmly against the branches, Rand shoved it toward her, slowly, and at the end with a little push that lodged it upon her sill.

"I've come for Thanksgiving dinner," he said pleasantly, as though entering a formal reception room to a formal hostess.

"There's nothing to eat—but canned things."

"So I thought. I brought my own." And then Rand was up on the plank, and slowly, hand over hand, he inched his way out and toward the sill, a distance from the tree but a scant two feet, and Gay's hands caught him when he landed.

Then the boys tossed him the end of a rope, and the heavy basket was raised.

"You needn't come back for me," he called. "I'll slide down into the snow. Won't hurt me. Thanks, boys. So long."

"You darling," Gay said. "I had no idea you would come. I said it was a terrible Thanksgiving, and I had nothing in the world to be grateful for, and I said the snow was hideous. Fancy that!"

All her life, Gay looked back to that as a perfect day. They were like two children in their gaiety, in their love. They giggled joyously over unpacking the basket the Captain's wife had filled for them. There was turkey, yes, with dressing, and cranberry sauce, and a little jar of gravy. Pickles, fruit cake, pie.

"It is Thanksgiving," Gay said solemnly. "It is Thanksgiving. You are my Thanksgiving. Rand, I am very grateful to you."

After dinner they pulled up the divan before the fireplace, and sat together, very close, and Rand smoked, while Gay, both arms about him, stroked his hair, ran slender teasing fingers under his collar, touched gently the healing scar on his forehead.

"I never expected to be so much in love," she said happily.

"Don't you ever expect to be more in love than this?"

"No, no. Oh, no. I hope not. I should die of it." Then she added slowly, "Rand, you think I do not really love you. You think it is sort of half-fun, half-thrill—sort of a fly-by-night affair, don't you?"

"You're Such a Plucky Little Devil," He Said Admiringly.

"I think you love me as much as you can, perhaps. But you and I—we are alike—we cannot love—love greatly. Too selfish. You think too much of getting things done. I think too much of my own pleasure. We can't love greatly because we always put ourselves first."

"I love you greatly," she said indignantly. "Too greatly. So greatly I cannot eat, sleep or work for thinking of you."

"That's not love. That's—sensation. How long do you think that sort of thing will last? It will be over in a year—if it endures so long."

"Do you honestly think that, Rand? That this beautiful feeling I have for you will last only a year?"

"How long does it usually last with you? How long did it last the last time?"

"Oh, Rand. It was never like this, never."

"It never is, while it lasts. And when it comes again—it is never like this, either."

Gay stirred restlessly in his arms. "I don't believe it. It will last. It has the feeling of—eternity itself—about it."

They were silent for a while, "Gay," he said seriously, "this is something you don't know. The only way to hold a treasured thing is—by treasuring it. Keeping it. Guarding it. Sacrificing for it. A treasure has to be treasured—or pouf—finnel, paste, the gold just gilded. An untreasured treasure is worth nothing. You don't realize that."

"Do you, Rand, do you realize it?"
"Too well I do." He laughed. "I realize it well enough—but—What? My birthright for a mess of pottage? Never."

"Oh, Rand! Am I a mess of pottage?"

"Yes, you are one of the fleshpots of Egypt," he said, laughing. "The dearest—the sweetest—the most savory fleshpot— And I should trudge right off in the desert and wash my hands of you. But I think," and he paused to kiss her, "I think I'll stick around a while."

It was the fifteenth of December, when island, bay and sea were finally wrapped in the tight cold bands of winter, that Auntalmiry climbed the snow-covered slope to Gay's door. She said she had come for a long talk, a nice cozy afternoon. She still wore her mantle of joyous excitement, of laughter, but beneath it, she was tired, a little old woman of seventy-six years, a heavy weight of time for one so slight.

They had tea, they sewed, they talked. Gay told her many little bits of island gossip which she had from Rand. When she mentioned Alice Andover at last, Auntalmiry sparkled.

"A good woman," she said warmly. "I've never known a better, for all her administering. My dear, can you keep a secret? Yes, I know you can. Dearie, I'm going to have a Christmas party, after all."

And then, flushing with excitement, sparkling youthfully, she told Gay all about it. She could not bear to give it up, she would rather die than give it up, she thought indeed she would die if she must give it up. But she was curiously conscientious. What was given to her, she accepted cheerfully. But what was denied, she had no right to take. They had put a limit on her, and his limit she was bound in honor to respect. Ah, but there were a thousand devious little ways to circumvent a limit, to stretch it, honorably and fairly.

She was old, her appetite was small, her wants modest, and both appetite and wants could be stunted a little. Not that she called it stinting! She called it "handling."

What did she want, at her age, with all those glasses and jars of fine, rich, home-made jellies and fruits? Why, it was sheer extravagance, wasting such fineness on a little old shriveled-up woman like Auntalmiry—extravagance, no less. So she had taken it, all her precious store, a little at a time, over to town and sold it. Indeed the shops were very glad to get such quality, and gave her a good price for it, cash.

