MRS. KELLY HENRY CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY TREASURER

Mrs. Kelly Henry, who announces in today's Patagonia that she will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for county treasurer, has been a resident of Arizona for the last 16 years. She was born and educated in Portland, Ore., and is a college graduate, having specialized in financing and accounting. Upon completion of her education she entered a banking institution as bookkeeper, following which she held many other positions where her college training stood her in good stead.

In 1915 Mrs. Henry purchased property in Nogales and has resided there continuously since that time.

Mrs. Henry has held many positions in Nogales as bookkeeper, stenographer, etc., and has passed two examinations for civil service work.

If elected, Mrs. Henry states, she will place the business of the treasurer's office on a strictly business administrative basis and will serve the public in a most courteous manner.

HARRY FARRIOR TO BE IN RACE AGAIN FOR ASSESSOR

Harry Farrior, incumbent, has announced that he will be a candidate this fall on the Democratic ticket to succeed himself in the office of county assessor. This is his first term of office.

The assessor's office is one that requires an experienced man to secure for the taxpayers the best results, and Mr. Farrior believes that he has mastered the intricacies of the office during his incumbency and is much better qualified to fulfill the duties of his office now than he was before assuming office.

Mr. Farrior has a host of friends who are working for his re-election. He is an ever-service man, married and the father of several children.

WOODIE GATLIN ANNOUNCES HE WILL RUN FOR CONSTABLE

Woodie Gatlin of Patagonia will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for constable in district number 2, which embraces all of the upper and eastern parts thereof.

Mr. Gatlin came to Santa Cruz county when he was a small boy and has resided here ever since. He is clerk of the local school board and at present is employed by the Evans Mercantile Company here.

Mr. Gatlin is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Gatlin, pioneer residents of the county, who make Patagonia their home.

It is predicted by Woodie's friends that, if nominated and elected, he will do his duty as a peace officer without fear or favor.

Thomas Leach, 45, of Brooklyn, recently killed his sister, saying that he did so to save her from "being annoyed by spirits."

THE LARGEST BELOW-SEA LEVEL AREA MAP JUST OUT

A new geological survey map has just been issued by the department of the interior covering the heart of the largest area in America below sea level—the Salton basin of California. This basin includes the famous Imperial valley, but its deepest part is covered by the Salton Sea, a large, land-locked body of shallow, salty water with a shore line 250 feet below ocean level.

The lowest land in America is found in Death Valley, also in southern California—276 feet below sea level—but the area of that valley is only 450 square miles, as compared with 1760 square miles in the Salton basin. It is only of late years, however, that Death Valley has held even the low-level record. Prior to 1905 the Salton basin was the lowest, lying 280 feet below sea level, but in that year the Colorado river went on an unusual wild rampage and broke through its banks some distance below Yuma, at a point where the water surface was about 50 feet above sea level and, of course, far above the Salton basin. Through this break the great river poured into the Salton basin, bidding fair to submerge the whole area, ruin the Imperial Valley and other valleys, and cause untold damage to property. Only the most heroic work by the Southern Pacific railway averted a great disaster. Left to its own devices the river, after some years, would have created a great inland sea many times the size of the Salton sea, and perhaps even larger than the Great Salt Lake of Utah. Even the water that flowed in to the dried-up basin of the Salton sea before the Colorado was finally confined within its banks raised the level of the Salton sea from 280 feet to 214 feet below sea level. Since that event apparently 6 feet of water has evaporated.

Among the Indians of the region there is a tradition that many generations ago there was a similar influx of waters from the Colorado which filled the valley. It is probable that there have been several such occurrences during the last 2000 years with long intervals between, during which the waters of the lake gradually evaporated until it was reduced to dryness. The map of the Salton sea and vicinity is engraved and printed on the scale of about 1 inch to 1 mile, and is sold by the Geological Survey, Washington, D. C., for 25 cents a copy.

HARRY FRYER TO RUN FOR JOB AS CONSTABLE THIS FALL

Harry Fryer of San Rafael Valley announces this week that he is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for constable of district number 2.

Mr. Fryer belongs to one of the oldest pioneer families in this county and has been engaged for many years in the cattle business.

He says he will "play no favorites" if elected and will do his duty fearlessly and to the satisfaction of the voters.

QUOTA LAW FOR JAPS ADVISED BY AMBASSADOR

San Francisco, July 11.—Charles Maceveagh, United States ambassador to Japan, arriving here today from Seattle en route to Santa Barbara, said he believed granting the Japanese a nominal immigration quota in the United States would soothe their resentment over the exclusion act. He said the result would be obtained even though but 50 to 100 were allowed to enter the United States annually. Maceveagh will go to Washington, D. C., after spending a few days in the south.

REPORTS FORECAST NEW AIR LINES FOR ARIZONA

Phoenix, July 12.—Arizona has been recognized for some time as favoring air routes. Great strides in air transportation are predicted for the near future in this state.

Scenic Airways, Inc., now has two trimotored Ford planes in regular service at the Grand Canyon and plans to cover all scenic regions of Arizona and southern Utah in its operations. Only a few days ago the company announced it would inaugurate a regular passenger line between Kansas City and Arizona points as soon as the necessary planes are delivered.

From Jordani comes the information that Pickwick Airways, a subsidiary of Pickwick Stages, will establish a line using fourmotored planes from San Francisco to Chicago via Los Angeles, San Diego, Phoenix, El Paso, Dallas and St. Louis. This new company will operate in conjunction with the Union Air Lines, which are to inaugurate service between Portland and San Francisco and Chicago by way of Salt Lake City, Denver and Kansas City.

Two other established companies also are reported to be planning service between California and Texas via Arizona. Meanwhile Arizona's pioneer line, the Aero Corporation of California, is operating its Los Angeles-Phoenix-Tucson line with great success. And the Southern Pacific and Rock Island railroads have announced plans for combined train-plane service via northern Arizona, announced recently by the Santa Fe and Pennsylvania systems.

RADIO COMMISSION'S RULING TO START LEGAL BATTLE

Washington, D. C., July 11.—The constitutionality of the federal radio commission's ruling refusing broadcasting rights to 162 stations beginning August 1 was challenged today at the commission's hearing on application of certain of the stations for retention of their licenses.

Nicholas Schroeder, station WBMS, Union City, N. J., and C. A. Sorenson, KICK, Red Oak, Iowa, two of the dozen stations heard today, were overruled on the plea, but they noted exceptions for use in possible recourse at law. Schroeder further said that the 1927 radio act was unconstitutional as it provided for taking property without due process of law.

BUSINESS SITUATION JUNE 1, AS REPORTED BY A. I. C.

Beginning of summer has found business in general unusually active in most parts of the state. Although the customary seasonal trend downward has been noted in many lines in southern localities, the recession has been markedly less than in former years. Northern sections are benefiting from large vacation and tourist travel, and on the whole trade conditions may be classified as definitely improved over the past several seasons.

Movement of a record-breaking cantaloupe crop and satisfactory prospects for cotton have been the principal agricultural features. Shipments of melons from the Salt River Valley to July 5 aggregated 1851 cars, and it now appears the total will be 5000 cars or more, in addition to several hundred cars from Yuma. Prices have been very favorable. Cotton acreage in the state is estimated at 200,000 acres in the first government report, just issued. The market has shown decided improvement over last year, when 137,000 acres were harvested.

Unsatisfactory range conditions, particularly at lower elevations and chiefly affecting cattle, have remained an adverse factor for the livestock industry, but stock has carried over to the period of normal summer rains in fair shape. Market conditions have been good. In mining the improved price of copper has continued the chief point of interest, with a great deal of development work going forward.

Exceptional activity in new construction and development is reported from nearly all regions of the state, and these expenditures undoubtedly are having an important effect in making prospects for the entire year 1928 very good. Equally important influences are increased production and improved returns for cotton, cantaloupes, and lettuce, in agriculture, and improved prices for copper, cattle and wool, production of which will be about the same as last year, judging from present indications.

Banking transactions in larger cities of the state for June were generally below those for May, but in nearly all instances were materially above those for June of the last two years. The total for 11 cities compiled by the Arizona Industrial Congress shows checking transactions of $71,549,996.14 in June, 1928; $83,196,184.36 in May, 1923, which included an extra week's figures in Phoenix; $58,060,189.36 in June, 1927, and $58,539,085.46 in June, 1926.

MEARS AND COLLYER AHEAD OF SCHEDULE ON WORLD TRIP

Tokyo, July 11.—The American aviators John H. Mears and Charles G. D. Collyer, who arrived here today on their trip around the world, are confident they will set a new record of 25 days for the globe circuit.

They said that on their trip across Europe they had had varied experiences with good and bad weather, and that their forthcoming flight across the United States from Vancouver seemed simple in prospect to what they had been through. Mears declared his belief that their flight had demonstrated the practicability of a regular commercial air route from Europe to Tokyo.

