THE YEARLY SLAUGHTER

In spite of warnings and pleadings by the press and various safety organizations, the unending slaughter of human beings in highway accidents shows no indication of being diminished.

Figures compiled by the American Road Builders' Association, made public last week, show that during the year 1927 in the United States there were 26,518 killed and 798,3700 seriously injured on the streets and highways of the country.

The number killed was greater than that enrolled in the entire regular army of the United States in 1897. Suppose that during that year every officer and soldier had been killed.

The tragedy would have shocked the nation. Yet little attention is paid to an even greater tragedy in 1927. Suppose that every man, woman and child in the city of Boston were either killed or seriously injured. It would be a less disaster than befell the country as a whole from highway accidents alone last year, and, so far as can be judged, less than will occur this year and each year in the future.

While many accidents are seemingly unavoidable, the great majority of them are due to plain carelessness or foolishness. And it seems impossible to keep a fool away from a steering wheel.

"THE GOOD OLD DAYS"

Listen to any old-timer hold forth and almost invariably he will allude to "the good old days." The youngsters who hear him with skeptical smiles will do the same when they grow old. It's human nature, that's all. It is the man in the twilight of life looking back at the bright noonday. The soft shadows of the twilight obscure all the rough spots and unpleasant memories and there remains only the thought of the tinge and tang of life "when we were 21." Perhaps also, as we inevitably approach nearer the journey's end, we do not like to look ahead, but find a measure of solace by looking backward and living over again the days that are gone.

Speaking of crime, most juries appear to have no positive convictions on the subject.

MINING, BACKBONE OF PROGRESS

Cecil Rhodes, famous English statesman and colonizer, built the empire of South Africa on the foundation of mining. Here is what he says of mining and its influence on mankind:

"Mining has been the foundation of the world's wealth from the beginning of time. The governments rich in minerals have always been the richest and strongest governments on the earth."

"Mining is the only business on this earth that increases the wealth of the world without infringing on the rights of others. The man who produces gold, silver and copper is creating the raw material of money; every strike of his pick adds to the wealth of every man's business in the world."

WHY CALL IT SPORT?

An interesting phenomenon in American life, which seems hard to account for when one reflects upon it, is the amazing seriousness with which we take our so-called sports. This seriousness is reflected in the sporting sections of the daily newspapers, which play up the activities of athletes to an extent bordering on the ridiculous.

In professional sporting events, and in many of the amateur variety as well, every element is present except that of true sportsmanship. Generally the only object sought is to win by fair means or foul.

Originated as friendly games for the exercise and recreation they afforded, baseball, football and other former pastimes have degenerated into grim struggles for notoriety and gate receipts.

A recent writer, and a sports writer at that, has deplored the methods whereby college football teams are strengthened through fake enrollments, and he relates that one eastern university spent $250,000 in three months on a losing team.

Fortunately, in most of the smaller communities and in the lesser schools there is still to be found wholesome athletic activity, in which friendly rivalry and real sportsmanship are the rule. But the events which draw the crowds and fill the sport pages are marked by bitterness and frequently result in long-standing feuds.

So long as the public demands this sort of thing it will no doubt be supplied. But why call it sport?

"Lindbergh was the sixty-seventh man to make a non-stop flight across the Atlantic ocean," recently wrote Cartoonist R. L. Ripley. Angry protests brought the explanation: Prior to Lindbergh, a non-stop airplane flight was made by Alecock and Brown; 31 crossed in the dirigible R-34, and 33 in the Z-42, now the Los Angeles.

A few years from now we shall perhaps see the favorite daughters popping up here and there.

Americanism: Listening over a $300 radio set to hear a record played on a $75 phonograph.

From Plumber to President

Following out the tendency of the day for employees to share in the control and management of the business, thirty-five department heads, executives and foremen of the Wolf Company, $7,000,000 plumbing fixture corporation, founded in Chicago in 1885, have taken over the business. Gradually every member of approximately 1,000 employees will be given an opportunity to share in the profits of the company in addition to their daily wage.