And she had other things, too, things she never used, things that were just vanity for an old woman to keep in a drawer, and look at sometimes, and fondle lovingly, and show off to admiring visitors, fine bits of lace, silken scarfs, delicate embroidered pieces, old gold pins, gifts that had been brought to her by friends, people who loved her, returning from trips to the city and tours abroad, from the Orient, from Italy, Paris. Why should she keep those delicate and lovely things just because she loved to look at them? Sheer vanity. And so she sold them, sold them all. No one would ever know. Gay wouldn't tell.

And then she acknowledged her need of Gay. The Apple Tree was so small, so crowded, Gay had offered the use of the Lone Pine for a party. Had she made the offer in good faith?

"Because," she said, "there's no room to dance in the Apple Tree."

Oh, yes, they danced at Auntalmiry's party. It began at five o'clock, the party for the sake of the babies and the smaller children, of whom there seemed to be disproportionate many. So it was a baby's party first, when the tree was lighted, and the children danced about it with their candles and nuts and fruits and gifts, and there was a noisy clamping Santa Claus.

And then, very early, for the snow was always heavy and the night cold, the parents trundled the babies away home to bed, and the others stayed on and danced. "Danced," Auntalmiry said joyously, "until two, three, and last year, until four o'clock in the morning. Think of it, until four—'I suppose you went on to bed and couldn't sleep for the noise—'"

"I go to bed! Indeed I didn't! I stayed up, and I danced a little myself. I danced with Rand three times. Oh, I had a little cold afterward—not much—I was in bed a while. I'll never hear the last of that silly little cold. I think last year was the nicest party of all—except the very first one—fifty years ago—when Buddy, my son, was born. I told you about that. He would be older than you—fifty years." She smiled at Gay. "Do you know what I think? I think Buddy may be that Unknown Soldier down in Washington. I have thought so from the first. He would be in the war, I know, he was so daring, he loved a fight. Some time—maybe next year—I shall do without the Christmas party, and instead I shall go down to Washington, and stand there, and think it is Buddy. Poor Buddy! He always thought right, he always meant right. But things always went wrong. That kind of a boy, heart full of impulse, hands full of mischief, head full of nonsense. Fifty years."

Then Gay put away all her work and gave up the rest of the time to getting ready for Christmas.

CHAPTER X

In the early evening the snow began to fall again heavily, and the skies seemed fairly bursting with the weight of it. Rand came once more to the window, and swung up sitting on the sill, feet dangling into the snow, as he urged her again to come to the Big House until it was over. But Gay guarded jealously all the little secret intimate joys of her island life. She felt that she would not willingly exchange one month of common luxurious living for the joy of greeting him like this in the peeling snow at her window-sill.

And as they both thought of it at once, they looked at themselves, considering their situation, and burst into merry laughter, for he, in his heavy outdoor garb, sat straddling his feet in the snow, while she beside him, turned satin slippers to the warmth of the cheerful room, and great flakes fell upon them both alike.

"Oh, never," she cried. "I wouldn't give up a minute like this. It is such fun to find you in odd and unexpected moments."

It had picked a great flake from her hair, and kissed it as it melted.

"You're such a plucky little devil," he said admiringly. "And for a city girl, too. Do they teach you bravery in Greenwich Village? Is courage for sale in the Broadway shops? I don't know a native state-of-Maine girl who would stay here alone in a snow storm."

Monastery in Russia Place of Pilgrimage

The most strongly fortified monastery in the world is at Solovetski, in Archangel. This monastery is inclosed on every side by a wall of granite boulders, which measures nearly a mile in circumference. The monastery itself is very strongly fortified, being supported by round and square towers about 20 feet in height, with walls 20 feet in thickness.

The monastery in reality consists of six churches, which are the repositories of many valuable statues, and also of precious stones. Upon the walls are mounted huge guns, which in the time of the Crimean war were directed against the British White Sea squadron.

The monks who inhabited the monastery at that time marched in procession on the granite walls while the shells were flying over their heads.

Two Church Designations

The word "protestant" includes many churches, the Protestant Episcopal and the Methodist Episcopal among them. The word "protestant" came into use at the time of the Reformation both in England and on the continent. It stood for a protest against the Roman Catholic church.

The name is not particularly significant at this time when all of the sects are drawing closer together. —Brooklyn Eagle.