The aviators lost their bearings today after leaving Osaka, but quickly picked up a railway line which they followed through to Tokyo.

They will board the steamer Empress of Russia tomorrow with their plane, the City of New York, bound for Vancouver, whence they will make a direct flight as possible to New York.

KIRBY'S MINE TAX STATEMENT CALLED "INACCURATE"

Phoenix, Ariz., July 12.—Governor C. W. P. Hunt today made public a reply addressed to him by the state tax commission to the recent assertion by Secretary of State James H. Kirby that "the burdens of taxation have been shifted from the mines to the small taxpayers."

"No statement," says the reply, "could be more inaccurate and farther from the truth."

Pointing out that in 1912, when the tax commission was created, all mining property was taxed on a valuation of 19,000,000 and that in 1927 the property was taxed on a valuation of $288,000,000, or an increase of $269,000,000, the statement declares that despite the closing of many mines in the last few years, mines, railroads, telegraph, private car, express, public service and other corporations pay 65 per cent of all taxes in Arizona, while all other taxpayers pay only 35 per cent.

B. P. O. ELKS CREATE $20,000,000 TRUST FUND

Miami, Fla., July 11.—America's Elks, in session here today, voted to establish a $20,000,000 trust fund for use in charitable, educational and benevolent enterprises. It will be known as the Elks' National Foundation. The plan called for appointment of a committee of seven trustees with plenary power to develop and administer the fund to the accomplishment of the purposes.

The delegation also heard reports from a national memorial headquarters committee and a committee representing the Elks' Magazine.

Dudley Gehardt, 79, of Petersburg, Ind., recently was hanged when his shirt collar caught on a fence.

New York, July 11.—A leader in the business and industrial world—John J. Raskob of General Motors Corporation and E. I. Dupont de Nemours—will direct Governor Smith's campaign for the presidency.

Raskob, who never has been active politically and who is listed in "Who's Who" as chairman of the Democratic national committee at a harmonious organization meeting of the committee today. He is a close friend of the presidential nominee, who suggested his election.

Given wide powers by the national committee in the conduct of the campaign, Raskob appointed Herbert Lehman, a New York investment banker, as director of finance, succeeding Jesse H. Jones of Houston. He also was authorized to name an advisory committee, and without delay announced the selection of Senator Gerry of Rhode Island as its chairman.

SEVEN OF ITALIA'S CREW ARE RESCUED FROM ICE FLOES

Rome, July 12.—The Clitta Di Milano sent a radio message tonight saying that at 9 p. m. the Russian ice breaker Kraassin had taken aboard the Viglieri group of refugees from Noble's ship, the Italia. An official announcement of the rescue was made.

The task of the Kraassin was lightened by the fact that the Clitta Di Milano had been able to restore radio contact with the refugees. After the Kraassin had reported the rescue earlier today of Captains Zappi and Marino, word came from the tent party near Poy Island giving their latest position.

In the brief announcement that came concerning the Kraassin's success, there was no description of the exact manner in which the rescue was effected nor was there any word as to the condition of the men. The official announcement, however, paid tribute to the manner in which the crew of the big Russian ship had huddled their craft throughout the search for the explorers.

SALE OF GRAPE JUICE HELD AS LAW VIOLATION

Washington, D. C., July 11.—Explanation was made today by Prohibition Commissioner Doran that the step-by-step prohibition agents of sale of unfermented grape juice in Indianapolis was effected under a provision of the law forbidding the sale of ingredients for the unlawful manufacture of liquor.

The legality of this provision has not been tested in the higher courts, the commissioner said, but most of the district attorneys and prohibition agents are making arrests under it. "It is a plain violation of the law to sell grape juice or any other ingredient along with literature advising how to turn the product into an intoxicating beverage," the commissioner added.

Speaking about publishing lists of subverts, a Washington newspaper says it is attended by legal and moral risks. There are cases, possibly, in which the element of physical risk might also enter.

A long man with a short name is Ek, an official of the Guggenheim Copper Company, who is 6 feet 3 inches tall.

The new Republican treasurer is named Nutt, but we'll bet he isn't one.

The Beavers are building their dam

See how they lay the branches lengthwise of the stream, propping the butt ends up with sticks and mud thus making the branch ends a little lower; in this way they resist the push of the water. The wise animal knows that if the branches were placed broadside of the stream they would soon be washed away. The timbers become water-soaked, causing them to sink. The branches and twigs of the trees form a sort of basket work.

This catches the driftwood etc., thus damming the river more and more. If too much water passes, the Beavers will plaster the butt end with mud until just enough water passes through to keep the pond at a proper level.

THE DEAD HAND

"Government operation of business lacks imagination and originality. It never creates anything—except jobs. It is a dead hand on initiative."

So reads a paragraph of Merle Therpe, quoted in the Publishers' Auxiliary. Local publishers and printers can also testify that the government in the envelope printing business for half a century has robbed them a hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of work which would have materially helped them to better serve their communities.

This sort of competition on the part of the government is utterly indefensible, particularly for the reason that by doing this work at less than cost the deficit must be made up by the taxpayers, including the printers, whose business is injured by this practice.

Cases are known in which postmasters drawing large salaries have devoted time to personally soliciting this petty business. What local printer could employ a man at a salary of $3000 or $4000 a year to solicit nothing but envelope printing jobs? Yet that is a fair sample of the government in business.

MORE OIL SWINDLERS

In a recent issue a leading oil journal sounds a warning against a new crop of oil stock swindlers now springing up as a result of the wave of speculation which is now sweeping the country.

Since the successful prosecution of fake oil promoters at Fort Worth in 1923 this particular brand of swindler has been lying rather low, but he is now emerging in great numbers. By the most plausible and seductive advertising the ignorant sucker is being induced to "invest" in beautifully engraved stock certificates, in the hope of becoming part owner of a roaring "gusher."

The American Mining Congress, reputable oil concerns, bankers, and others are doing what they can to warn the public against these crooks, who play upon the credulity of the public, but so long as these warnings go unheeded the suckers must pay for their folly.

It is a true saying that "a fool and his money are soon parted." And no one can facilitate the parting more skillfully than a slick oil stock swindler.

COOLING-OFF TIME

As usual, the period just following presidential nominating conventions is marked by mutterings from those who are dissatisfied with either the platform or candidates of their respective parties.

Third party movements are threatened and the disgruntled give out volubrious interviews airing their grievances. Sometimes a third party really appears in some strength, but only once since the Civil War has such a party changed the normal election result. That was in 1912, when the revolt of the Progressives under Roosevelt caused the election of Wilson.

This year the same talk is heard as of old. In some sections of the middle west a revolt of Republican farmers against Hoover is predicted for November. In the south a rather noisy group of Democrats are denouncing Smith.

But with fall will come a cooling-off time, and the rank and file will doubtless become reconciled to a large extent and when they go to the polls in November most of them will vote as they have always voted—for the party to which they normally belong. Folks are like that.

A North Carolina newspaper prints an item full of pathos and kindly sympathy, in which reference is made to the loss suffered by a subscriber whose dog was run over and killed by an automobile, concluding as follows: "What makes it the more distressing is that he has only eight dogs left."

Two movie theaters in New York open at 7 o'clock in the morning. The question is whether this is for the benefit of patrons who got up early or for those who have been up all night.

A doctor says one woman in 18 is bewitched. A statement which may be checked up with little trouble.

WHAT HE ISN'T, JUST ISN'T

An exchange prints a little story, clipped from an unknown source, which is very good—and maybe very old. Anyway, it is worth repeating. It concerns an Omaha jobbing house and a customer merchant in an Iowa crossroads town. A shipment of goods received by the customer was rejected as unsatisfactory.

The jobber prepared to institute suit for collection, and wrote to the railroad agent at the village for information about the arrival of the merchandise; to the president of the bank for information concerning the financial standing of their customer; to the mayor of the city asking him to recommend a good lawyer to handle their case; and to the merchant himself, threatening suit, if he did not make payment at once. This reply was received:

"I received your letter telling me I had better pay up.

"I am the railroad agent here and received the letter you wrote the agent.

"I am the president and sole owner of the local bank and can assure you as to my financial standing.

"As the mayor of the city, I hesitate to refer you to a lawyer, since I am the only member of the bar in this vicinity.

"If I were not the pastor of the only church here, I would tell you to go to hell!"

President Antonio Barcelo of the senate of Porto Rico owes his life to the fact that he is very fat. A crazy fellow countryman slipped up and stabbed him with a short chisel, which failed to penetrate the president's thick layers of adipose tissue pleny enough to reach a vital spot.

The Livestock Situation

Los Angeles, July 12.—Eradication of tuberculosis from the dairy herds in the southwest is not only a public health problem but it is one of the most important economic problems before the livestock industry today. There is a sentiment among both the livestock interests and among others looking towards the cleaning up of tuberculous herds.