As in other innovations and great business movements, there are always the star roles played in the world of commerce. According to a pre-announcement story in the Chicago Tribune a few days ago, William J. Woolley, the president of the new employee-controlled corporation, was a plumber in Evansville, Indiana, twenty years ago. He saw that plumbers were not trained as business executives and started a bureau to train master plumbers in business administration. He came to the attention of the Wolf Manufacturing Company and three years ago was brought to Chicago to aid in the conduct of the business that had suffered huge losses because of the taking over of the plant by the government during the World War. When a reorganization was found necessary, Mr. Woolley wanted to buy

AN EDITOR'S BLESSINGS

Blessed are the merchants who advertise because they believe in it and in their business; for their prosperity shall increase manifold. Blessed are the country correspondents who send in their well-written items every week; for fame of their friendly neighbors shall go abroad in the land. Blessed is the woman who sends in a written account of a party or wedding, for she shall see the details of the function and the names of her guests correctly reported. Blessed are those who do not expect the editor to know everything, but who call up and tell him whenever an interesting event occurs to them, for they shall have a newsy paper in their town. Blessed are they who get their copy in early, for they shall occupy a warm place in the editor's heart. Blessed are those who cooperate with the editor in his efforts in behalf of the community, for their town shall be known far and wide as a good place in which to live.—The Beaver.

FARMERS' BIG POOL

Cooperative marketing of products has made steady progress among Canadian farmers and the results have been generally satisfactory. Among the successful enterprises of this nature is the Canadian wheat pool, according to A. McPhail, president of the selling agency of the organization. Like many other similar projects, this pool is the result of years of effort in education and organization, extending over a quarter of a century. These efforts have finally resulted in securing wide support for the wheat pool, not only by the farmers, but by business and professional men as well, according to McPhail. In a recent address he declared that the farmers of western Canada "will never surrender the control they now exercise over the merchandising of their own grain."

Although cooperative marketing among farmers everywhere has generally been faced with many obstacles, chief among which have been the skepticism and indifference of the farmers themselves, the idea underlying it is sound. Wherever loyalty of the pool's membership has been combined with a capable selling organization, the advancement of the enterprise has generally been gratifying. Within a few years it is believed that the cooperative marketing plan will gain unanimous approval among really progressive and business-like farmers.

High-pressure salesmen of worthless stock will have little harder sledding in Ontario as a result of a new "blue-sky" law just passed by the legislature. In spite of all warnings, many millions of dollars are filched from the public through stock swindlers. The new law provides, among other things, that all stock brokers and salesmen must be registered.

The marines have the situation, but not Sandino, well in hand.

A RANK INJUSTICE

An example of the stubbornness of government bureaucrats is seen in the persistence with which the postoffice department clings to its practice of competing with local printers in the sale of printed envelopes at less than cost.

There is no more justification for this practice than there would be for selling clothing, groceries, or any other commodity at less than cost and making up the deficit by taxation.

Still, every administration, whether Republican or Democratic, has effectively resisted every attempt to put an end to this unfair and indefensible proceeding.

Local printers do not object to the sale of plain stamped envelopes, or those bearing the return address of the postoffice, with a blank line for the name to be written in. They do object to the printing of individual return addresses practically for nothing. The expense of this work is paid from the public treasury.

It is not selfishness that impels small local printers to protest against this practice. They ask no favors from the government. They merely protest against the rank injustice of a policy which singles the mail for a species of discrimination not employed against other citizens and taxpayers.

Sidelights

H. W. Dodd of Telegraph Creek, B. C., is one official who catches them going and coming. As government liquor vendor of his town, he sells the booze, and as magistrate he soaks his customers if they imbibe too freely. However, in the past year he only had five cases of drunkenness before him.

Lyle Womack, husband of Ruth Elder, aviatrix, got into the news last week in his own right. He won a prizefight in Panama, which, with former victories, gives him the riddie-weight championship of the Canal Zone. Womack is only an amateur boxer. His regular job is in his uncle's distillery, one of the largest in Central America.

Among some Indian tribes of North America it was customary to cut the hair of widows and forbid them to remarry until their hair had grown to its original length.

Save Pennies—Waste Dollars

Some users of printing save pennies by getting inferior work and lose dollars through lack of advertising value in the work they get. Printers as a rule charge very reasonable prices, for none of them get rich although nearly all of them work hard.

Moral: Give your printing to a good printer and save money.

COUNTY KEY BANKERS

Who are they? County representatives of the agricultural committee of the state bankers association.
By whom appointed? Preferably by the agricultural committee in cooperation with the President and Secretary of the State Bankers Association, and the Extension Director of the College of Agriculture.

