GOES TO PHOENIX

Tory Ramsey, of Elgin went to the state capitol last Monday to attend the meeting of the state highway commission, relative to the discontinuing of the maintenance crew on the Vall-Sonoita Road. He had the petition signed by the people of the Elgin district 100 per cent.

NEW COMPETITION IN COPPER

The London correspondent of the Barron's Financial Weekly discusses the "immensity, richness, and great number of copper-ore deposits in Northern Rhodesia." Though "only a small portion of the district has been tested, it is already apparent that at least eight new companies are assured." Roan Antelope alone has several hundred million tons of ore. The ore in many districts is of exceptionally high copper content, and "there is every evidence that the Northern Rhodesia copper region contains by far the richest of the very big ore deposits ever discovered."

Our State

By Juliet Day, In Arizona Highways

Among Arizona's most valuable natural resources is its timber. The state boasts of the longest unbroken pine forest in the United States, located largely in National forests and invaluable as recreational areas as well as economic assets.

Centers for the timber industry are in the northern and northeastern part of the state, around Williams, Flagstaff and McNary. About 2,500 men are employed in this thriving industry, which in 1928 had a value of around $5,000,000 for 175,000,000 board feet of lumber produced.

It is interesting to note that large conservation programs have been necessary to keep up with the rapid development of Arizona's natural resources. It is estimated that within the last five years something like $75,000,000 has been expended in this state on the various irrigation, reforestation, and other conservation projects.

The annual spend for a new and grand building is nearly equal. During the past two years $12,000,000 has been put into hotel construction alone in an effort to handle the enormous tourist trade that has developed with the growing popularity of Arizona as a playground.

Millions of dollars are being spent in the creation of state parks and great reserves around the state's great recreational areas where the spirit of the "wide open spaces" abides and where the glorious sun and sunshine are occupying the caverns, hillsides and weary denizens of skyscrapers.

So great is Arizona's popularity because that tourist trade is one of the state's leading industries. Last year, motorists passing through this state some $25,000,000 in Arizona, which once coming by train spent many millions more.

As to what attracts these visitors to Arizona scenery, it is so diversified and so unique. Now the through lands covered with cactus and mesquite-jug hills in every direction, now a white, snow through deep canyons of marble and granite, around about prehistoric, and up into the pines where every trout stream calls the fishermen, and where bear and lynx are being hunted through leading hunting camps and drop into dramatic valleys, wooded with orange blossoms, or some of the pine trees.

From Phoenix as a central point, roads lead to every direction where a few hours drive will reveal all the startling beauties of Arizona's ever changing panorama. Available south to the Grand Canyon, north to the Grand Staircase, east to the Grand Canyon, and west to the Grand Canyon.

Another famous road is the Grand Canyon. It is a great natural wonder, and a great natural wonder. It is a great natural wonder, and a great natural wonder.

We have received from congress an envelope and on it we noticed the letters M. C. after the congressmen's name. We suppose M. C. means "mimicking catnip" Pardon our ignorance but we have only contempt for the aping congressman who had that printed on the franked envelopes of congressman. We thought congress was made up of able men, but that M.C. on their envelopes, makes us believe that their long winded congressional mouthings are the vaporings of empty heads. If the title "congressman" in the greatest country in the world, isn't enough to tickle their vanity, they ought to go to the country were they give titles like M. P.

OF INTEREST TO CATTLEMEN Daily Silver Belt

The supreme court of Arizona has handed down a decision to cattlemen, and banks that deal in cattle paper. It upheld the decision of Judge Albert H. Sames of Cochise county in the case of the J. A. Hagan vs. William Cowan, involving a mortgage on cattle for $72,000.

The defendant claimed that the mortgage which was secured by certain cattle branded Late "and their increase" did not apply to the "increase of the increase."

The appellant, Hagan, contended that the term "and their increase" covered "the increase of the increase" of the cattle indefinitely for any number of years so long as the mortgage remains in effect.

The Supreme Court upheld the claim of the plaintiff.

The decision means that the lenders of money on "cattle paper" will have much better security for their loans in the future, and may tend to make that class of investment more popular with the banks and money lenders.

A TIP TO MR. VOLSTEAD Brant Reid

I do not drink tequila, as a general thing; nor hounding whisky, either, for that matter. It has always seemed to me that death comes soon enough without artificially urging it on.

But sometime ago I was guest at a wedding in Sinaloa, and respect for social and national customs compelled me to override my natural caution. At a wedding dinner a glass of tequila and a glass of scotch whisky stood beside each plate. When the toast to the bride and groom was proposed, I raised my glass of tequila with the rest and took a drink.

It was my first taste of tequila, and the result was somewhat startling. But under the circumstances there really was nothing to do but swallow it. My epiglottis recoiled in horror, and two or three moments passed before it recovered enough to begin directing traffic again properly in my throat.

It occurred to me after a time, that perhaps a drink of the Scotch might wash away the taste. I tried that. But after reflecting upon this new outcome I decided to try the tequila again to see if it wouldn't wash away the flavor of the Scotch.

I kept on that way, playing one against the other. Each time I took a drink of either, it accentuated the vileness of both. Until, by the time I had finished, there was a smirch in my mouth that six weeks of virtuous living have not eradicated.

To prohibitionists, and others, who really wish to put a stop to drinking in this country, my recent experience on a national scale, is recommended.