It seems to be generally agreed that a tuberculous cow will eat as much or more food than the healthy animal but will not produce as much milk. The cow is merely a machine through which the dairyman converts his grain and pasture into a marketable product. If that machine is impaired through disease, and if the life of the machine is shortened from the same cause, there seems to be no sound economic reason why that machine should not be discarded in favor of one in perfect condition.

This is just what the dairymen of the southwest, as well as in most other parts of the United States, are doing. In some instances the elimination of the tuberculous cow is being forced through state or county law with the cooperation of the federal government. Such a program is being seriously considered in California, not so much from the standpoint of public health, because that feature is supervised by an army of public health officers, but for purely economic reasons for the benefit of the dairy industry.

There is a very decided sentiment on the part of milk distributors that tuberculosis should be eradicated from dairy herds. This feeling has developed to such an extent that the man with unhealthy or untested cows does not realize as much for his product as the man with a clean tested herd. This fact is doing more than anything else to eliminate the unclean herds, for when the dairyman's pocketbook is directly affected, it is not difficult for him to realize that he cannot afford to handle other than strictly clean cows.

Not only are the dairymen marketing reactor cows, but they are also culling their herds of animals which are not producing enough milk to represent some profit to the owners. The result is that thousands of cattle of dairy strains are passing into beef channels, to some extent helping the beef supply, and their ready use is made possible through the constantly broadening outlets for all classes of beef animals through the open markets at the packing centers throughout the country.

The passing of dairy stock into beef channels is nothing new, and even in the face of unusually heavy offerings of this character at present, it is un-v that it will have an appreciable effect upon the price levels of beef animals, as the dairy offerings largely go into trade channels not taken care of by the usual beef supply.

It is noticeable that many dairymen have taken advantage of the present situation to sell off their old producing cows, using the proceeds to make replacements with more productive animals, and in many cases the sale of these poor producers will make possible the purchase of two heavy producers.

By working out a process of clean areas we will make a substantial advance in swine production and at the same time greatly help the dairymen by furnishing a profitable market for skim milk. The raising of the standards of sanitation in dairies throughout the country has made the handling of swine in the dairies a most practical operation, and the desirability of this has been evidenced at many markets where premiums are offered for swine produced in accredited clean areas.

There never was a more favorable time, from the standpoint of market values, for the dairyman to sell off his unprofitable cows at the public markets, and the general opinion is that cattle price levels will occupy a strong position for some time to come.

DENIES COMMITTEE ENDORSED E. S. CLARK FOR GOVERNOR

Tucson, July 12.—Reports that E. S. Clark, Phoenix attorney, had been endorsed by the Republican state committee as a gubernatorial candidate at its meeting last week, was denied last evening by H. Corbett, Republican national committeeman.

Clark was a candidate last year, being defeated by Governor Hunt by a narrow margin. There have been persistent rumors in Tucson to the effect that he would enter the contest this summer again. There are already three Republicans in the field—Judge J. G. Phillips, Celori Stoddard and John Udall.

An interesting combination of wet and dry was seen recently in New Orleans, when the Dry Cleaners' Band played for the opening of a new swimming pool.

The Maharaja of Patiala, a native ruler of India, is doing his bit toward keeping the automobile industry going. He owns 220 cars, of which 42 are Rolls-Royces.

TO AVOID SLUMPS

Although the idea is not new, a recent magazine article sets forth a plan for preventing periodical business depressions and consequent unemployment, by means of regulating government spending.

Briefly, the plan is that the government should curtail its building activities during "good times," and speed them up to relieve unemployment when private business is at a low ebb.

While apparently sound in theory, it is doubtful whether the plan could ever be put into practice with any degree of success. The government,

CAMPBELL TO MAKE RACE FOR COUNTY SUPERVISOR

R. A. Campbell, a former member of the board of county supervisors, makes formal announcement in The Patagonian that he will be a candidate for the office again his fall in the Democratic primary.

Like individuals, wants things when it wants them, and if members of congress feel that appropriations for this or that are demanded by their constituents at a certain time, it is not likely that the funds would be withheld for the purpose of stabilizing conditions.

Mr. Campbell has been a resident of Patagonia for many years, during which time he has made many lasting friends by his uniform honesty and fair dealing.

During his former term in the supervisors' office he was active in protecting the interests of taxpayers.

As Willard Roath, incumbent member of the board from this district, has announced he will not be a candidate for re-election, friends of Mr. Campbell, knowing of his activities in the past and his interest in the welfare of the county, have persuaded him to again become a candidate.

AN INCOME FROM GROWING FLOWERS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Although Mrs. S. F. Poole of Winter Haven, Polk county, Fla., considers her rose garden partly as a commercial venture, she gets a great deal of personal enjoyment out of its masses of lovely color and its characteristic fragrance. She planned her garden under the guidance of the county home demonstration agent, and is now able to make a good side income by selling both cut flowers and plants or cuttings.

The varieties of tea and hybrid roses suitable for planting in such a garden as this depend somewhat on the location and climate. As far north as Iowa, varieties that will do well, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, are: for pink blooms, Radiance, Killarney, Mrs. Wakefield, Christie Miller, La Tosca; for white, Kaiserine Augusta Victoria, white Killarney, Cochet; for red, Red Radiance, Gruss an Teplitz; for yellow, Marie Van Houtte, and for copper, Mrs. A. R. Waddell. Information on the planting and management of a rose garden may be obtained by writing to the department.

Household Notes

- If you are short, avoid large hats.
- Beat sour milk with a Dover egg beater before using it for cooking.
- Both alcohol and turpentine may be used to remove paint and varnish stains.
- Children's dislikes for certain foods are often formed through the influence of their elders.
- Soft bread crumbs give a better color and thinner crust to croquettes than dried crumbs.
- Plan the dessert to fit the meal—a light dessert after a heavy meal and a rich dessert after a light one.
- Dirt and perspiration are the chief enemies of silk. They cause the fiber to break down and to wear out.
- An excellent way to protect furs against moths during summer is to keep them in a cold storage plant.

Old Belief Shattered

Experiments made at the University of California have proved that a bull's reaction to the color of red is no more than to any other color. In fact, judging by the conduct of the steers tested, it seems doubtful whether they can tell red from green, or white from blue. It is even possible that the animals have no realization of color at all.

Party Frocks That Appeal

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

IN THE right kind of evening clothes every woman is beautiful. Well, every one will agree that there is no doubt as to the party, dance and dinner frocks being outstandingly of the laces and beguiling graces held sway.

Many of the new evening gowns revive the romance of fashion in that they are given that quaint styling which emphasizes full-skirtedness, bertha effects and such. The bertha in the picture is of lace and because it is so extremely smart this season, its presence establishes the style prestige of this frock. This dainty dress expresses an exquisite color-play in that the chiffon voile of which it is made is in the three tones of rose, the darkest at the hemline diminishing to just a suggestion of pink at the top.

Compared to many of the latest dance and bridesmaids' frocks, this model is but mildly bouffant. It seems, if lengthened and fuller skirts are evidence, that extremely modish gowns are growing quieter and quieter still. Some of the debutantes and modern belles took as if they had stepped out from the pages of a long ago style book.

The fact that organdie and tulle and such diaphanous fabrics are so widely exploited adds to the charming quaintness and picturesqueness of current evening modes.

Of course, only the youthful can wear these frocks which accent lengthened skirts and voluminous hemlines. Then, too, it requires a slender figure to be fitted becomingly in the simple bodices with their normal waistlines which top the bouffant skirt. The new organdies are dreams. Their colorings, well—who can describe them? Then, too, their shoulder capes and berthas of the same material require the ingenue type, if they are displayed to advantage. Well, since every woman is youthful these days, the evening picture was never more alluringly presented than it will be during these summertime months.

HOMEMADE CONFECTIONS

Occasionally it happens that a jelly is too stiff or "tough" for the housekeeper to be proud of, for table use. As a confection, cut up in blocks and dipped in the sweet chocolate that comes for the purpose, the unsatisfactory jelly is more than redeemed, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture. Figs, dates, raisins, nuts and marshmallows can also be dipped in chocolate to make wholesome confections for the children. Sweets of this kind are especially good as surprises in the monotonous school lunch box.

have worked for the fire department. "And my speed has helped the firemen get to the fire. But firemen see nothing compared to your work of saving many lives yourself!" "Well, said Danny, "I am glad that I have lived such a long life, for I was able to make others live a much longer life than they would have otherwise."

"But now I am just a wee bit glad to have a holiday—the first in twenty-six years." "So am I," said Mustard, "but we wouldn't have enjoyed this holiday if we hadn't both felt that when we were working we did our work well." "Now the fine horses aren't needed so much. Automobiles have taken their places." "But I lived in the days when fine horses were of some account in this old world."

Tree Planting a Virtue

When a man plants a tree he is displaying confidence in the future that will not fall him; and intelligence, thrift and fairness will bear fruit in the future as certainly and as well as his tree.—E. W. Howe.