- What are their duties?
1. To get in touch with each bank in their respective counties and get a line on what each is doing agriculturally.
 2. To represent the agricultural committee of the state association in any county matters pertaining to agriculture in which banks or the bankers association are interested.
 3. To serve as the medium through which the assistance of banks of the county can be obtained to meet an emergency such as a sudden outbreak of disease or fugate pest.
 4. To be responsible for interesting the banks of the county in one or more of the agricultural projects approved jointly by the state committee and the college of agriculture.
- How can they proceed?
1. By correspondence.
 2. Present projects or plans at county banker meetings.
 3. Make personal visits to banks of the county, preferably in company with the county agent.

Cooking Rib Roast

Roast Beef With Yorkshire Pudding.

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)

The guesswork connected with cooking a rib roast of beef to the desired degree of "doneness" can be eliminated, according to the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. A meat thermometer, thrust into the thickest part of the roast, so that temperature of the meat at the center can be read, is an exact guide in cooking. Every time you cook a rib roast you can get the same results if you cook to the same temperature—140 degrees Fahrenheit for a rare roast, 160 degrees Fahrenheit for a medium roast, or 180 degrees Fahrenheit for a well-done roast. A three-rib roast will probably require 15 minutes to the pound to be rare, 18 minutes to the pound to be medium, and 20 to 22 minutes to the pound to be well done.

Here are the complete directions for cooking a rib roast of beef: Select a two or three-rib standing roast. Wipe it off with a damp cloth, sprinkle with salt, and then lightly with flour. Place the roast in an open pan without water and with the fat side of the roast up. As the fat melts and cooks out it will baste the meat. Through the fat covering insert a meat thermometer so that the bulb reaches the center of the roast. Sear the meat for 20 to 30 minutes in a hot oven (500 to 525 degrees F.), until lightly browned, then reduce the temperature to about 350 degrees Fahrenheit and continue the cooking until the thermometer in the meat reads the temperature that corresponds to rare, medium, or well-done, whichever you prefer.

Serve the meat on a hot platter, surrounded by brown potatoes or by squares of Yorkshire pudding. Yorkshire pudding is the traditional accompaniment to roast beef. It owes its popularity partly to the fact that it is flavored with the drippings from the meat. It used to be customary to cook the Yorkshire pudding under the rack on which the meat was roasting.

Make Bible Guide

The origin of the quotation "where the Bible speaks, we speak; where the Bible is silent, we are silent" is unknown for certain. It is widely used by several Christian denominations in this country to express their reliance upon the Bible as a complete and sufficient moral and spiritual guide in life.

Fish Supplies Medicine

Insulin, the specific in that dread disease, diabetes, is now being obtained from the angler fish. The angler, or "fishing frog," tempts its prey by means of a long spine proceeding from the top of its head, and baited, like a fishing rod with a blob of meaty matter dangling at its tip. —Exchange.

Story for the Children

By Mary Graham Bonner

"We were invited to the flower show this year," said the vegetables in the vegetable garden at the show to the flowers in the flower garden.

"Of course you've always been invited to the flower show because it wouldn't be a flower show without flowers."

"We should think vegetables would always have been appreciated," said the flowers.

"Thanks, flowers," said the vegetables, "and we admire you for not becoming snobbish."

"Oh, dear," sighed the flowers, "we could never become that."

"Well, you might," said the vegetables. "Flowers have always been asked to the flower show, of course, and flowers are always beautiful."

"Flowers are of lovely colors and of sweet scents. They could easily be snobbish and superior, but they are not. No, flowers are never snobbish."

"Vegetables," said the flowers, "we hate snobbish things and people."

"We love to give pleasure, to bring happiness."

"Sometimes people try to make flowers snobbish by acting as though flowers which cost a lot were so much nicer than cheap ones which could be easily grown."

"But the flowers are never that way themselves. And oh, how they hate it when people say they only like flowers which cost a lot and which look like the flowers in a flower shop."

"Thanks, Flowers," Said the Vegetables.

horrid, perfectly dreadful. We'd disgrace the family name of flowers."

"Ah, we must appear conceited to you," said the vegetables, "for we are so happy to be here."

"We have always tried to be good so people would enjoy us when they ate us, but we must admit that we are proud and happy now that every one is thinking more of vegetables."