PROTECT THE DESERT FLORA (Tucson Citizen)

A law having been passed protecting the destruction of the desert flora, it may now be necessary to appoint a "commission on law enforcement and observance" for there are reports that the law is not being observed as it should be. Moting parties are the worst offenders, and the Tucson Motor Trades Association and the various service stations could do a valuable public service by interesting themselves in securing better observance of the law. Those who thoughtlessly violate the new law would no doubt appreciate a warning notice in the form of posters prominently placed at service stations. Human nature is acquisitive and it is natural to desire to possess beautiful specimens of desert flowers, but such a reminder would be effective in many cases by calling the attention of the thoughtful motorist to the danger of deflowering the desert of its redeeming beauties.

WANT A MINE?

The Santa Cruz Batholith of Arizona contains a mine for every purpose, and for every purse. There must be those who would buy a mine if they knew where they could get one. Are you one of those? If so write me specifying the price, terms and other conditions you prefer and learn how near I can come to fitting you out! Anything from a single claim to a big consolidation that would run into figures. Batholithic characteristics are: wide veins, continuous veins, big lodes that run into vast tonnage below, bellies of rich ore, and here, fine tunnel sites with depths of 1200 feet up. My immediate neighborhood has shipped $2,000,000, this county about $25,000,000 while within about fifty miles from my house the production has been more than a billion dollars. The richest mineral land in the world.

THE TRAIL OF '98

BY ROBERT W. SERVICE

THE hardships, the perils, the romance of the Klondike trail are told by one who traveled it. The poet has turned novelist and gives us a love story in which tender romance vies with rough adventure, humor and thrills. The grim humor and excitement of "The Cremation of Sam McKee" and "The Shooting of Dan McGrew" are paralleled in almost every chapter.

MINE FOR SALE
Word is being spread around, that this country is so prosperous that it does not know what to do with its money. It has also been rumored that there are brave men who want very encouraging, and this ad is written in the hope that they are true.

As any old timer in this country can tell you, I have been developing a group of claims and am still at it but the developing of the best mine in the world takes money, and it seems to me that the better the mine the more money it takes to get it to the producing stage. Probably every resident of this country knows that the government requires work on or for every claim, and this results in a great deal of work being scattered around where it counts but slowly toward the betterment of the mine.

In order to cut down my annual expenditure, which is fixed by law at $100 a claim, and if possible to get a few dollars to spend on the rest, I will sell to an operator a group at either end of my ground. You can understand why I do not want to sell out a claim or two in the middle of the group, but in view of my needs you may be sure that you will get a wonderful bargain in anything that you buy from me NOW. It costs money to run this ad, and I will appreciate it if any person who wants to buy a mine will be frank about what he wants. It is too to say which of my claims is the best, and any one of them might turn out bonanza; personally I believe they will. You can have one claim or two, and if that is not enough, I add any number desired although I would rather sell a small group and keep the rest. But if you have not enough claims to satisfy an operator I have arrangements already made by which I can turn in for a big operation, my neighbors claims with mine. It would pay some one to buy them all for BIG BUSINESS, but they have not waked up.

These claims all have ore; the ore always carries silver, and a little gold; they will get pay for lead, and less copper. The idea of the authorities is that the lead while good near the surface, will get less while the copper gets more with depth. Shipments have been made from any group I have to sell, and these run from 12 to 250 ounces of silver, from 5 to 60 percent lead and from 2 to 20 percent copper. And there is plenty more of it. I may add for your information, that I have about 200,000 tons of ore in sight on my whole group, that will average about $12.00 per ton, and my earnest ambition is to add to that until some capitalist wakes up. Don't be deceived by cowboy talk; most of them pose in their idle moments as mining "experts," but the really do not know what they are talking about. This country is full of good mines in and adjoining the Santa Cruz Mountains, and it won't be long 'till the world knows it.

Come and see me if you want to mine with success.

SPRING HOUSECLEANING

After a winter of chills, anti-freeze mixture, and snow with its accompanying hardships to engine, batteries, tires, body-bolts and steering gear, not to mention the fan belt, and ignition system generally, the car needs overhauling. Most service stations offer a spring overhauling at a nominal lumped cost, but if not it behooves the careful driver to check up on the general conditions of his car. Here are a few items which need attention at this time.

The wheels should all be taken off, cotter pins replaced, valves inspected, tires switched to gain uniform wear and alignment cared for. The radiator should be drained and flushed several times and filled with fresh water. The fan belt should be tightened and the water pump oiled and watched for loose connections. Rotten or badly attached hose often causes leaks. Brakes should be inspected and additional mixture put in hydraulic brakes if necessary. Goose necks and steering knuckle should be oiled thoroughly.

Loose body bolts should be tightened and a thorough oiling given to all parts of the car. See that the rear end and transmission are thoroughly oiled.

Inspection should be made of spark plugs and the engine tested for unusual carbon deposit, possible installation of new rings or dirty ignition units. Have the mechanic blow the gas line clear and see that the gas tank and line to the vacuum tank are free from dirt. Care with an oil cleaning system should have a new cartridge installed in the oil filter.

The inside of the car should be gone over with a good cleaner, new slip covers bought, if wanted, and all buttons on top and side curtains replaced if missing.

Don't forget your windshield wiper. See that the little rubber connections are in good condition. Danger with a capital "D" comes to him during a spring thunderstorm on a dark night.

WHERE, in the name of the people of the United States, the following resolutions are passed: That the people of the United States do hereby proclaim liberty throughout all the land to all inhabitants thereof...

July 4, 1776

The above is a reproduction of a souvenir of the Centennial exposition held in Philadelphia in 1876. It shows the Declaration of Independence in the form of the Liberty Bell. It was handset in the smallest pearl size type, from which an electrotpe was made in the type foundry of MacKellar, Smith and Jordan in Philadelphia.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

SK the average American what took place on July 4, 1776, and he will probably reply in some such words as these: "Why, the Declaration of Independence, which made us free from England was written by Thomas Jefferson and signed by John Hancock, George Washington, and some others. Then in celebration of the event they rang the Liberty bell until it cracked wide open."