Scraps of Humor

SUBTLETY

An Oxford undergraduate, a son of the vicarage, discovered he was uncomfortably short of money, so he spent some time concocting a letter that would have the right effect upon a somewhat severe parent.

When finally completed, the letter read as follows:
"My dear father, I wonder if you will oblige me very greatly by sending me a copy of this month's parish magazine, and a five-pound note; P. S.—Don't forget the parish magazine."

Ancient

Bride—Boo, hoo! Walter doesn't like my cooking.
Her Mother—How do you know?
Bride—He didn't come right out and say so, but he told me he liked fruit cake to be at least six months old—and we've only been married five weeks!

WHAT FLAVOR?

"I shor got in a jam yestiddy, Jim my."
"What kinda jam, Bill?"
"Thiek it was strawberry."

Not Responsible

Husband (anxiously)—My wife seems not to have the slightest interest in life.
Doctor—What makes you think that?
"Well, I've tried her with golf, billiards, football and racing, and it's just like talking to a stone!"

Wonderful

"You know Boothby—great fellow for detail."
"He is, that! He's the sort of chap who would go and get married and be able afterward to tell you whether it was Mendelssohn, Lohengrin or Tannhauser they played during the ceremony."

THE BEST

Slim Kid—Whot d'you like best about school?
Fat Kid—Goin' home from it.

Business View

"You seem to have a good deal of faith in doctors," said Barratt to his invalid friend.
"I have," was the reply. "A doctor would be foolish to let a good customer like me die."

Toleration

Housewife—I should think you would be ashamed to beg in this neighborhood.
"Tramp—Don't apologize for it, ma'am; I've seen worse.—Montreal Star.

Easily Named

Very Friendly Visitor—Did you have any difficulty in choosing a name for baby?
Fond Mother—Not the slightest. You see, dear, we've only one rich relative.

What Does It Matter?

"Did you really understand the learned lecture you heard last night?"
"No, but that didn't matter, I had a free ticket." — Gemütliche Saecula (Leipzig).

All Did It

Magistrate—It seems strange to me that you could keep on robbing that enormous corporation for so long without being caught.
The Prisoner (brightly)—Well, the corporation was pretty busy itself.

Making Them Work

"Scare one for the husbands."
"What row?"
"Some of them are finding their hitherto frivolous wives make very false chauffeurs."

Cute in a Baby—Awful at Three—and it's Dangerous

by Ruth Brittain

Thumb sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen! The habit may cause an ill-formed mouth or induce adenoids; and it always interferes with digestion. Pinning the sleeve over the hand; attaching mittens, or putting on cardboard cuffs, which prevent bending the arms at the elbows, are some of the ways to stop the habit.

Another bad habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies. Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day. If they don't act at first, a little Fletcher's Castoria will soon regulate them. Every mother should keep a bottle of it handy to use in case of colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, loss of sleep, or when baby is cross and feverish. Its gentle influence over baby's system enables him to get full nourishment from his food, helps him gain, strengthens his bowels.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harmless—the recipe is on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 30 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper so you'll get the genuine.

Splendid Results in Good Health Campaign

No diphtheria deaths in 1927 puts Cambridge, Mass., at the head of the list in diphtheria prevention, of all the cities with populations more than 100,000 in the United States. Only once in the last five years, according to the American Medical association, has any city gone a year without a single death from diphtheria. The previous diphtheria record breaker was Duluth, Minn., in 1925. Seven cities with more than 100,000 inhabitants, had no typhoid deaths last year, the medical association's statistics show. New Haven, Conn.; Springfield, Mass.; Yonkers, N. Y.; Paterson, N. J.; Richmond, Va.; Canton, Ohio; Kansas City, Kan., wake up the typhoid honor roll, which is the largest since studies of typhoid death were started in 1913.

Some men never have any respect for gray hairs until they acquire some of their own.

DON'T suffer headaches, or any of those pains that Bayer Aspirin can end in a hurry! Physicians prescribe it, and approve its free use, for it does not affect the heart. Every druggist has it, but don't fail to ask the druggist for Bayer. And don't take any but the box that says Bayer, with the word genuine printed in red!

Varicose Veins Reduced Or Money Back

Simple Home Treatment That Is Giving Amazing Results.

If you have varicose veins or bunches you can start today to bring them back to normal size, and if you are wise you will do so.
Just get an original bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil at any dispensing pharmacist and apply it night and morning to the enlarged veins. It is very powerful and penetrates. After a few days' treatment the veins will begin to grow smaller and by regular use will soon reduce to normal. People who want to reduce varicose veins, or get rid of eczema, ulcers, or piles in a few days should not hesitate to get a bottle at once. It is such a powerful, penetrating, antiseptic oil that a small bottle lasts a long time. Any pharmacy can supply you.

TO MAKE FLUMMERY

Flummery is an old-fashioned dessert made of fruit juice thickened with cornstarch or farina. It is served cold, with plain or whipped cream, and is delicate and wholesome. Raspberries and blackberries and other fruits with seeds which become prominent when the fruit is cooked may be enjoyed in flummery. "Rote grutze," or red grains, is the German name for raspberry flummery. The same general proportions may be used with any berry juice, but the amount of lemon may need to be increased or decreased according to the acidity of the berries.

Raspberry Flummery.

2 cups of raspberry juice from canned or cooked fresh raspberries
1 1/2 cups farina or 1/2 cup sugar (if sweetened)
1/4 tsp salt
2 tsp lemon juice
4 tbs. cornstarch
1/2 cup sugar (if un-sweetened)
1/4 tsp salt
2 tsp lemon juice

Heat the raspberry juice. Mix the sugar and farina or cornstarch and the salt, and add to the raspberry juice. Cook in a double boiler for fifteen or twenty minutes, or until the mixture thickens and the raw, starchy taste disappears.

EFFICIENCY IN HOME ARRANGEMENT

Two-Way or Pass Closet Compactly Arranged With Reference to Dish Washing Closet.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
If you have a two-way dish closet in the connecting wall between the kitchen and dining room, preferably where that partition joins the outside wall of the house, it is possible to place the sink at right angles to this pass closet and continuous with it, along the outer wall, with a window directly above for light and ventilation. This arrangement is especially good when the dining room wall is at the left of the sink, but it can be reversed in homes with the opposite floor plan.
Used dishes and silver are passed through from the dining room directly to the sink. After they have been washed they are put into the closet at once ready to be taken out on the dining room side. Not an unnecessary step is then taken in serving or clearing away meals. It is wise to keep within the compact limits of these centers any small tools used at the sink, and also cooking utensils that are filled with water before they are put on the stove or dining table. The double boilers and stew pans, the coffee percolator, tea kettle and water pitcher have places on the shelves at the side of the sink. Spoons, brushes, scissors and cleaning accessories that can be hung up are just below these shelves. The counter space on a level with the drain-boards should, however, be kept relatively clear both for passing dishes and foods between the dining room and kitchen and for use in spreading out plates to be filled at serving time. The space under the drain-boards is useful for storing cleaning materials or supplies. The drain basket, garbage can, a kitchen waste basket belong in the clearing

Evening Story for Children

By Mary Graham Bonner

"I am twenty-six years old, and for twenty years I have been working with the police force," said Danny, the horse.
"You have!" exclaimed Mustard. "I have been working for almost that length of time with the fire department."
"We will be great friends." And both horses neighed.
"But tell me some more."
"You will have to tell me all about yourself."
"I will," said Mustard, "just as soon as I have heard all about your history."
"I have been given a holiday. They say I mustn't work any more, but not because I feel old or ill or feeble."
"Goodness, no! But they say that I've done a good life's work, and I'm grateful to them for feeding that way about it."
"I haven't had a day's holiday in twenty years, not even the Fourth of July, or Christmas!"

"The same with me," agreed Mustard, "though there were some days when I had part-time holidays, and half-holidays, but it all depended on how much work there was to be done."
"If there was a fire on the Fourth of July, as was quite likely, we naturally didn't take a holiday!"
"Naturally not," agreed Danny.
"Well, please continue," urged Mustard.

"I am to be looked after on this farm, free of charge, in return for the work I've done."
"It's a fine feeling to think one has worked for something; a very fine feeling."
"Just the way I feel about it," said Mustard.
"I have stopped a great many runaways. Oh, what a time I have had with the runaways."
"Some horses would get frightened and there would be no stopping them—at least it would seem that way."
"I have saved a great many children, and women, too, from being killed."
"I don't want to boast about it, but I am so thankful I have done what I could."
"My master told some one that I had saved nine boys and girls in one day, once. And I am so very, very thankful."
"I think boys and girls are so nice!

"I want to save them to enjoy such a nice world. And I am so glad I was given a job where I could help that way."
"School children I used to help especially, for, of course, my work was in the big city and the children had to cross the streets."
"My master taught me to drill to the sound of the bugle. That is very thrilling work.

"We Will Be Great Friends."

"And whenever my master had to speak to anyone I nodded, neighed, or, if they were very great friends of the master, I gave them a kiss!"
"I have done the same sort of work in a way," said Mustard, "because I

Start Shopping for Pilots

Donie Bush.