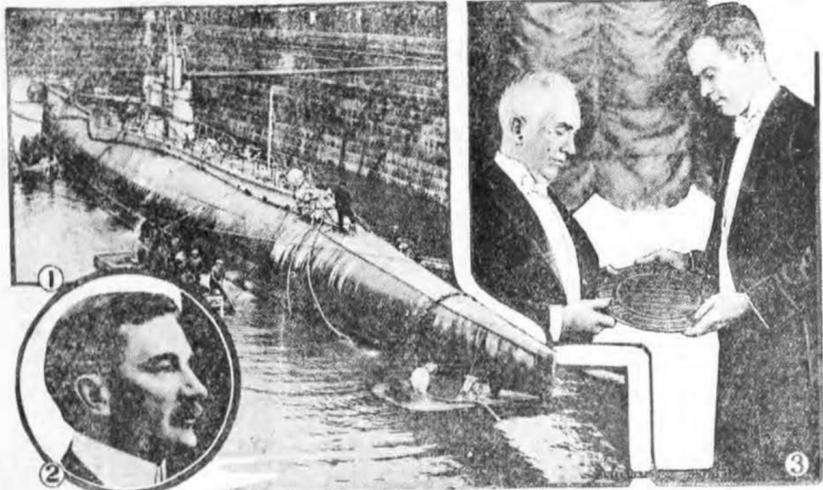

Poor Spelling Common

Poor handwriting and incorrect spelling are faults not confined to the poor and ill-educated, asserts Will West in Liberty. "As for styles of writing, I'd say that bad handwriting, like Chamei blue and reptile leathers, is very good this year. The better the financial circumstances of the writer, the worse, it seems, is the scrawl."

"Spelling—let's be kind," the writer continues, "but even the 'grand dame' stoops to 'payed' for 'paid.' 'Arctics' are almost invariably 'artics,' while for 'leggings' the more Chaucerian 'leggin's' is usual. With 'hats' and 'shoes' and similar monosyllables most women do well, but 'sequins' become 'sequences' and 'suede' is reproduced as 'swede.'"

Dangerous Curiosity

Curiosity is a kernel of the forbidden fruit which still sticketh in the throat of a natural man, sometimes to the danger of his choking. —Fuller.

1—Ill-fated submarine S-4, recently raised, as it now appears in dry dock at the Boston navy yard. 2—Julio Maniu, leader of the Peasant party in Rumania. 3—Norman H. Davis presenting the Woodrow Wilson foundation medal to Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Gigantic Combination of Capital Announced at New York.

THE New York World announced that it regarded as an accomplished fact the biggest communications merger on record. This, it stated, was the combination of the Mackay companies, operating 5,000 Postal Telegraph offices in the United States, and the International Telephone and Telegraph company.

The deal brings together companies with combined assets of $225,000,000 and with about 125,000 miles of joined cable, telephone and telegraph wires in the United States, Canada, Mexico, Cuba and Central and South America.

The merger as outlined will see the ascension of the Behn brothers—Sosthenes Behn and Herman Behn—whose family fortune was founded in Porto Rico, over the Mackays, California forty-niners.

The Mackay fortune was founded when John W. Mackay, father of the present head of the Mackay companies, discovered the famous Comstock lode in 1845. The elder Mackay later started the Postal Telegraph company. His son obtained control of commercial cables and last year the Federal Telegraph system on the Pacific coast. Mr. Mackay's personal fortune is estimated at $50,000,000.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE believes the United States can still be helpful to Nicaragua by assisting the people of that country to choose its government, despite the action of the Nicaraguan house in rejecting the McCoy bill providing for supervision of the coming election by the marine corps.

This view was reflected by an announcement from the Navy department that two additional battalions of marines had been ordered to Nicaragua to reinforce the 2,700 already on duty there.

The two additional battalions will bring the total of United States forces in Nicaragua to 3,700, the greatest number ever to operate in that country at one time. Should the marine force be unable to cope with the situation, about 1,500 blue jackets and marines on board five cruisers in Nicaraguan waters will be available for shore duty.

Secretary Wilbur said the additional marine forces were to be used primarily for overseeing the coming elections and not for action against General Sandino, rebel leader, although the troops may be employed to further the general activities of the marines in Nicaragua.

The problem now confronting the Washington government, in Mr. Coolidge's opinion, is that of devising some plan under which the United States can fulfill its obligations under the Stimson agreement according to the original spirit of that pact—one of helpfulness to the Nicaraguan people in the selection of its public officials.

ADMISSION that "we may have overlooked something" by the builder of the collapsed St. Francis dam featured the first official inquiry to fix the dam blame at the coroner's inquest over the bodies of 69 of the dam victims.

William Mulholland, seventy-two, chief engineer of the Los Angeles municipal water board, who built the dam, declared: "The only ones I now envy are those that are dead."

Loss of life in the disaster is now computed at 449 persons—272 known dead and 177 missing and believed to have perished. While search for dead continued, more than 100 tractors being used to tear through big piles of debris, authorities in the stricken zone decided to confine efforts only to reclaimable land. Debris on unreclaimable area occupied by the old bed of the Santa Clara river will be burned.

Authorities said it would be impossible to put a large enough force at work to recover bodies on unreclaimable land within a reasonable time.

Evidence that a dynamite explosion may have caused the collapse of the dam and released the flood of death on the Santa Clara river valley was said to be in the hands of investigating authorities.

So much credence was placed on the findings of deputy sheriffs assigned to the flood area that every reservoir and dam in the entire Los Angeles water system was put under a heavy guard.

AN AMERICAN girl was married March 17 to one of the wealthiest of Hindu princes in a ceremony modern in manner, medieval in splendor and ancient ritual.