In contrast to this misinformation, consider these simple chronological facts in regard to the making of the Declaration of Independence and Proclaiming of Liberty:

On June 7, 1776, Richard Henry Lee, delegate to the Second Continental Congress from Virginia, acting under his instructions from that colony, presented a resolution declaring that "these United Colonies are, and of right ought to be, free and independent states."

On July 2, 1776, Lee's resolution was put to a vote and approved by the delegates of twelve of the colonies. The only dissenting voice was that of the New York delegation. The Declaration was signed by Thomas Jefferson and offered to congress, sitting as a committee of the whole, for revision before its adoption.

On July 4, 1776, the Declaration of Independence, as revised, was adopted by the delegates from the colonies with the exception of the New York representatives. The men who had voted for the Declaration of Independence realized that it would be nothing more than a scrap of paper unless it received popular support and received it immediately.

commanding officers of the Continental troops; That it be proclaimed in each of the United States and at the head of the Army."

It was late in the afternoon of Thursday, July 4, when this action was taken, so the committee, composed of Thomas Jefferson, John Adams and Benjamin Franklin immediately hastened from the state house on Chestnut street, in Philadelphia, to a little building on High street, where Dunlap and Claypoole conducted a print shop.

On July 5, 1776, when congress met again, a supply of these printed copies of the Declaration were on hand, and one of them was "wafered" in the blank space left for it in the rough "Journal of Congress" before the reading of the minutes of the preceding day took place.

On July 8, the Declaration of Independence was first proclaimed to the citizens of the United States from the balcony of an observatory attached to the building in the state house yard which occupied the site of what is now the home of the American Philsophical society. The man who read it to the assembled people was Col. John Nixon, formerly an aide-man in Philadelphia and commander of a regiment in the Continental army at the battle of Long Island and at Valley Forge. He acted for the sheriff who would by right have read it.

The reading of the Declaration was received with much enthusiasm by the Philadelphians. It is true that the Liberty bell in the state house steeple (that bell whose makers had placed upon it the prophetic inscription "Proclaim Liberty throughout all the Land unto all the inhabitants thereof") when it had been cast some twenty-three years before, was rung at this time—to call the Philadelphians together for the reading of the Declaration and to celebrate the occasion after they had received the news.

Although the first official proclamation of the Declaration of Independence took place on July 8, in Independence Square, this was not the first knowledge which the public had of the great news which it contained. For on Saturday, July 6, the Pennsylvania Evening Post, "published every Tuesday and Saturday evenings" at a "price only two coppers" devoted the entire front page of its issue for that date to the publication of the Declaration. On July 8, Dunlap and Claypoole also published it in their weekly, the Pennsylvania Packet, and within the next week or so it had been published in nearly all of the Colonial newspapers, as well as having been proclaimed in various places by the assemblies, councils of safety and the like, for post riders were carrying some of Dunlap and Claypoole's printed copies throughout the newly-created nation.

In Massachusetts where the struggle for liberty had begun, it was first proclaimed on July 14, 1776, and the interesting fact is that it did not take place in Boston. For, according to a contemporary account, "at about noon on Sunday (July 14) a messenger on his way to Boston stopped at one of the taverns on Main street (Worcester) for dinner for himself and team. While waiting for his team to eat and rest he was met by Isahel Thomas, who obtained from him a copy of the Declaration which he took to the church and read from the porch."

Control of Rats Up to Community

Where Food and Shelter Are Lacking Rodents Are Chased Away.

Definite headway in rat control requires not the mere killing off of rats as they are encountered in markets, poultry yards, homes, or wherever they abound, but more especially the removal of those conditions that are responsible for the rats, according to the biological survey of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Rats require food and shelter, and where these are lacking they cannot persist. Modern building construction and sanitation, as practiced in our more progressive cities, deprive rats of suitable living and breeding places, and shut off their usual food supply. Rat-proofing clauses in local building ordinances and more strict regulations in local sanitary codes, including the proper collection and disposal of garbage and the prevention of trash and waste accumulations on private premises, will do more to bring about permanent reduction in the number of rats than any other measure.

Rat proofing of new buildings is entirely practicable and should be required in all cases. It would not be practicable, however, to require rat proofing of many of the older buildings. As long as this is true and as long as rats are able to obtain a food supply, it will be necessary to destroy them. But no real progress in rat control is possible when the destruction of these pests is left to the individual, for reinfestation from surrounding infested premises is surrounding. Arrangements for thoroughly treating larger areas are essential to successful results.

Work Together. A number of cities working in cooperation with and under the leadership of the biological survey are now carrying on systematic and scientific rat control with excellent results. This bureau will be glad to assist in planning and in some cases in carrying out co-operative rat-control projects. The problem of rat control is one of the community, even of the county, the state, and the nation. It is recognized as an important world problem, for not only do rats destroy millions of dollars' worth of valuable foods and property, but they carry filth-borne disease wherever they go.

Profitable to Discard Misshapen Potato Seed

Many potato growers are finding it profitable to throw out the long, slender, or badly misshapen tubers from their seed. These tubers carry the virus of the spindle tuber disease. The yield from them is practically nothing. When buying seed, avoid any lot of seed which carries a large number of these "run-out" potatoes. Remember when buying seed potatoes, you are not buying a bushel of potatoes but rather you are making an investment in a crop. It may be a profitable one or it may be unprofitable. Good seed is worth more money, for it yields a higher return on the investment.