It is a bit early, but in some spots of the majors there is a tendency to start out shopping for 1929 managers. This tendency is indicated by writers, not the owners, but it so happens that writers frequently know definitely of things they only dare hint at in their writings, hence the present rumblings are worthy of note, writes Irving Vaughan in the Chicago Tribune. They may break out into real noise eventually.

One incumbent whose name already has been mentioned in connection with tinware is Donie Bush, whose rates are not doing so well. Another is Bill McKechnie, who, after falling out at Pittsburgh, fell in at St. Louis. One more is George Moriarty, high priest of the doleful Tigers. And in Chicago you can hear statements to the effect that unless the White Sox perk up considerably there will be some other fellow around to carry the grief now resting on Ray Schalk's shoulders.

Bush has become sort of a back number at Pittsburgh because of his failure to bring the Pirates out of the mist that enveloped them in the world series last fall. Bush has had a staggering string of mistakes to contend with and a portion of his present predicament can be charged to this. But, probably because he has let himself become panic stricken over the unexpected reverses, his team is disorganized and unable to give its best. Rules restricting the liberties of the players almost caused open rebellion.

McKechnie's insecurity is traced to two factors. One is that he is not a natural leader. He is the kind who undo themselves by their fear to appear hard boiled. George Sisler was a managerial flop for this same reason. The other is that McKechnie is employed by a firm that conducts its business in a peculiar fashion. The moves of Breadon and Riekey cannot be explained. As an example, there was that dismissal of Hornsby a few months after he had won a pennant and world's championship title. A year later Bob O'Farrell, who had steered the Cardinals into second place, was handled in a similar manner.

Trousers of Fan Saved by Heavy Hitting Star

To bet one's trousers on a favorite ball player—greater loyalty than that does not exist. Such was the verdict of Dubuque sport fans upon the wager made by Donald Birkett.

Birkett has been an ardent admirer of Jimmy Worth, the crack fielder and most wicked club welder of the Dubuque ball club. When Jimmy cracked them out in great style during a recent series Birkett offered to bet anything he owned that Worth would finish the week with an average of .500.

Harry Voight took up the enterprising better's challenge, and as Birkett had no money, he decided to bet his trousers. So they agreed that if Birkett won Voight was to buy him a new pair; and if lost, Voight was to take his old ones.

Worth was worth it. By the end of the series he was smacking them out at .575. Birkett sports a new pair of trousers; Voight says Donald's old ones won't fit him.

Helen Wins Title

Photograph shows Miss Helen Willis, the American tennis champion, in action at Paris during the final match of the women's hard-court championships in which she defeated Miss Eileen Bennett of England for the title.

Sporting Squibs

Le Touring de Paris, the oldest sports club in France, founded in 1853, plans to celebrate its seventy-fifth anniversary this year and disband.

The late James McLaughlin, one of the greatest jockeys ever produced in America, had the leg up on five winners of the historic Belmont stakes, among the richest events for three-year-olds.

Alderman Louis Rubenstein of Montreal, one-time amateur figure skating champion of the world, never fails to attend a sporting function of importance in Canada no matter where it is held.

E. K. Hall, chairman of the National Football Rules commission, is generally considered the "Landis of football." The yearly changes in rules are directly traceable to his close study of the game.

The new greyhound kennels at Ruislip, England, where best blood dogs will be used for breeding purposes, will have central heating, isolation hospital with lying-in wards and ultra-violet radiation glass and baths.

All noise-producing instruments of every description will be taboo during the Olympic contests. The human voice, reinforced by the clapping of hands and the tramping of feet, will remain as the only means of rooting.

GRID STRATEGISTS' COACHING SCHOOL

Northwestern to Entertain Coaches in August.

Applications have been received from all over the United States from coaches who plan to attend the sessions conducted by the all-star coaching school staff at Northwestern university August 13 to 25.

Coach Dick Hanley, head football mentor at Northwestern, will have charge of the football course and is to be assisted by such nationally famous coaches as Jess Hawley of Dartmouth; Arnold Horween of Harvard; Walter Steffen of Carnegie Tech and Duke Dunne, also of Harvard. These latter experts will deliver supplementary lectures to Coach Hanley's series of talks and field demonstrations.

The above group of grid strategists conducted last year's course which far exceeded the expectations of the coaches in attendance. Mr. Hawley will speak on the forward pass, a phase of football he has perfected to a marked degree. Backfield play will be discussed by Coach Horween while spin plays will be the topic of Coach Steffen's discourse. Duke Dunne, one of the great line coaches of the country, will devote his talk to this feature of the game.

Besides football, courses are also to be given in basket ball, track and athletic administration. Coach Arthur "Dutch" Lonborg, who made his entry into the Big Ten this year as head basket ball coach at Northwestern, will have charge of the basket ball classes. Coach Lonborg wound up his first season in the Western conference with nine victories out of 12 big Ten games. While a student at Kansas university, where he learned the game under Dr. Forrest Allen, he was an all-valley guard for three years.

Coach Frank Hill, head track coach at Northwestern, will have charge of the track course. Coach Hill will attend the Olympic games at Amsterdam and will bring back fresh impressions of the great performances which are certain to be seen at the games.

Kenneth L. "Tug" Wilson, athletic director at Northwestern and a leading figure in middle western athletics, will give his popular course in "Organization and Theory of Athletic Departments." His course proved highly popular last year and many of his students have already signified their intention of continuing it this summer.

Boy, 16, Given Chance With Boston Red Sox

The Boston Red Sox is a young club, but the youngest potential member is Joseph Doherty Cleere, schoolboy shortstop from Atlantic City. He is sixteen—just old enough to keep truant officers away.

The boy is a former member of the Easton (Pa.) team. He is right-handed, batting and throwing, and 5 feet 8 inches tall. He weighs 167 pounds. While President Bob Quinn told Cleere's mother that the boy ought to remain in high school, every encouragement will be given him by Manager Bill Carrigan, now that he has decided to try professional baseball.

Will Increase Seating Capacity of Stadium

The Harvard stadium, the first of America's great stadia, is going to be improved to at least approach in size the modern college athletic amphitheatres erected in its wake.

Its 35,000 seating capacity, dwarfed by comparison with the great structures which have sprung up about the country, the Harvard plant years ago became inadequate.

So the Harvard corporation has authorized tentative plans to increase the permanent seating capacity to 55,000 by closing in the open end of the big horseshoe.

Helping Boy Movement by Admitting Kids Free

President Patrick T. Kelly of the Triple Cities club of the New York-Pennsylvania league announces as part of his program to work with the American league to help the boys' movement, that boys will be admitted free to all ball games played at Johnson's field, the Blinghamton park, the coming season. On June 5 the Triple Cities club will put on a "Legion day," at which Commissioner K. M. Landis of organized baseball, and National Commander Edward E. Spafford of the American Legion, will be guests of honor.

Lesson for July 15

THE CONVERSION OF SAUL

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:1-9, 22:4-16. GOLDEN TEXT—This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Saul Becomes a Christian. JUNIOR TOPIC—Saul Becomes a Christian.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Saul Became a Christian. YOUNG PEOPLE'S AND ADULT TOPIC—The Conversion of a Pharisee.

I. Saul's Violent Hatred of the Lord's Disciples (vv. 1, 2).

Saul knew full well that unless the movement set on foot by Jesus was stopped it would supersede Judaism. He was ignorant of the genius of Christianity. He did not know that the "blood of martyrs is the seed of the church." Prosperity may ruin the church, but persecution, never. The noble display of faith by Stephen in sealing his testimony with his blood did not soften Saul's spirit, but rather intensified his hatred for Jesus and His disciples. The intensity of his madness, and the extent of its operations are best set forth in his own words, "And I persecuted this way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women" (Acts 26:4). "I both shut up many of the saints in prisons, having received authority from the chief priests, and when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them, and punishing them oft in all the synagogues I strove exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto foreign cities" (Acts 26:10-12, R. V.).

II. Saul Kicking Against the Pricks (vv. 3-9).

The figure here is that of the eastern ox driver following the ox with a sharp iron fixed to the end of a pole. The animal is prodded with this instrument and if it is refractory it kicks against the sharp iron and injures itself.

1. A light from Heaven (vv. 3, 4a). The light had come for the Lord to interfere. Saul was stricken with blindness and fell to the earth. This physical demonstration accentuated the workings of his conscience which doubtless were going on quickened by the Holy Spirit as He used Stephen's testimony.

2. A voice from Heaven (vv. 4b, 5). This was the Lord's voice calling Saul by name and asking, "Why persecutest thou me?" This moved Saul to inquire, "Who art thou, Lord?" The answer came, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest."

3. Saul's inquiry (v. 6). "What wilt thou have me to do?" The dictator is now willing to be dictated to. The Lord told him to go into the city where information would be given him as to what he must do.