The wedding, which united Miss Nancy Ann Miller of Seattle with Sir Tukoojrao Holkar, former maharajah of Indore, was witnessed by thousands of Hindus, dressed like true princes and princesses and wearing the costliest jewels money can buy.

After the ceremony, which ended ten days of ritual whereby Miss Miller became a Hindu, princess and a member of the Holkar family, bride and groom were hosts at a banquet to 10,000 guests.

FEDERAL supervision of the coal industry, as tentatively suggested by Senator Gooding (Rep., Idaho), was endorsed on behalf of the United Mine Workers by John L. Lewis, president.

Lewis, who has informed the senate investigating committee that his organization is ready to meet with operators to suggest legislation to stabilize the industry, declared that the union would be "practically unanimous" in supporting federal control of coal production and marketing, because the Gooding proposal is the most constructive made to date. The coal commission idea has been endorsed also by several coal operators during the inquiry, but others refused to commit themselves.

ONE of the most pitiful tragedies in the annals of the American navy was revealed in the Charlestown (Mass.) navy yard. Eight remaining bodies were taken from the submarine S-4, now in dry dock there. At the same time it was made clear what occurred inside that vessel after it was rammed and sunk by the coast guard destroyer Paulding, on run chasing duty, near Provincetown December 27.

Conditions shown as the water was pumped out of the S-4 made it evident that every one of the 40 men in the submarine had found temporary safety in locked compartments and had died many hours later either suffocated by deadly gases or smothered by the exhaustion of the air.

Thirty-four men had lived for an undetermined number of hours in the motor and engine room compartments. Five or six men who had lived approximately three days in the forward torpedo room had died, it was indicated, sleeping peacefully in their bunks. Some of them had partly undressed to make themselves more comfortable.

COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH is now a congressional medal of honor man. President Coolidge pinned the coveted emblem, the highest decoration of the American government, upon the blushing trans-Atlantic hero during a brief, impressive ceremony March 21, on the White House grounds.

Vice President Dawes, Speaker Longworth (Rep., Ohio), members of the cabinet, and high officers of the army and navy witnessed the presentation.

THE Bank of the Soviet Union has engaged the New York law firm of Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett to fight the Bank of France's attempt to replevin $5,210,000 in gold sent here by the Russian institution and is prepared to bring a counter-claim for losses it may sustain through the French action.

It is estimated that the Russian bank is losing from $700 to $1,000 in interest daily on the metal, which lies in the vaults of the Chase National bank and the Equitable Trust company. Had it not been for the French action the gold might have been out of the country by now or else used as the basis of credits with private American interests.

Simpson, Thacher and Bartlett are scrutinizing the French-Soviet treaty to determine whether the Bank of France's action is in accordance with its terms. Under the treaty, all claims by French nationals against the Soviet government are subject to diplomatic adjustment. A spokesman for the Bank of the Soviet Union said that, although the treaty has been in force for some years, the Bank of France has never filed a claim for the gold until the present action.

ACTING upon the instruction of the Canadian cabinet, Gov. Gen. Willingdon of Ontario approved orders in council committing to life imprisonment the death sentence passed on Dorris McDonald and confirming the death sentence passed on George McDonald, her husband, both Americans. They were found guilty of the murder of Adolphe Bonnard, Lachine (Quebec) taxi driver.

A TWO MILLION DOLLAR trade school as a memorial to his father, John Wamamaker, is provided in the will of Rodman Wamamaker, Philadelphia merchant. The document disposes of an estate of from $75,000,000 to $100,000,000, instead of $50,000,000, which was the first estimate of its value.

THE London Daily Express says Lord Balfour, lord president of the council, former prime minister and one of the outstanding British statesmen of the present generation, is suffering from heart trouble and has canceled all his engagements. He has been ill for some time. In January he suffered a severe attack of laryngitis.

THE $274,000,000 new warship construction program was approved by the house and sent to the senate. The vote was 287 to 57.

In passing the Butler bill, the house voted for the construction of 15 cruisers of 10,000 tons displacement each and one aircraft carrier of 13,800 tons. The measure carries a provision requesting the President to "urge the necessity" of another international conference for the limitation of naval armaments and gives him authority either in whole or in part in the event of a limitation agreement.

RECEIPTS from the March 15 income tax returns reported to the Treasury department to the close of business March 17, aggregated $215,550,000. On the same date a year ago the returns aggregated $197,690,308, an increase this year of $17,858,692.

Should this proportion hold good for the entire collection on income for the last calendar year, the treasury would receive about $100,000,000 above its estimate.

TWENTY-TWO of the 25 countries represented on the preparatory committee for a League of Nations disarmament conference lined up against the Soviet plan for immediate disarmament.

Hugh S. Gibson, the United States; David Whitmarsh, Cuba; Baron Kolin-Jacquemyns, Belgium; Jonkeer Rutgers, Holland; E. Heening, Sweden; M. Sokal, Poland; and M. Markovitch, Yugo-Slavia, added their criticisms to others, making the Russian defeat overwhelming.