Authentic Information Given in Seed Catalogues

Vegetable growers, whether home garden or commercial, should consider carefully the source, quality, and variety of seed to be planted. If you have located a good source, endeavor to get seed of identical parentage for use this year. Send for catalogs of several seedsmen, but do not shop around too much. Extravagant, vague statements regarding varieties should be disregarded, but much authentic information may be obtained from reliable seed catalogs.

Agricultural Squibs

Oil will prolong the life of harness many years. Watch costs and markets and profits will take care of themselves. Early and late vegetables are usually more profitable than mid-season crops. According to agricultural college figures, farm buildings should be repainted every three and half years.

There should be enough cattle on a farm to consume the alfalfa. If it has to be baled and shipped the expense and work is too great to pay for the shipping and baling.

Husker-Shredder Is Efficient Destroyer

Solves Problem in Corn-Borer Clean-Up Plan.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While the husker-shredder has long been recognized as a useful machine in the corn belt, its effectiveness as a destroyer of corn borers in corn fodder has given it a new significance. Shredding solves one of the most difficult problems in a corn-borer clean-up program, according to entomologists of the United States Department of Agriculture, by affording an efficient and practical means of disposing of the cornstalks that might otherwise carry the borers through the winter.

Shredding tests, they say, indicate that kills of from 98 to 100 per cent of the borers may be obtained and that any that escape death in the machine probably perish during the process of storing or feeding the shredded material. The maximum kill is obtained when stalks are cut in lengths of one-half inch or less.

Other advantages attributed to the husker-shredder are cited by the farm management specialist of the department in Farmers' Bulletin 1559-F, The Husker-Shredder on Eastern Corn Belt Farms, just issued. This bulletin is based largely on information secured in a co-operative study of the experiences of farmers in Ohio, Michigan, Indiana and Illinois who use husker-shredders in harvesting their corn crop.

A copy of the bulletin may be obtained by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Bud Grafting on Trees Really Simple Process

Bud grafting or "budding," as it is often called, is the process of transplanting an eye or bud from one tree or shrub to another, and is really a simple process when once the operator "knows how."

There are a few essential points, however, that are frequently overlooked, and one of the principal ones of these is to have the bark of the stock so that it slides freely. Almost every man or boy from the country can remember in his earlier days the making of a whistle from small wood of the willow and how necessary it was for the bark to peel to make it properly. Now this is just the condition for the bark to be in for successful bud grafting and when the stock to be grafted upon is in this condition success is almost sure to follow.

August is the season in many sections for bud-grafting of peaches, cherries, plums and other fruits and also roses and other ornamentals. One of the secrets of budding and grafting is to perform the operation quickly, before the sap of the plant gets a chance to oxidize, and as it is an old adage that "practice makes perfect" the professional grafter or budding nearly always scores more success than the amateur in this line.

Way to Clean Brooder by Using Heavy Paper

A good way to keep the floor of a brooder clean is to cover the floor with heavy paper. Over this scatter litter or cut straw. When the paper becomes soiled, it is removed, litter and all, and burned or buried. It is much easier to replace both the paper and litter than to scrub the floors when soiled. Then, too, the brooders are always dry, whereas if they must be scrubbed often, they are liable to be damp sometimes, and then look out for rump. Dampness will bring on roup in young chicks, and is sometimes so fatal and does its work of destruction so quickly, that one has no chance to use a remedy, if one can be found. It is much more fatal to young chicks than to matured fowls.

Cultivate Everbearing Strawberries All Year

Everbearing strawberries need lots of cultivating and hoeing. It is not necessary to keep the weeds out, but the ground should be worked frequently whether there are any weeds or not, as the everbearers do not like to be left standing in a hard soil even if there are no weeds. So keep the ground stirred so that there is a mulch of loose soil around them at all times if you want them to do their best for you. Everbearing strawberries make a fine addition to the menu on our table in the fall of the year, helping to make that much needed variety and change which some sage has said is "spice of life."

Cutting Forests

Where forests are cut down with no provision for immediate regrowth, the economic effects reach out far beyond the lumber business. Industries move away, wages are reduced, bank deposits decrease, farmers lose their markets, railroad revenues shrink, schools deteriorate, good roads are fewer, tax burdens pile up, and abandoned farms abound.

Control Cutworms

Cutworms are among the most troublesome insects with which the gardener and the farmer have to deal. Their principal damage is done in the spring when they cut off young plants at or near the surface of the ground. Cutworms are not difficult to control. The most effective and the most practical method is to poison them with poisoned bran mash.

Reforestation is gradually coming into its own, and during the last three years, 1,055,658 acres have been added to the state and community preserves. Summer Wraps Are Attractive

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

Capricious, whimsical, charm-ing, beguiling, unique, graceful, unusual—one adjective is as applicable as another when it comes to describing the fanciful wraps which are leading interest to the summer style parade.

Very often the summery wrap is a separate theme, but just as often it is a component part of an ensemble costume—which does not, however, interfere with its doing duty with other frocks as well as the one to which it is closely related. In the picture this ensemble of feminized styling is made of peach-colored georgette. The coat of the matching georgette is worn over a sleeveless frock.

Between wraps of georgette and of transparent velvet there is keen competition. Being of light and airy texture, one welcomes their entrance into the summer mode, especially since so many of the gowns are made sleeveless, which renders a wrap which can be easily thrown off and on almost an indispensable thing.