4. Saul entering Damascus (vv. 7-9). The haughty persecutor went quite humbly into Damascus, led by his attendants. For the space of three days he remained blind, and fasted. What went on in his soul in those days no mortal can know, but we may be assured that he, like the Lord in the wilderness, was too deep in meditation and prayer to desire food. In these days of deep meaning his whole life was being reorganized by Jesus Christ.

III. Ananias Ministers to Saul (vv. 10-19).

1. Ananias' vision (vv. 10-12). In this vision the Lord appeared and instructed him to go to Saul. He gave him the name of the street and Saul's host, and informed him that Saul was now a praying man, and that He had prepared Saul by the vision for the coming of Ananias.

2. Ananias' fear and hesitancy (vv. 13-16). He knew of Saul's ministry and the authority by which he came. The Lord encouraged him to go, assuring him that Saul was no longer an enemy but a chosen vessel to bear His name before the Gentiles.

3. Ananias' obedience (v. 17). His fears being removed, Ananias went to the house where Saul was staying, put his hand on him and affectionately addressed him as "Brother Saul." The hitherto savage persecutor is now a brother in Christ. Ananias informed Saul that the Lord had sent him with a two-fold mission:

(1) "That thou mightest receive thy sight."
(2) "Be filled with the Holy Spirit."
4. Saul baptized (vv. 18, 19). After Saul received his sight Ananias baptized him. Since Ananias was not a church official, it is clearly implied that official rank is not necessary for the administration of baptism. The Lord bestows the gift of the Spirit upon whomsoever He will.

Recalling the Donner Tragedy

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE other day a news picture service issued the photograph shown above and in doing so brought back for a moment from the dim past the memory of one of the most glorious periods in all American history and recalled the story of one of the two outstanding tragedies of those far-away times. In the annals of the historic "Days of '49" there are no more thrilling stories than those of two different groups of homeseekers whose sufferings on the overland trails to California have immortalized the names of the "Donner party" and the "Jayhawkers party."

It is a curious coincidence that both parties originated in the state of Illinois, that both traveled over the famous Oregon trail until they reached the region of the Great Salt Lake in Utah and that both made the tragic mistake of seeking a shorter route to the Promised Land instead of following the route which would have brought them in safety to fortune and happy homes in a new land. But there the coincidence ends except for the fact that both found Death awaiting them along the trail. To the Donner party, which set out from Springfield, Ill., in 1846, Death appeared in the form of starvation and freezing cold in the snows of the high Sierras. To the Jayhawkers party, which left Galesburg, Ill., three years later, in the spring of 1849, and which, seeking to avoid the mistakes of the Donner party, fell into greater tribulation, Death appeared in the form of starvation and thirst and the overpowering heat of that earthly inferno to which they gave the name of Death valley.

The Donner party was one of the hundreds which began to flock to California almost immediately after the war with Mexico. On April 15, 1846, 31 men, women and children who had assembled at Springfield, Ill., for what they thought would be a five-months journey to the Pacific coast, set out for the Golden West. The organizer of the party was James F. Reed, but it took its name from the Donner brothers, George and Jacob, who were neighbors of Reed. Of the 31 in the party, 16 were children, among whom were two little girls, Eliza Donner and Virginia Reed, who later wrote stories of their journey which have become classic accounts of this expedition. Eliza Donner's description of the equipment which her father and uncle provided for the long journey is as vivid a description of the "covered wagon" era in American history as can be found anywhere.

In one wagon were the seed and farming implements for use when they reached California and with these the laces, muslins, satins and velvets to be used in trading for land. In the second were the supplies for the journey, the food, clothing and camp equipment, as well as various brightly-colored garments, beads, necklaces, mirrors and the like, to be used in making friends with the Indians along the route. The third wagon was the family "home on wheels" and it, as well as each of the other two was drawn by three yoke of oxen.

For several weeks the journey was uneventful. On May 19, the Donner party fell in with another emigrant train, commanded by Edwin Bryant, consisting of 98 fighting men, 50 women, 40 wagons and 350 cattle. The addition of the Donner party to this caravan made it so large that it was divided into two parts for convenience in traveling and an organization with the proper officers to direct its affairs was formed. By the middle of June the emigrant train was making its way through Nebraska and nearing Fort Laramie, which they reached safely and stopped to repair their wagons.

Although several of the party (mainly the older ones) died and were buried along the trail, the party reached Fort Bridger without undue disaster. Then when it was near the Great Salt Lake the emigrant train divided, the larger portion deciding to keep to the old road to California while the Donners, Reeds and many others, 87 in all, made the fatal decision to attempt what was called the Hastings Cut-off, which passed along the southern edge of the lake and was said to shorten the route to California by 200 miles before it rejoined the Fort Hall emigrant road on the Humboldt river in Nevada.

The Donner party soon found that it had made a mistake, for the emigrants were seven days in reaching Weber canyon and then found that they must make their own trail by cutting their way through heavy underbrush and making a road as they went. While they were struggling through the Hastings Cut-off they were joined by the Graves party, another Illinois group which had set out from their homes near what is now Lacon, Ill., at about the same time as the Donner party had started. The Graves party consisted of W. F. Graves, his wife and eight children, his son-in-law, Jay Fosdick, and a young man named John Snyder, and they were to play a prominent part in the tragedy that was so soon to follow. No less dramatic than the stories of Eliza Donner and Virginia Reed is the account of the Donner tragedy as given from the viewpoint of the Graves family and recorded in an old book "Records of the Olden Time, or Fifty Years on the Prairies" by Spencer Ellsworth and printed in Lacon, Ill., in 1889.

After making their way at last through Weber canyon, the combined party found itself facing a desert. They had been told it was only 40 miles wide and they took what they thought was an ample supply of water. But the desert proved to be more than twice that distance across and for two nights and a day they struggled across the drear, alkali waste, suffering from heat and thirst by day and from cold at night. When the third day came and the maddening desert still stretched before them, only the party went ahead in search of water, leaving instructions for the drivers to unhitch their oxen and follow if the cattle began to give out. All of the wagons except one, had Starvation and the cold had exacted a fearful toll. Forty-two of the 83 members of the party who had been overtaken by winter in that terrible camp had perished. Only 18 of the original party of 31 which had left Springfield ever reached California. Descendants of some of the survivors still live in California and in 1918 had a part in dedicating a monument on the spot near Donner lake where many of the party perished. It is a monument to the dauntless pioneer spirit which carried the survivors of the historic Donner party through horrors and privations such as few human beings have experienced to deathless fame.

The associate editor of the Architectural Record says that the average skyscraper is estimated to continue in existence from 25 to 30 years. ### Fine Engineering Feat

Engineers developing a hydroelectric power plant near Sao Paulo, Brazil, caught a couple of rivers which had the habit of flowing westward, reformed them to flow east and then to be abandoned and eventually the party emerged from the desert and approached the mountains. Then it was discovered that their food supplies were running low and California was still hundreds of miles away. By this time, too, dissension had arisen in the party and a dispute between Reed and Snyder resulted in the killing of the latter. When they finally reached the mountains it was to find that the many delays had brought them even greater dangers. For the early snows had begun to fall on the Sierras and crossing the mountains would be impossible. So with heavy hearts they turned back to a cabin on the shores of a lake, since known as Donner lake, which had been built by a party of emigrants two years earlier, built more cabins and prepared as best they could for the winter.

A series of storms piled up the snow until it was 14 feet deep. The food supplies were almost exhausted and when the last of the cattle had been killed and eaten the emigrants were reduced to eating the hides, which when boiled, were little more than masses of glue. Several attempts were made to push across the mountains and seek relief in the California settlements on the other side, but all, except one, failed. A "forlorn hope" expedition, of ten men and five women set out and although eight of the men perished on the way, the survivors finally reached Sutter's fort.

A relief party was immediately sent out by Captain Sutter which caught a supply of food along the way and arrived with only a small amount of provisions which were doled out to the famishing members of the party. On February 22 a party of 23 started out to cross the mountains and after struggling through the snow found that wild animals had destroyed the cache of food. Fortunately, another relief party from Sutter's fort reached them in time to save them from starvation.

In the meantime scenes of almost indescribable horror were taking place among those who had remained at Donner lake. Faced by the alternative of starving to death or resorting to cannibalism the wretched survivors chose the latter and it is in the account of the Graves family, as written by Ellsworth, that the harrowing details of what took place then are revealed. More relief parties eventually arrived and by degrees the remnants of the party made their way over the snows of the mountains down into the valley of the Sacramento and to Sutter's fort.