NORA Bayes, comedienne who defied a lighted audience in Broadway and London theaters for more than a score of years and cheered many persons privately by her generous acts, died at a Brooklyn hospital.

She had gone almost directly from slugging at two benefactors to the hospital for an abdominal operation. She was apparently well on the way to recovery when a relapse came.

Miss Bayes once wrote that she was born in Joliet, Ill., and other sources fixed the date as 1880. Her real name was Leonora Goldberg. She is survived by her husband, Benjamin L. Friedland, whom she married three years ago on the steamship Levantine, and by three young children she had adopted.

AN INVESTIGATION of the 1928 Presidential and congressional campaign by a special senate committee has been proposed from two sources.

Senator Nye (Rep.) of North Dakota, chairman of the Teapot Dome committee, which has been inquiring into past campaign funds, says that, if no one else proposes a resolution to have a committee check up on the organization of the two parties, he will do so.

In a formal statement Senator Capper (Rep.) of Kansas gave notice that he would seek to have the senate provide the machinery to inquire into expenditures in the coming campaign.

Lesson for April 1

JESUS THE SUFFERING MESSIAH

LESSON TEXT—Mark 8:27-38. GOLDEN TEXT—Whoever will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow Me.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus the Great Hero. JUNIOR TOPIC—The Heroism of Jesus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Cost of Being Loyal to Christ. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus Interprets His Messiahship.

I. Peter's Confession of Christ (vv. 27-30).

Two questions of Jesus provoked this confession. 1. "Who do men say that I am?" (vv. 27, 28). This question referred to the opinions of the people regarding Jesus. Some believed Him to be John, the Baptist, some Elijah, and some, one of the prophets. They all recognized Him to be a teacher or prophet with more than human authority and power. Jesus was not content with this acknowledgment. Had He been satisfied with this He would not have been molested in Jerusalem, for the Jews willingly acknowledged Him as much more than a human teacher. 2. "Who say ye that I am?" (vv. 29, 30). Jesus persistently claimed to be the God man, the very Son of God incarnate. He wanted the personal opinion of the disciples concerning Himself.

ii. Jesus' Teaching Concerning the Cross (vv. 31-33).

He charged the disciples not to make public His Messiahship as that would precipitate the crisis. The disciples had much need of instruction yet, to prepare them for the crucial hour of the cross.

1. What He taught (v. 31).

(1) "The Son of Man must suffer many things." He suffered physical weariness and hunger, ridicule and contempt and even misunderstanding.

(2) "Be rejected of the elders, chief priests and scribes." These were the nation's official representatives, the very ones who should have known and received Christ and recommended His reception on the part of the nation. Truly He came to His own and His own received Him not (John 1:11).

(3) "Be killed." This announcement was startling to the disciples. They had not yet come to realize that redemption was to be accomplished through the passion and the cross.

(4) "Rise again." Though this was utterly incomprehensible to the disciples, He showed them that this would be the glorious issue of His death.

2. How the disciples received His teaching (v. 32).

So unweakened was His teaching touching the cross that Peter, the spokesman of the disciples, rebuked Him. Peter later saw through this darkness the light of glory on the hilltops beyond (1 Pet. 1:3, 4).

3. Jesus rebukes Peter (v. 33). He told Peter plainly that his attitude was due to his being under the influence of the devil.

ii. Jesus Going to Jerusalem to Die (Mark 10:32-34).

Jesus went to Jerusalem with the consciousness of the awful tragedy of the cross before Him; the treachery of Judas, the fiery persecutions of the priests, the unjust judgment, the delivery to Pontius Pilate, the mocking, the scourging, the crown of thorns, the cross between malefactors, the nails and the spear all were spread before Him. He moved on to His goal, not by external necessity but a fixed purpose. He had not only come "to minister but to give His life a ransom for many." The joyous outlook of the victory which was to be accomplished through the shedding of His blood led Him forward (Heb. 12:2).

iv. The Cost of Discipleship (Mark 8:34).

The law of the Christian life is suffering. To follow Christ means to turn one's back upon the world. To repudiate the world means to incur the hatred of the world; to be Christians means to share Christ's suffering.

1. There must be denial of self (v. 34). There is a wide difference between self-denial and denial of self. All people practice self-denial, but only Christians deny self.

2. The cross must be taken up (v. 34). This means the suffering and shame which lie in the pathway of loyalty to God. To live the godly life means suffering (1 Tim. 3:12).

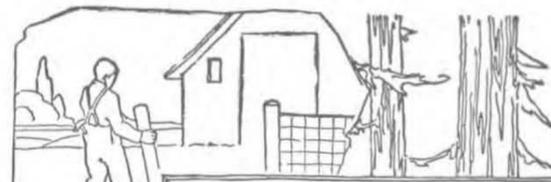

3. Christ must be followed (v. 34). This means to have the mind of Christ (Phil. 2:5) and to perform the service of Christ. The blessed issue of following Christ is a life of freedom here and now, and eternal life hereafter.

"Business First" in Mind of Bridegroom

Senator Smoot talked to a group of reporters about his business. Among other things, he said: "Southern should be kept out of business. That is an excellent precedent. But even excellent precedents can be carried too far.