With every flowered chiffon frock a velvet coat or cape of gay hue has become the watchword of the mode. Sometimes these are made quite simply—perhaps just a straight loose coat with a scarf collar. Then again the wrap is a puzzling thing of circular ruffles, capelets and huge bows.

Some of the chiffon or georgette coats—and, by the way, they are as practical as they are handsome—in-clude in many fine knife plaitings; others "say it" with circular ruffles galore. In the instance of the model in the picture chic supreme is expressed through circular ruffles about the hemline.

Speaking of georgette for the summer ensemble, no fabric is more commendable. For one thing, it wears. Then in most instances it can be tubbed satisfactorily; at any rate it cleans most perfectly. If you have never owned a tailored georgette ensemble you have missed one of the chiefest of sartorial joys.

PEANUT BUTTER BISCUITS

Whether you serve them for breakfast, luncheon, afternoon tea, or evening refreshments, everybody will be sure to like these peanut butter biscuits, provided you have "it"—which, in biscuit making, means a light touch and an instinct for managing the oven just right. The bureau of home economics says to bake in a "quick oven," meaning at an oven temperature from 450 degrees Fahrenheit to 500 degrees Fahrenheit.

4 tbs. peanut butter 1/2 tsp. salt
2 tbs. fat 2 cups flour
4 tsp. baking powder

Sift the dry ingredients and rub the fat and peanut butter into the flour with the tips of the fingers. Make a well in this dry mixture and, stirring from the center, add slowly enough milk to make a soft dough. On a lightly floured board, pat out the dough to a layer about 1/2 inch thick and cut in small rounds. Bake in a quick oven from 12 to 15 minutes or until light brown. Serve at once.

Sun Suits for Youngsters

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Ready for a morning on the bench—or at the sand pile in the back yard—these two little girls, dressed in their gay sun suits of cretonne and print, will have all the benefits of the health-giving ultra-violet rays of sunshine on a large portion of their skin surface.

Sun baths should be given to all well children to keep them well and to many sick children to help make them well. When the weather permits and the sun is not too hot, arrange for the youngster to be out doors in the sunshine as much as possible. Most modern children who are well can take their sun baths as part of their usual playtime. Of course, these little girls have been accustomed very gradually to playing in the direct sunshine. Short periods of sunning were given at first, and the garments worn exposed a less extensive area of the body. Both the time and the amount exposed were increased until a coat of tan was acquired.

Almost any well-fitting commercial romper pattern can be modified for use in cutting sun suits, says the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture. (The bureau does not distribute patterns.) As a beginning it is well to select a pattern conforming as closely as possible to the sun suit desired. In the picture one little girl is wearing a sun suit made to match romper, pattern, fastened at the shoulders instead of down the back. The front is cut in one piece. The crotch is slightly shaped, and the drop seat is as flat as possible with a deep plait on each side. The back is cut away under this piece except for sufficient material to keep it from pulling out.

The other little suit of durable cotton print is cut from a pattern that had a crotch cut on the fold of the material so as to give as much freedom and protection as possible. As the front of the suit and the back of the waist are in one piece, only four buttons are necessary. However, in order to make buttoning a little easier than in the overall type of garment, the back of the waist is extended at each side so that it may carry all four buttons. Both the front and the drop seat fasten onto the button directly under the arm. The result is a garment very easy to make and to launder. The fabric in this sun suit has a conventional design of tiny oranges and lemons among green leaves. The edges of the garment and of the large pockets are bound with orange bands.

MAKING FRUIT PUNCH

Mexican cookery is undoubtedly the inspiration of this good dish for which the bureau of home economics furnishes the recipe. If you can not get chili peppers, use green peppers and flavor well with tabasco or cayenne, for the characteristic of all Mexican dishes is their high seasoning.

1 pint kidney beans 2 chili peppers
4 tbs. olive oil or 1 quart tomatoes
butter Salt
1 pound lean beef

Wash the beans, cover with water, and soak overnight. In the morning bring them to the boiling point, drain, and discard the water. Cut the beef into small pieces, and brown it in the olive oil. Then add the beans, chili peppers, tomato, and salt. Cover and simmer for one hour, or until the beans and meat are tender.

cupful of cocoa, one-half teaspoonful of salt; knead lightly and place to rise again. Mold into loaves when light, filling the pans half full. Use two and a half cupfuls of flour in the second kneading. This is particularly good for sandwiches.

Chicken, Ham and Tongue Sandwich.—Chop fine one-half cupful of the white meat of a stewed chicken, one-fourth cupful of boiled ham and the same of boiled smoked ox tongue. Bind together with mayonnaise and spread on thin slices of buttered white bread. Press on a leaf of lettuce and cover with another slice.

Thousands of Clocks

Must Tick in Unison

The British post office can claim to have the biggest collection of clocks in the kingdom. More than 20,000 timepieces have to be kept perfectly synchronized, although thousands of these are "behind scenes" and are used only for timing junction and trunk telephone calls. Every day at 10:00 a. m. and 1:00 p. m. Greenwich time is telegraphed to chief post offices in England, Scotland, Wales and North Ireland. In point of size the second collection in the kingdom is probably that distributed among the royal palaces. There are 1,000 pieces, of which Windsor castle and Buckingham palace have most. At Sandringham all clocks have been kept half an hour fast ever since the time of King Edward. In the houses of parliament there are about 500 clocks, necessitating a great deal of winding and vigilant synchronization.