Starvation and the cold had exacted a fearful toll. Forty-two of the 83 members of the party who had been overtaken by winter in that terrible camp had perished. Only 18 of the original party of 31 which had left Springfield ever reached California. Descendants of some of the survivors still live in California and in 1918 had a part in dedicating a monument on the spot near Donner lake where many of the party perished. SYNOPSIS

On a certain Monday morning Miss Constance Fuller, seller of rare books at Darrow's Bookshop, New York, notices that the first customer is a dignified old gentleman, who saunters into the alcove placarded "Medical Works." Peter Burton, one of the employees, amazes Constance by telling her he paid $510 at auction for an old law book containing a Colfax bookplate. Suddenly a girl's shriek of "Murder!" rings out. The elderly customer is on the floor unconscious, with his right wrist slashed. Just before the shrieking girl falls in a faint, she calls out to Peter: "Keep it! Keep it for me!" Peter's sister, Nancy, began that morning working at Darrow's. Nancy tells Constance of her elopement with Brandon Tower, an elopement which was cut short when Tower attempted to make off with Nancy's suitcase. Constance explains Darrow's card-index system to Captain Ashland, a nephew of Mr. Darrow's. They examine the book Peter paid $510 for and find the bookplate to be a forgery. Constance is asked to assist Detective Almy in his investigation of the murder of the elderly gentleman. The girl who fainted, Julia Grosvenor, turns out to be his granddaughter. She can throw no light on the mystery. Constance calls on Julia, who seems relieved when told her cry, "Keep it for me!" was not unheeded. Darrow orders Constance to remove the bookplate from the book.

In emulation of her cheerful industry, the water in the little aluminum pot began to bubble merrily, and three minutes later—the correct time, I believe, for tea to draw—Captain Ashland was drinking the brew which, with the crown, unites the British empire. The two other gentlemen did not have to be coaxed long to join him, so my judgment in laying in plenty of tea proved correct. The captain sat happily in a big oak armchair, Mr. Roberts accommodated his length of limb to the radiator, and Mr. Case leaned gracefully on a filing cabinet, all chatting easily of this and that, while the rain descended and the wind blew, and Nancy contributed a one-act educational sketch, cabaret-fashion, with a partner in the person of a messenger boy who came in with a package for Darrell's on Fifth avenue.

"Isn't this ripping!" cried the captain, radiantly. "Of course I know it's not manners to ask, but mayn't I have another cup?"

As he leaned forward to pass his teneup, his glance fell casually on the worn calfskin binding of Clarhew's "Notes," still on top of the desk. He poked the book up deliberately, opened the cover, and again gazed with interest at the laboratory interior giving on the distant sea.

"Fancy Miss Fuller thinks I'm never happy unless I'm stopping some one else's work and doing none myself," he observed. "This time she was all ready to soak off this bookplate, when I did what you call horned in, and asked for another American tea-party!"

Mr. Case smiled politely. "Yes, we're to sell the book and bookplate separately, I hear."

"One often does better that way," observed Captain Ashland. "I don't know about prices here. I understand the book was expensive—five hundred and ten dollars, wasn't it? What would this curious bookplate likely fetch?"

Horror and amazement filled my soul and that of Mr. Roberts, whose glance intercepted mine as the captain thus calmly added, to the list of disasters he had witnessed at Darrow's in less than four days, the fact that he was informed of the worst fluke in buying that had befallen the house for years. Who had told him? Not I, nor Mr. Roberts, not Peter, assuredly; yet all of us might have, sooner than the uncle who so desired, for some mysterious reason, to impress him favorably. Mr. Case was equal to the situation, however, choosing, as he did, to answer the first of the two questions.

"I hadn't heard what was paid for the book," he said.

"I'm especially interested in this bookplate," went on the captain, finally accepting his teneup, "because when I saw it here at Miss Fuller's desk the other day, when I was studying your index, I noted directly how closely it resembled the work of one of our most famous engravers, Hugh Colfax, though it was, unmistakably, a counterfeit."

"How did you observe that?" inquired Mr. Roberts. "Yes, I will take another cup, if you please, Miss Fuller. And may I look at the print, captain, if you have finished with it?"

"But it's not a print, you see," said the captain, passing over the book "It's really a drawing, an awfully clever imitation of a fine line engraving. I'm hardly ashamed to say I didn't detect the forgery until I had looked at the plate hard. Many a collector has been fooled by imitations inferior to this one! Still, there are suspicious things about it: for instance, the paper Colfax always favored a peculiar shade of brown."

"This is brown," said Mr. Roberts. "Yellow-brown," corrected Captain Ashland, "and no doubt the best that could be got; but Colfax used a special buff-tinted paper which he colored himself by some secret process—probably involving walnut-juice—which, however, died with him. He was a great artist, full of whims. I've seen many of his prints, all done on that shade of paper, and, of course, on a paper a century or more old, made of linen rags. This is of modern manufacture, made of wood fiber."

"Colfax died about eighteen-thirty, didn't he?" I inquired.

"Yes; he was about seventy-five, I believe. The arithmetic gave me another reason for doubting the authenticity of this drawing," said the captain, looking whimsical. "Colfax, you see, was a patriot first and an artist afterward—"

I laughed and helped him out: "He never would accept orders from Americans because he absolutely opposed the Revolution. And as it seems likely that this old American law book must have been the property of an American, it doesn't seem likely that the plate would have been designed by Colfax."

"Especially," added the captain, "as the design is pictorial. As was natural enough in a man with Colfax's royalist sympathies and aristocratic clientele, he almost always made heraldic designs for bookplates—that is, designs showing the family coat of arms. Only something out of the common would have led him to make a pictorial plate, if he ever did."

"May I have a look at it now?" asked Mr. Case, as Mr. Roberts closed the book to drink his nonsensical tea. "Rather an imaginative picture, isn't it?"

"All except the immediate foreground," agreed Captain Ashland. "That table covered with old instruments—I don't recognize many of them—looks very realistic, and the alchemic and skull are conventional owners' symbols used on many a doctor's bookplate. What the rest of the picture signifies, one could hardly tell without knowing something about the owner."

"The ship looks realistic, to me," observed Mr. Roberts, absolutely unable to refrain from differing with some one any longer. "Maybe the owner was a sailor. And what about those good strong pillars? Maybe he was an ex-sea-captain. They always build a good substantial house some where, to retire to."

"Such classic columns," said I instructively, for I couldn't let Mr. Roberts contradict and not do so myself. "are often used as a purely conventional frame for a bookplate picture."

Mr. Case nodded approvingly, but the captain, intent on making another point, noticed one of us. He said: "And there's an unmistakable giveaway in the signature; did you notice it, Miss Fuller?"

"Yes," I assented; "the 'circled serpent,' as it's called, is quite wrong."

"Yes, his tail is in his mouth, as it should be, but the mouth is open not closed. It's a very strange error

"What Would This Curious Bookplate Likely Fetch?"

In detail, for the general execution of that drawing shows a marvelous grasp of Colfax's characteristic method—bold, a few fine lines of shading, wonderful clearness in the smallest details. It's just the difference between the master and the imitator."

"Another instance where a closed mouth would have been the part of wisdom!" suggested Mr. Case, lightly. He closed the book and put it into my hand, and as I laid it on the desk, Nancy's cheerful chatter ceased. She looked at me expectantly; I saw she had finished all the work assigned her, and was looking for more.

I was just about to give her some directions when she stepped up quly and pointed to a pile of books in front of me.

"Shall I take those now?" she asked. "Yes, please," I said, "and then place them all on the wagon to be returned to the shelves."

She avidly swooped up everything in sight; yes, thanks to her industry, Clarhew's "Notes" would be listed, after all! Her enthusiasm for work seemed contagious. The tempo was now drained, and Captain Ashland moved that the session should adjourn with a rising vote of thanks, and inquired eagerly, as he took his leave, if I did not really think we really ought to have tea every day.

CHAPTER VII

Night Watch.

"Tell me, shall you be able to sell the book and the bookplate separately for five hundred and ten dollars together?" demanded Nancy.

I had to wait one whole second before deciding what to say, and it took her far less than that to transfer herself to the large oak chair just vacated by the captain, and a thick pile of papers to my desk. "Please look at my work and tell me if it is right, so I can go on," she requested. "And what about the five hundred and ten dollars?"

"If you want to get on at all, you will have to occupy yourself with what concerns you," I said.

"Wait a minute! There's more about the book. Just now Wilkey nearly died, after I said I'd do what she told me!"

"You haven't mentioned that occasion."

"And hour ago she asked me to help you, though it would be an ordeal, especially since I was inexperienced. I said I was here to learn; besides, all my letters were finished, though the other girls weren't. Then she asked me, very sweetly, to inquire of Mr. Case, who was always so nice, whether there had been any offer yet for that old law book she had sent down to you by me on Monday afternoon. She said her cousin, Magistrate Judges, would give a hundred dollars for it if that would be enough."

"And you have not asked Mr. Case! Nancy, it's vulgar to wink."

"And I am really most refined, as anybody can see. When have I had a chance to ask Mr. Case anything? I had only time to stop in the stockroom and look at their telephone directory while I was telling Dennis to go up and say I found my typewriter would be required, after all; and there really is a Magistrate Judges. And now it's no use asking Mr. Case. Miss Wilkey will just have to accept the fact that the book's going into the catalogue. Listen, Constance: where do you keep it?"