"At a fashionable wedding not long ago the bridegroom failed to turn up. Noon sounded, then one o'clock, then two. Everybody was in despair.

"But a little before three the young man arrived, smiling and breathless. He explained that he had been trotting about from bank to bank cashing the numerous checks that had flattered among the wedding presents.

"You can't stop a cashed check," he murmured tenderly to his bride as they took their places at the altar."—Detroit Free Press.

Apple Monuments

A well-known monument to apples, in the form of a pillar, was erected in 1895 at Wilmington, near Lowell, Mass., to the Baldwin Apple. There is also a tablet in the town of Chatham, Ontario county, New York on the original site of the Prince-of-Peace tree. Another monument in New York is the monument to the Northern Spy, erected in 1912 at Bloomingville. The Wealthy apple is commemorated by a monument at Excelsior, Minn. This was erected in June 1912.

Vast Irrigation Project

About 2,000,000 acres could be irrigated by the Boulder dam basin in the states of Nevada, Arizona and Colorado and in Mexico. The construction period would be about seven years from the time work is started on the construction railroad. The dam, 760 feet high, 25,000,000 cubic feet, would cost $11,500,000 and power development an additional $21,500,000, according to a bureau of reclamation estimate.

Fairy Tale for the Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"Well," said the caterpillar, "spring is the beautiful time of the year when the flowers burst into bloom, the buds open, the leaves begin to appear, butterflies and crystal creatures follow."
"Well, neither of us think much of the winter," said the jumping spider, "for both of us sleep in the winter."
"I got all ready for my sleep last autumn."
"So did I," said the caterpillar. "I fussy a good deal before I am all ready. I have to see that I am safe and secure from other creatures who might disturb my winter's nap."
"I do some interesting things, you know."
"Tell me about them," said the jumping spider politely.
"I belong to the family of caterpillars which weaves its own chrysalis cases out of hairs and wool from its summer coats."
"Some of the families find some silk which they have grown within themselves which they use."
"Sounds very strange to me," said the jumping spider.
"It does sound strange," said the caterpillar, "but it is true."
"I am glad to hear about you," said the jumping spider.
"I have told you about myself, and now I must nap a little longer before I get up and get ready for the beautiful spring."

"I am not quite, quite awake yet, but I have begun to stir and soon, very soon, I will be very, very wide awake."
"But just before I take one more little nap, won't you tell me about yourself, Jumping Spider, for I am sure you must be interesting?"
"In fact I know you are interesting. And I would like to hear your story before we both leave each other entirely."
"It is strange that we should have chosen our winter home so near each other."
"Hurry and tell your story, for I see you are really wide awake."
"Why wouldn't I be pretty wide awake with all the eyes I have?" asked the jumping spider.

"All the eyes?" repeated the caterpillar.
"Yes," said the jumping spider, "my name and the fact that I can jump amounts to very little when you think of my eyes."
"I will think of your eyes, but tell me more about them, so I can think more," said the caterpillar.
"I have been in this closely woven tent," said the jumping spider, "as you can see."
"It is here I have stayed all winter. As you see, I have a good broad nose. I would hate to have a little narrow nose, or, in short, any other nose than the one I have."
"It is nice to be satisfied," said the caterpillar.
"Both nice and sensible," said the jumping spider.
"Pray continue," urged the caterpillar.
"My eyes are very small in size, and they look like little beads," continued the jumping spider.
"But it makes no difference if they are small, for I have several pairs of eyes, I have."
"I feel very sorry for creatures who have only one pair of eyes. And so, you see, when I become wide awake I become very wide, for I have so many eyes to open."
"Ah me, ah my, it is fine to be a jumping spider with many eyes, several pairs of eyes at least, and to wake up in the spring after a good, long, refreshing sleep," ended the jumping spider.

Water System for Bath

New Bathroom in Mrs. Guy Roop's Remodeled Home, Montgomery County, Virginia.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)
Encouraged and advised by the county home demonstration agent, Mrs. Guy Roop of Montgomery county, Virginia, achieved a number of changes last year in her home which made it much more comfortable and livable. The illustration shows one of the most important of these—a new bathroom, made possible by the installation of a complete water system. This water system is supplied by a tank built on the exterior of the house above the second floor. The tank can be filled from the roof by gutters and also by a ram placed at a spring at the foot of the hill. A small, convenient, well-lighted room on the second floor was made over into a bathroom with modern fittings. Water was also supplied to the kitchen, which was greatly improved in arrangement and equipment. Other remodeling that was done included the living-room, a sun parlor and enclosed porch, and a nursery and upper enclosed porch, as well as the bathroom. The home demonstration agent under whose guidance such home improvements were made is employed co-operatively by the United States Department of Agriculture and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute. There are now approximately 280 home demonstration agents employed in the 48 states.