Money From Cotton

When James Coats began to make thread in the little town of Ferguslie, Paisley, Scotland, 104 years ago, few could have realized the enormous profits that would accrue to the family. Nine "cotton kings," headed by Lord Glentanar, who left an estate valued at $4,624,263, died millionaires, and the recent death of Mrs. Coats-Boyd, who left $748,118, brings the total to $21,295,274 for ten members of the family. Of this amazing sum amassed from the sale of reels of cotton, the state has claimed $5,104,528 in death duties.—Montreal Family Herald.

Table Is Work of Art

Three years of tireless effort have made Burton W. Blair, of Marion, Ohio, the possessor of a library table that is regarded as a work of art. Without the use of a single nail or screw, Burton has made a table that many collectors would like to own. The top is constructed of 1,557 pieces of wood, seventeen kinds being used to give the desired color effect. The table contains three designs, the Masonic square and compass, composed of sixty-two pieces of wood, and the American Legion emblem. Blair is a World War veteran. He began work on his table the day ground was broken for the Harding memorial at Marion, October 5, 1925.

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

There are hermit souls that live withdrawn. In the place of their self-content: There are souls like stars, that dwell apart.

While the fresh green apples are in their prime of flavor make a few jars of:

Apple Chutney.—Cover one pound of button onions with one cupful of water and eight ounces of salt. Let stand two days, renewing the water and salt once. Peel, core and slice one pound of green, sour apples. Soak one pound of raisins, one pound of soft brown sugar, two ounces of fresh ginger, four ounces of chili peppers, one tablespoonful of crushed celery seed and a clove of garlic in a pint of vinegar for eight hours. Now add the onions and put through a meat chopper. Add another pint of vinegar and cook with the apples until they are soft. Pack boiling hot in small jars and seal.

Cucumber Sauce Uncooked.—Peel and grate cucumbers and place in a cheesecloth bag to drain over night. Some leave the cucumbers unpeeled. Grate one-half dozen onions, add to the cucumbers. In the morning add salt, cayenne pepper or a bit of finely chopped chili pepper; add vinegar to make the right consistency. Pack in cold jars and seal.

A chicken sandwich is always a favorite for any occasion.

Toasted Chicken Sandwiches.—Grind very fine one-fourth of a cupful of the white meat of chicken and moisten with a little cream. Season and blend. Spread the mixture on a slice of trimmed toast. Sprinkle with finely chopped cheese and paprika. Place under the broiler and melt the cheese, cover with another slice, cut in two. Garnish with potato shoestrings and water cross.

Chicken a la King.—This is a very attractive open sandwich. Cut slices of bread one and one-fourth inches thick, cut out a small place in the center, butter and toast in the oven. Fill the depression with hot chicken a la king, sprinkle with cheese and brown under the broiler. Garnish with mushrooms.

Chicken and Grape Sandwich.—Spread buttered toasted bread with mayonnaise, then arrange thin slices of the white meat of chicken on it. On top of the chicken place thin slices of seedless grapes, press on a leaf of lettuce and cover with another slice. Trim, cut into any desired shape and serve on lettuce.

Other grapes seeded and chopped may be used.

Chicken and Almond Sandwich.—Chop and mix one-fourth cupful each of the white meat of chicken and blanched almonds. Add just enough mayonnaise to bind, season and spread on toast. Garnish the border with thin slices of pickles, cover with another slice and serve on lettuce.

Chicken and Broccoli Sandwich.—Chop one cupful of cooked seasoned broccoli well drained, mix with the pounded white meat of a chicken to make a good mixture. Spread on buttered bread, cover with another slice and pour over a hot rich cream sauce.

Cocoa Bread.—Dissolve one cake of compressed yeast and a tablespoonful of sugar in two cupfuls of scalded and cooled milk; add three cupfuls of flour and beat until smooth. Cover and set in a warm place to rise—about one and one-half hours, then add one-fourth of a cupful of butter creamed with one-fourth cupful of sugar, two eggs well beaten, one-half

"Let's have an afternoon joll for a change," the fairies shouted.

"Fine," agreed Yhab. And the Fairy Queen waved her magic wand, and said: "The ball will be this afternoon, so hurry and make ready."

The fairies ran and dew this way and that, and old Mr. Giant came along, having heard the sound of many voices, and asked if there was anything he could do.

"To be sure," the Fairy Queen said, "you blow on your great and powerful trumpet the call of the fairies, and for those you cannot reach by the call of the trumpet, ask the robins if they'll take messages for us."

"We want all our usual friends, the elves, gnomes, brownies, the hodgey family and of course old Witty Witch."

"Fine," said Mr. Giant, "I'll attend to the invitations at once."

So he went, walking almost a mile a minute!

It was afternoon, and the fairies were all ready for their guests.

Mr. Sun was peeping through the tall trees and telling secrets to the trees and the ferns and the mossy ground which made them sparkle and laugh.

The shadows had come, too, and they were already dancing with Mr. Sun's children, the Rays.

The gnomes wore beautiful moss green suits, with tall hats of moss, the brownies wore orange velvet suits with hats of bright orange velvet—very tall with a tassel on top of each hat.

The elves wore gresses made of wild roses. The boozey family wore dresses of moss trimmed with forget-me-nots, and old Witty Witch wore a new frock of daisies, with a tall hat made out of buttercups.

Of course the Fairy Queen was delighted with all the costumes, as well she might be, and all the guests thought the fairies were quite too wonderful for words.

Soon the birds came to help the music, and though they were wearing their usual suits they had been smoothed and washed and brushed and looked very handsome indeed.