"Why, flowers, they're growing us everywhere. They are not letting any ground go to waste."

"They said we should be plentiful, which means that there should be plenty of us, and we think this all very fine."

"We like to hear of them hating to waste things, for we have always been that way ourselves, good practical, common-sense vegetables."

"No, we don't think you are conceited," said the flowers.

"We think you show the right kind of pride, for you know what you can do and of how much good you can be, and you want to be given an opportunity and chance to show of what you are capable."

"That's just the way we feel, flowers," said the vegetables, "but we're very, very glad to be considered of enough importance to be asked to the flower show."

"We want to be appreciated, but we also want to be worthy of the compliments we may receive."

Household Hints

The wise mother trains her child to consider candy only as a dessert.

One way of making blue eyes look bluer is to wear a costume of soft gray blue.

When stains are to be removed from table linen, stretch the fabric over an embroidery frame and fasten it tightly. If the frame is placed over a bowl, boiling water may be poured through the material with no danger of scalded fingers. The hoops also prevent wetting much of the cloth.

When there is no one to help you turn up evenly the hem of a new dress, put on the dress, adjust it properly at the waist and then stand beside a low table. Turn around, marking the line of the table top around the skirt with pins or chalk. With that line marked carefully, it is easy to measure from the line to the bottom of the dress the desired length, and to turn up a straight hem.

Recipes That We All Like

By NELLIE MAXWELL

There is nothing that makes men rich and strong but that which they carry inside them. Wealth is of the heart, not of the hand.—John Milton.

When one wishes a small but dainty cake to serve on special occasions, the following recipe will be found desirable:

Sweethearts.—Cream two-thirds of a cupful of butter with one-half cupful of powdered sugar, add one teaspoonful of boiling water and one teaspoonful of vanilla to loosen the creaming. When the mixture is very light break in two eggs, one at a time, beating one minute after each addition. Now add three cupfuls of flour gradually and when the dough leaves the side of the bowl turn it on to a pastry board covered with another cupful of flour. Knead lightly, working in the flour. The dough must be smooth and not stick to the hands. Place the dough in the bowl and cover with a towel, let stand two hours. When ready to roll, roll out a small piece at a time, one-quarter inch in thickness. Cut with a small cutter into any desired shape. Bake slowly. When the cakes are cold, ice them and pack away. For icing add enough hot water to sifted confectioner's sugar to make a smooth glossy icing. Add a bit of color and spread on the cakes.

Swiss Foam Cakes.—Beat three eggs and one and one-third cupfuls of sifted powdered sugar for 15 minutes; when the mixture gets heavy stir with a rotary motion until the time is up. Add two cupfuls of pastry flour sifted with one teaspoonful of cinnamon and mix quickly. With a tablespoon dipped in cold water drop even shaped mounds from the tip of the spoon on to a baking sheet. Leave plenty of space and let stand overnight. In the morning bake in a moderate oven. Test with a toothpick to see if they are done. They will look as if they had beeniced.

Meat cakes placed in the center of a platter, making a flat cake, rounded with stuffed tomatoes and mashed potato in roses around the platter, make a fine meal.

A Salad a Day.
The value of fruits and salad plants in our daily menus has been stressed for so long that the average family, winter or summer, sees that at least one meal in the day has an ample salad. With fruit for breakfast, a fruit salad for dinner, with fruit for dessert, one has an ideal day's food, when served with the other food of vegetables and meats usually served in the day's supply.

Pear Salad.—This recipe is to be used with fresh ripe pears but with some variation may be served with whole or halved canned ones. Pare the required number of pears, core them with an apple corer before peeling. Cut a slice from the bottom to make them stand firmly, then fill with chantilly or parfait dressing. Serve on lettuce garnished with rings of maraschino cherries and quartered marshmallows.

Chantilly Dressing.—Mash a small cream cheese (the three-ounce size) until it is smooth, adding three tablespoonfuls of thick cream, one-quarter teaspoonful each of salt and paprika, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and two tablespoonfuls of currant jelly which has been whipped smoothly. Chill the dressing before serving.

Parfait Dressing.—Whip a cupful of heavy cream, add a tablespoonful of powdered sugar and two tablespoonfuls of orange, lemon and pineapple juice, a teaspoonful of maraschino cherry cordial with five of the cherries chopped.