Guarding Children's Health

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)
Health has always been closely related to and considered a definite part of almost every activity included in the home demonstration program. Much helpful and valuable health in-aspects, such as food selection, food preparation, and meal planning. Many details of home improvement also have a direct effect on health, as when by more convenient arrangement of equipment, or better equipment, fatigue is avoided and more leisure is obtained.

Everything to do with child care and child feeding has a health angle which is stressed by extension workers. The aim in arousing community enthusiasm for more healthful school lunches has been to promote in mothers a greater interest in correct child feeding and to help educate children in food and health in such a way that hygienic habits would be formed early in life. The health score card has been widely used to call attention to such health factors as sufficient sleep, fresh air in the sleeping rooms, frequent bathing, care of the teeth, correct food selection, and weight as an indication of physical condition. Many of the farm children thus encouraged both at school and by their mothers to form good health habits, later become 4-H club members in which health is strongly emphasized. In addition to the skills they develop in demonstrating club activities, they must be free of physical defects in order to qualify as representatives of their clubs in many county and state contests. The total effect of this requirement is continual improvement in girls' physical condition and in increased recognition of the importance of health.

The illustration, taken by the United States Department of Agriculture, shows a child keeping track of her own weight in connection with her health score card.

: WELCOME RECIPES :

By NELLIE MAXWELL

It's a good safe rule to sojourn in every place as if you meant to spend your life there, never omitting an opportunity of doing a kindness, speaking a true word or making a friend.—Ruskin.

We all like occasionally a well made and nicely seasoned meat pie. Usually a meat pie is made to use up leftover meats, and thus to some it is not a welcome dish. However, not all meat pies are made from such meat and who is there who would refuse the delicious chicken pie? The old-fashioned Cornish pie which has sustained the miners for years in their hard work is prepared from fresh beef. It is so good that it is often repeated.

Cornish Pie.—Prepare a rich biscuit dough and line a deep pie plate or two with the mixture rolled out as thin as can be handled. Fill with inch cubes of fresh uncooked beef-steak cut into cubes, season well and add plenty of suet and butter for richness. Sprinkle over the meat a few tablespoonsful of shredded onion, over that a layer of parboiled rye, a baga thinly sliced and over that sliced uncooked potato. Cover with the crust after adding plenty of salt and butter or suet and leave a good vent for the steam to escape. Add no water and bake about two hours. Take from the oven and wrap in a cloth for ten minutes to steam and season the crust, then serve.

Veal Pie de Luxe.—Cut two pounds of cooked and seasoned veal into pieces. Have ready twenty plumped and pitted prunes, put them into a baking dish and add the veal, and a gravy made by blending two table-spoonfuls of butter, one cupful of hot water and some onion juice, and a spoonful of minced parsley, and the same of currant jelly, with three table-spoonfuls of chopped raw ham. Cover with a rich pastry and bake.

Southern Lamb Pie.—Take a quart of cooked lamb, cut into small pieces, add two cupfuls of boiled potatoes, diced, and one-half cupful of pecan meats; season with salt, pepper and minced parsley. Put into a baking dish, add three cupfuls of cream sauce, cover with a puff paste or a rich pastry, leaving vents for steam. Bake until brown.

Stewed Cabbage and Celery.—Cut into shreds one small cabbage and a bunch of celery. Lay in cold water for a few minutes, then boil for twenty to thirty minutes in boiling salted water. Prepare a rich cream sauce, drain the cabbage and celery and stir into the sauce.

Baked Cabbage with Cheese and a White Sauce.—Is well liked for a hot scalloped dish.
Ham Pie.—To two cupfuls of finely minced ham, add two beaten eggs, one-half cupful of white sauce, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of mustard and a dash of red pepper. Place in a pastry-lined dish and put in the mixture interspersed with one-third of a cupful of almonds and a hard cooked egg cut into slices. Bake without a cover and serve garnished with tomato sprig and chopped green peppers. Serve cold.

The cheapness of cabbage compared with other vegetables makes it, or should, more in favor with the housewife. Cabbage is a food rich in mineral salts, and having bulk, adds much to our list of vegetables. There may be some housewives who may think because of the cheapness of cabbage that it is not worth while to bother with it.

As a simple salad or relish to serve with oysters there is nothing more appetizing than finely shredded fresh cabbage dressed with salt and pepper and a dash of vinegar. Another worth-while salad is:

Stuffed Cabbage.—Select a nice head, not too firm, trim and drop whole into a kettle of boiling water, set aside for fifteen minutes, drain, then scald again and let stand thirty minutes, then drain and fill with the stuffing. Take two heaping table-spoonfuls of well-washed rice, one table-spoonful each of chopped onion and parsley and one-half pound of sausage meat. Mix all well. Open the cabbage carefully, lay in some of the stuffing, fold over the leaves, take another layer and fill until all the stuffing is used. Press firmly together, tie in a thin cheesecloth and drop into boiling water. Cook until the cabbage is tender. Serve well drained on a deep dish with a cream sauce poured around it.

Value of Liver Diet

Since nutrition specialists have pointed out the value of liver as a source of iron and vitamins in the diet, many new ways of serving it are being suggested. The recipe below is from the bureau of home economics.