"Why do you want to know?"

"I'm worried about it, on Peter's account. I want it to be safe. Maybe with a fake bookplate, he'll be in a worse hole than ever. Perhaps if you have it right by you, you might have a chance to make somebody buy it for more than Magistrate Judges would offer."

I felt touched.

"Nancy, dear," I promised, "I'm going to write the most alluring possible advertisement of that volume, and also of the bookplate. No Judges shall by his marauding fingers upon it until the world is apprised of all its charms; and until Judges or some similar Juggins with money to waste comes along, it shall remain here in the lowest left-hand drawer of my desk."

Nancy went back to work, satisfied; we labored steadily through the chorus of "Good nights" from the evening exodus. Only for Peter did I stop one moment.

"I'm going up tonight to a place called Raynes Forester to buy a lot of horrible old trash," he informed me discreetly, viewing Nancy's back. "Kid's doing better, eh?"

"She's a great worker," I compromised.

I looked at Peter's downcast face, and a thought that had occurred to me over the steaming kettle reverted. I felt convinced that he was carrying some heavy secret burden relating to Julia Grosvenor. I had never forgotten that state of frantic alarm which had seized him on the threshold of Mr. Case's office last Monday, though ever since his manner had been so calm as to be almost unnatural, particularly when he and I had been talking to Mr. Almy. If I could have only told him of my visit to Julia, of her recognition of him in the shop, her relief on hearing that he had denied all understanding of her exclamation! But knowing that that visit was confidential, I merely said:

"Buck up, Peter! It's up to you to come back from Raynes—whatever it is—with your shield or on it. Others can be relied on to keep the home fires burning."

Peter looked grateful, but said nothing, for at that instant Nancy swung round and saw him. He put man's first question to woman.

"When are you going home?" he inquired sternly.

"At six o'clock," said Nancy, sweetly, viewing him with calm appraisal. "Constance, come and have dinner with us."

"No, thank you—thank you both very kindly," I repeated as Peter urged the invitation on me brightly. "If you won't come to dinner tonight, you must come and stay with me all night tomorrow," declared Nancy, tenacious as usual of her wishes, "or I'll be all alone."

"That's a fine idea!" exclaimed Peter. "Yes; it was mine," said his sister. "Will you come, Constance?"

"I shall be delighted, my dear, to help the eight other occupants of the house bear you company."

"One for you, Nancy!" cried Peter. "Well, Constance, good-by till Saturday, at the latest. I'm off for Plymouth Rock and way stations!"

Nancy and I worked alone in the silent shop without further interruption. The silence of the big building was restful and unbroken, save by a distant, infrequent rumble of late traffic. Not until I had nearly finished dinner, sent in to me, did I hear a single sound in the shop. Then, an expected, far back I heard a faint movement.

It was repeated. It came again, pattering footsteps sounded on the left hand aisle. Next minute a dim figure materialized in the dusk as I turned, and to my relief ever more than my surprise, I recognized Mr. Case just as he started back in amazement, close at my left.

"Why, I thought you'd gone to dinner," I said matter-of-factly.

"I thought you had," he countered. "Everybody else has who's going to work tonight. I was just doing some of my work now, because I like a late dinner hour. The rain has nearly stopped. Why don't you go out and get something better to eat?"

In uptown New York there is a negro church in which attending services is an all-day affair on Sundays. The congregation spends from eight to ten hours in the house of prayer, and meals and social circles interlard sermons and Bible classes.

Perhaps the most practical feature of the weekly gathering has to do with business. Members of the flock are invited to pass along their special wants to the pastor and he in turn proclaims them from the pulpit. Thus, if one has a piano or a parlor set for sale it may be described as alluringly as desired, the price mentioned and the name and address of the "brother" or "sister" broadcast. If one wants a job or a boarder the details are set forth in the same manner. Recently a case of theft was handled as follows:

"Mah dear brothers an' sisters, Miss Amanda Rose Abernathy has lost her beautiful pearl brooch—at least she knows to think it were lost, but she knows the devil often find things for folks what ain't lost—so if any of you have found it, in such eventuality please return it to the lawful owner thereof. Shepherding is becoming a science in France. A school of shepherding is operating at Rambouillet. The school is a government institution, fostered by the ministry of agriculture. It teaches many things that the shepherds with their crooks, painted by artists and described by poets, never bothered about. There are no plectresque costumes. Students are not judged by their ability to sing or pose. They have to study the work of shepherding with a view to making a profit on sheep. About all the romance left in the profession is the sheep dog.

The house shown here is an outstanding example of the utmost utilization of space and may serve as a model even for those who prefer to make their own plans. At the same time nothing has been sacrificed of attractiveness nor comfort in attaining this high degree of compactness.

The exterior possesses simplicity, which is in exceedingly good taste for and is still more by the beautiful treatment of plants and shrubbery. The front entrance of this house opens directly into the living room, at opposite ends of which are a fireplace and a sun room. The stairway also ascends directly from the living room to the second floor. There is an arched doorway between the living room and dining room, and from the latter one passes on to a kitchen of the compact modern type. The service entrance is at the side and is reached from the kitchen through an entry and down three steps. From the service entrance a stair descends to the basement.

Above stairs there are three rooms and bathroom. On the plans, two of these rooms are indicated as bedrooms, while the third is marked playroom. This is done with the idea of providing for a family which requires but two bedrooms, but finds convenience in a room where the children may play as they please without disturbing the rest of the family by their noise. The room could just as well be used as a third bedroom, as a sewing room or for any other purpose for which it might be most useful. All of the upstairs rooms have good-sized closets and there is also a linen closet in the hall at the head of the stairs.

Cubic Foot Price Has Undergone Many Changes

Cubic-foot prices by which architects, appraisers, bankers, builders, estimators, fire insurance adjusters and others calculate building construction and replacement costs, rest this year on somewhat different fundamentals than did those of even six months ago.

At that time a new scale of wages had become generally operative. Building material supply was about equal to demand. Prospective construction work was offered when contractors were exceedingly busy and estimating pencils were not sharpened to the fineness with which they are now.

Instead of those price-making influences, there are today such things as the "temperament of money," importation of European-made materials, the economic benefits beginning to be generally felt from the spreading of building work over all four seasons, contractor competition and the introduction into buildings designed to cater to liberal rent-payers of innovations in appliances and equipment that have been removed from the luxury classification to that of necessities.

For example, they are beginning to install automatic elevators in four and five-story apartment houses in the suburbs that, under previous calculations, were priced as "walkups," on the ground that these buildings will keep fully rented easier than the "stair-climbers."

Cubic-foot prices of today show, perhaps better than any other way, the cost position of building construction in general because they are computed by the highest rated and most experienced builders, as well as by those of recent entry into the low-priced speculative housing field competition.

They show, for one thing at any rate, that a building price turn is taking place, after being long overdue.

The more experience we have in the building business the greater seem to be the surprises as to costs of building from present-day architects' plans and specifications.

Doors Hold Charm

Doors of a house may be the deciding factor that determines whether it shall offer charm or an intangible disappointment. Doors can be attractive and decorative pieces of woodwork.

Roof Leaks Often Baffle Best Workmen

A leak once started will often baffle the best of repair men. It keeps getting worse. By and by a large area has to be stripped and reshingled to prevent the leakage that in itself may not cover one square foot. Stopping one leak counts for little, as new ones start operations without warning. Cheap shingles are expensive.

Heating Equipment

Heat equipment provides a means of increasing the value of the house and every builder should have complete information at hand.

Adequate Home Wiring Is Urged as Economy

The comfort and satisfaction derived from a home is measured by convenience. In a modern home convenience is, to a great extent, a matter of electrical service, and the effectiveness of this service depends on the completeness of the wiring system. Complete wiring is neither complicated nor expensive.

If you are going to build a new home you plan your heating and plumbing systems as units and you make sure that they will be complete. At the same time, you should plan to install a complete electrical system, when it can be done most economically.

A complete wiring system should provide adequate outlets, conveniently controlled, using the best materials throughout and include the following nine essential elements:

1. A safety entrance switch (where the current enters the house).
2. A safety distribution panel (where the fuses are).
3. A bell-ringing transformer.
4. Code wire.
5. Metal-covered conductors.
6. Metal boxes for light, switch and convenience outlets.
7. A rumber-switch at every doorway.
8. A minimum of one light outlet for every fifty square feet of floor space.
9. A minimum of one convenience outlet for every fifty square feet of floor space.

Stairs Squeak? Some Ways to Stop Noises

Squeaking stairs—and is there anything harder to endure—can be avoided by using well-seasoned wood, by making sure that the underpinning is secure and that the walls adjacent to the stairs are substantially constructed, and by wedging the treads and risers.

Family staircase construction does not usually show up until a stairway has been in use, and then it is too late to do anything in the way of stiffening the stair members unless one tears away plaster, lath and finish.