French Fruit Dressing.—Place one teaspoonful of powdered sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, one-eighth of a teaspoonful of paprika in a small bowl, add one tablespoonful of chilled olive oil, stir until all the ingredients are well mixed, then add a tablespoonful of orange, grapefruit juice, or lemon juice, mix well and add another tablespoonful of oil, then a third, stirring to a thick emulsion. Double the recipe if needed to increase the proportions. Add raspberry juice if a red dressing is desired.

When serving fruit jellies except for drinks, the addition of ice to the fruit dilutes and dulls the flavor. Chilled fruit is always delicious, but melted ice, which carries away the flavor of the fruit, is not desirable.

Velvet for Spring Wear

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

VELVET has been accepted as an all-the-year-round fabric. That is, certain types. The exquisite sheerness, the dainty texture achieved for velvet has removed all prejudice against its use during the twelve calendar months.

The costume in the picture is a truly springlike affair, and the blouse is made of velvet-tissue velvet, if you please. As supple and sleek as any georgette is this lovely velvet. Its orchid tones add to its spring daintiness. The skirt is of chiffon, the same accordion plaited, making it measure quite some yards around the hemline as fashionable hemlines should, and do this season.

Of special interest in its styling is the fact of the blouse hemline being draped about the hips. This is an outstanding feature for many a blouse this season.

The checkerboard patterning of the velvet of which this blouse is made is significant, as it emphasizes a bold dot design and dots are a very important feature just now, in the season's modes. Even felt hats and some smooth straws are dotted all over, some embroidered, some painted and some burnt in with a pyrograph needle. As to polka-dot silk prints and other dress fabrics their name is legion.

Vogue for the separate blouse receives new impetus this season, in that it serves so frequently in the styling of the ensemble. Many of the new blouse models show the surprise opening.

Rompers for Children

(Prepared by the Bureau of Home Economics, United States Department of Agriculture.)

The prime requisite of practical rompers for a child of three or over is that they should be an aid and not an hindrance to self-dressing. They should also, of course, be practical from the standpoint of material, ease of laundering, cut and fit, and they should be attractive, so that the child will enjoy possessing and wearing them.

A front-opening romper with as few fastenings as possible is desirable for either girl or boy. A drop seat is necessary on all rompers after a baby has been trained in toilet habits. On the romper illustrated, which is a good type for a little girl, three large flat buttons are used. These are easy to find and handle, as they are buttoned in the middle of the bound scallops that define the front opening and add a decorative touch. They should be securely stayed where they are sewed on, and the buttonholes should be strongly made and no longer than necessary to receive the buttons.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture has been designing a number of kinds of children's rompers, suited to different ages. This romper has one of the features that is being especially recommended—four buttons, instead of three, on the belt of the drop seat. These are placed two at each side toward the underarms, where the child herself can reach them, instead of having to struggle to reach a button in the middle of her back.

Other good points about this romper are the crotch, shaped to make it fit neatly, the leg finish, without either cloth or elastic bands. The fullness in the legs is slightly gathered at the sides into a binding to give a bloused effect and better fit.

Magical Power Failed Wizard in Emergency

Howard Thurston, the magician, has astonished thousands while in Pittsburgh by extracting rabbits and American flags from the most unlikely places. It is even said that recently, while paying a visit of charity to the home of a destitute miner, he saved and overjoyed the miner's wife by extracting $1 bills from her hair and presenting them to her with his compliments.

But while on a visit to our office the other day, his magical gifts evidently deserted him temporarily. Wishing to write a note to the dramatic critic, who happened to be out, he searched in vain through his clothing for a pencil, turning his pockets inside out, with no end of trouble.—Pittsburgh Post-Gazette.

Shirt Made Souvenir

A white shirt front bearing the signatures of Chappalo and other celebrated artists who appeared at a concert in connection with British music trades convention at Folkstone, England, was sold at auction five times and realized 300 guineas ($1,500). The shirt front was photographed by the artists while being worn by a member of the convention.

FARMER'S WIFE GETS STRENGTH

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Schoolfield, Va.—"My mother had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I decided to take it for my own troubles and found great relief. I was hardly able to stand on my feet sometimes and now I feel better than I have for several years. I credit the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with my present good health. I have taken five bottles of it and I am now able to do all my housework and sewing, feed my chickens, milk the cow and tend the pigs, and feel fine."—Mrs. J. C.