Soon all the guests arrived. The

Preparing the Plank Steak

One of the Best Flavored Pieces of Beef.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A flank steak is one of the best flavored pieces of beef, but it requires slow, careful cooking, and its long muscle fibers should be carved across the grain. It is an economical cut, for there is no bone or other waste material. Flank steak is especially adapted to stuffing and rolling. Any preferred stuffing may be used. The bureau of home economics suggests one made in this way: Half cupful of chopped celery and a medium-sized onion, minced, are cooked in two tablespoonfuls of butter or beef drippings and then combined with one and one-half cupfuls of stale bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of salt, and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper.

Wipe the meat with a damp cloth. Spread the stuffing over the steak. Beginning on one side of it, roll the steak up like a jelly roll, and tie securely in several places with clean string. Be sure to roll the steak from the side, not the end; then in carving slices the meat will be cut across the grain. Sear in a small quantity of fat in a heavy skillet or baking pan on top of the stove, and turn the meat frequently until it is browned on all sides. Slip a rack under the meat in the pan, cover closely, and cook in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for one and one-half hours, or until tender. When the meat is done remove from the fire and prepare a gravy. Drain off the fat, and for each cupful of gravy desired, measure two tablespoonfuls of fat and return to the pan. Add one and one-half to two tablespoonfuls of flour to the fat and stir until well blended and slightly browned. Then add one cupful of cold water or milk and stir until smooth. Season with salt and pepper. Serve the stuffed steak with browned potatoes.

A Northland Romance

CHAPTER I

As far back as I can remember I have faithfully followed the banner of Romance. It has given color to my life, made me a dreamer of dreams, a player of parts. As a boy, roaming alone the wild heather hills. I have heard the glad shouts of the football players on the green, yet never enticed to join them. Mine was the richer, rarer joy. The spirit of Romance beset me. I would adventure in the stranger lands, and face their perils and brave their dangers. The joy of the thought exulted in my veins, and scarce could I bide the day when the roads of chance and change would be open to my feet.

It is strange that in all these years I confided in no one. Garry, who was my brother and my dearest friend, would have laughed at me in that affectionate way of his. He was care-free, irresponsible days and not, I am convinced, entirely mispent. I came to know the worth of the wharftide, and plunged into an underworld of fascinating repellency. I rubbed shoulders with eager necessity, scrambled for free lunches in frowsy barrooms, and amid the scum and debris of the waterside found much food for sober thought. Yet at times I blamed myself for thus misusing my days, and memories of Glengyle and mother and Garry loomed up with reproachful vividness.

I was, too, a seeker of curious experience, and this was to prove my undoing. One foggy midnight, coming up Pacific street with its glut of saloons, I was clouted shrewdly from behind and dropped most neatly in the gutter. When I came to, very sick and dizzy in a side alley, I found I had been robbed of my pocketbook with nearly all my money therein. Fortunately I had left my watch in the hotel safe, and by selling it was not entirely destitute; but the situation forced me from my citadel of pleasant dreams, and confronted me with the grimmer realities of life.

With some thirty-odd dollars standing between me and starvation, it was obvious I must become a heaver of wood and a drawer of water, and to this end I haunted the employment offices. One morning, on seeking my favorite labor bureau, I found an unusual flutter among the benchwarmers. A big contractor wanted fifty men immediately. With a number of others I pressed forward, was interviewed and accepted. The same day we were marched in a body to the railway depot and herded into a fourth-class car.

Where we were going I knew not; of what we were going to do I had no inkling. I only knew we were southbound, and at long last I might fairly consider myself to be the shutcock of fortune.

I left San Francisco blanketed in gray fog and beset by a roaring wind; when I opened my eyes I was in a land of spacious sky and broad clean sunshine. It seemed like a land of promise, of song and sunshine, and silent and apart I sat to admire and to enjoy.

"Looks pretty swell, don't it?" I will call him the Prodigal. He was about my own age, thin, but sun-browned and healthy. His eyes twinkled with a humorous light, but his face was shrewd, alert and aggressive.

"Yes," I said soberly, for I have always been backward with strangers. "Pretty good line. The banana belt. Eternal summer. Ever been here before?"

"No."

"Neither have I. Glad I came, even if it's to do the horny-handed son of toil stunt."

"Where are we going, have you any idea?" I asked.

"Search me," he said. "One thing you can bank on, they'll work the Ju dās out of us. The gentle grafter nestles in our midst. This here's a cinch game and we are the full guys."

He talked on with a wonderful vivid manner and an outpouring knowledge of life, so that I was hugely interested. Yet ever and anon an allusion of taste would betray him, and at no time did I fall to see that his roughness was only a veneer. As it turned out he was better educated by far than I, a Yale boy taking a post graduate course in the University of Hard Luck.

My reserve once thawed, I told him much of my simple life. He listened intently sympathetic.

"Say," said he earnestly when I had finished. "You're green, if you'll excuse me saying it, and maybe I can help you some. Likewise you're the only one in all the gang of boobies that's my kind. Let's be partners."

I felt drawn to him and agreed.

"Good-bye, tiddle, good-bye."

I forced myself away, and stumbled on board. When I looked back again they were gone, but through the gray shadows there seemed to come back to me a cry of heartache and irremediable loss.

It was on a day of early autumn when I stood knee-deep in the heather of Glengyle, and looked wistfully over the gray sea. 'Twas but a month later when, homeless and friendless, I stood on the beach by the Cliff house of San Francisco, and gazed over the fretful waters of another ocean. Such is the romance of destiny.

Consigned, so to speak, to my cousin, the sheepherder of the Saskatche wan, I found myself setting foot on the strange land with but little heart for my new vocation. My mind, crumpled of hook notions, craved for the larger life. I was valiantly mad for adventure; to fare forth haphazardly; to come upon naked danger; to feel the budgeonings of mischance; to tramp, to starve, to sleep under the stars. It was the calow boy-idea perpetuated in the man, and it was to lead me a sorry dance. But I could not overbear it.