1 cup rice
1 lb. liver, sliced
1 onion, sliced
1/2 cup rice water

1 slice bacon
1/2 tsp. salt
3 tbs. bacon fat
Few drops tobacco

Wash the rice free of all surface starch and cook it in 2 quarts of boiling water until it is soft. Drain the rice in a colander, cover it with a clean towel, and place it over hot water to steam and become flaky. Save some of the rice water. In the meantime, fry the bacon until crisp, remove it, and brown the onion in the fat. Salt and lightly flour the liver and fry it slowly in the bacon fat, after the onions are done. Cook the liver over low heat until the red color disappears, turning it frequently. Cut up the liver and bacon, mix with the onion, and add more salt to taste and a few drops of tobacco. Mix the bacon fat with the rice and make a layer of the rice in a greased baking dish. Add the liver mixture and continue until all the ingredients are used. Pour the rice water around the sides of the dish, cover and place the dish in the oven until thoroughly heated. Serve at once.

HINTS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS

Brown sugar is preferred by most cooks for fruit cake or any dark cake.
Spices and condiments give flavor to food, but they do not add to its value otherwise.
A lemon gives up much more of its juice if it is heated in hot water or in the oven before it is squeezed.

New Idea in Football

The fame of the Shoeless Wonders football team of the Presbyterian orphanage at Lynchburg, Va., is spreading fast. The orphanage team possesses only one football shoe, discarded by the Lynchburg high school. This shoe is used by the player who does the kicking and as soon as the piskin starts flying through the air, the shoe is discarded. "You couldn't put shoes on those kids if you wanted to," says Dr. William Meginnson, superintendent of the orphanage. "I believe that the reason they win so many games is that their opponents make fun of their bare feet and try to step on them. This makes them mad; they dig their toes in and plow through."

The Talker

Sincere Lewis, the novelist of attack—Mr. Lewis attacks ministers, doctors, small towns, everything and everybody—is the hero of a story.
It appears that at a dinner party he was seated next to a movie actress whose celebrity is greater than his own. Being an eloquent talker he naturally talked to her. He talked and talked. He had never been in better form for talking. But suddenly the actress said:
"Humph!"
Everybody looked at her, and she added:
"That's a word in edgeways."

Clever Trick Worked

A New Yorker opened a new restaurant in West Forty-fourth street, but not many persons were aware of the fact. So he bought the largest goldfish bowl he could find, filled it with water and placed it in his window with this placard over it: "Invisible fish from Rio de Janeiro." The police have frequently had to drive away the pedestrians who gathered before the window in an endeavor to see the invisible fish. One man tapped on the glass and shook his hat in an attempt to bring the fish out where he could get a better view.

Evidently Was Hungry

Albert Brown, a down-and-out, walked into a restaurant at Mount Carmel, Ill., and asked for a lunch. Two persons who heard Brown's story agreed to pay for all he could eat. Brown made away with seventeen hamburger sandwiches, nine cups of coffee, seven slices of bacon, two pin's of milk, three oyster stews, six jelly rolls, two cans of beans and six glasses of water.

That Stomach of Yours!

Center, Colo.—"I have been troubled with my stomach for several years. Doctors prescribed for me but I got no results. Finally one was a tabled me to go through an operation. Then an old friend of mine told me how he had obtained relief by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery for neuralgia of the stomach. After taking less than one bottle I could go ahead and eat solid food, go about my work, and those sharp pains had left. I have taken 6 bottles of the liquid, also some of the tablets, and feel no more pains in my stomach—can eat what I please. I can, without hesitation, endorse this medicine."

If Back Hurts Flush Kidneys

Drink Plenty of Water and Take Glass of Salts Before Breakfast Occasionally

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Ribbon Bows on Hats

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

ONE little, two little, three little ribbon bows, four little, five little, six little and larger ribbon bows, thus in increasing number are bows of ribbon appearing on the millinery horizon. According to the chapeaux emerging from the ateliers of such artists as Alphonsine, Reboux, Agnes and others, Paris modistes are turning their attention ribbonward for spring.

The ribbon most used is a double-faced crepe satin type. Alphonsine employs two colors of this ribbon, twisting it around the crown of exotic straw shapes in most alluring fashion.

A most fascinating outlook is presented in the present ribbon venture. Some milliners are making it a point to match the ribbon perfectly to the felt or straw it trims. Others take great joy in producing startling color contrasts and combinations.

There is exceeding great charm expressed in the felt shapes whose ribbon trim is in identical coloring. Such a model is drawn at the bottom of the group in the picture. It is in the modish wood-violet shade, a color which is outstanding in the millinery mode this season. The wide satin ribbon is arranged in a bog of many soft loops at one side, which insures becomingness, as it so gracefully semi-flexible cloche to the left is constructed of a roman-striped grosgrain ribbon alternated with the same weave in a solid color. Its graceful ripple trim insures becomingness.

That is a felt shape which you see to the center right in the group, with bandings of narrow grosgrain ribbon stitched diagonally across the crown