The notion of the South Seas was ever in my head. I loafed in the sunshine, sitting on the pier-edge, with eyes fixed on the lazy shipping. These were care-free, irresponsible days and not, I am convinced, entirely mispent. I came to know the worth of the wharftide, and plunged into an underworld of fascinating repellency. I rubbed shoulders with eager necessity, scrambled for free lunches in frowsy barrooms, and amid the scum and debris of the waterside found much food for sober thought. CHAPTER II

On either side of us were swift hills mottled with green and gold, ahead a curdle of snow-capped mountains, above a sky of robin's-egg blue. The morning was lyric and set our hearts piping as we climbed the canyon. About midday we reached the end. Gangs of men were everywhere, ripping and tearing at the mountainside. Everywhere was the feverish activity of a construction camp.

We sat that night by the crackling blaze of mesquite, sagebrush and live-oak limbs, and he told me many a strange story of his roving life.

"You know, the old man's all broke up at me playing the fool like this. He's got a glue factory back in Massachusetts. Guess he stacks up about a million or so. Wanted me to go into the glue factory, begin at the bottom, stay with it. But not little Willie. Life's too interesting a proposition to be turned down like that. I'm not repentant. I know the fatted calf's waiting for me, getting fatter every day. One of these days I'll go back and sample it."

It was he I first heard talk of the Great White Land, and it stirred me strangely.

"Every one's crazy about it. They're rushing now in thousands, to get there before the winter begins. Next spring there will be the biggest stampede the world has ever seen. Say, Scotty, I've the greatest notion to try it. Let's go, you and I. There's the gold, shining, shining, and it's calling to us. I don't care one rip for the value of it. I can make all I want out of glue. But the adventure, the excitement, it's that that makes me fit for the foolish house."

He was silent a long time while my imagination conjured up terrible, fascinating pictures of the vast, unworked land, and a longing came over me to dare its shadows.

As we said good night, his last words were:

"Remember, Scotty, we're both going to join the Big Stampede, you and I."

I slept but fitfully, for the night air was oozing, and the bunkhouse nigh as open as a cage. In the afternoon I was put to work in the gravel pit.

There were four of us. We threw the gravel against a screen where the finer stuff sifted through was used in making concrete.

High-ho! what a life it was. Resting, eating, sleeping; negative pleasures became positive ones. Life's great principle of compensation worked on our behalf, and to lie at ease, reading an old paper, seemed an exquisite enjoyment.

I was much troubled about the Prodigal. He complained of muscular rheumatism, and except to crawl to meals was unable to leave his bunk. Yet he bore his suffering with great spirit, and, among that nondescript crew, he was a thing of joy and brightness, a link with that other world which was mine own. The nickname him "Happy," his cheerfulness was so invincible.

One morning I woke about six, and found, pinned to my blanket, a note from my friend.

"Dear Scotty:

"I grieve to leave you thus, but the cruel foreman insists on my working off my ten days' board. Racked with pain as I am, there appears to be no alternative but flight. Accordingly I fade away once more into the unknown. Will write you general delivery, Los Angeles. Good luck and good-bye. Yours to a cinder,

"HAPPY."

There was a hue and cry after him, but he was gone, and a sudden dust for the place came over me. For two more days I worked, crushed by a gloom that momentarily intensified. Clamant and imperative in me was the voice of change. I could not be come toll-broken, so I saw the foreman.

"Why do you want to go?" he asked reproachfully.

"Well, sir, the work's too monotonous."

"Monotonous! Well, that's the rumnest reason I ever heard a man give for quitting. But every man knows his own business best."

Los Angeles will always be written in golden letters in the archives of my memory. Crawling, sore and swollen, from the clutch of toil, I reveled in a lotus life of ease and idleness.

Living was incredibly cheap. For seventy-five cents a week I had a little sunlit attic, and for ten cents I could dine abundantly. So, dreaming and roaming the streets, I spent my days in a state of beatitude.

But my small capital could not last forever, and the time came when once more the grim face of toll confronted me, and again I found myself mixing with the spineless residuum of the employment bureau.

I got work as an orange-picker. It was a matter of swinging long ladders into fruit-flaunting trees, of sunshiny days and fluttering leaves, of golden branches plundered, and boxes filled from sagging sacks. There is no more ideal occupation, I reveled in it. Possibly I would have gone on, contentedly enough, perched on a ladder, high up in the sunlit sway of treetops, had not the work come to an end. When I counted my savings and found that I had four hundred and ninety-five cents, such a feeling of affluence came over me that I resolved to gratify my taste for travel. Accordingly I purchased a ticket for San Diego, and once more found myself southward bound.

A few days in San Diego reduced my small capital to the vanishing point, yet it was with a light heart I turned north again and took the All Tie route for Los Angeles. I was absolutely penniless. The Lord looks after his children, said I, and when I became too inexorably hungry I asked for bread, emphasizing my willingness to do a stunt on the woodpile. Perhaps it was because I was young and notably a novice in vagrancy, but people were very good to me.

On arriving in Los Angeles I went to the post office. There was a letter from the Prodigal dated New York, and inclosing fourteen dollars, which he owed me. He said:

"I returned to the paternal roof, weary of my role. The fatted calf awaited me. Nevertheless, I am sick again for the unallowed swine-husks. Meet me in Frisco about the end of February, and I will a glorious proposition unfold. Don't fail. Look for a letter in the General Delivery."

There was no time to lose, as February was nearly over, I took a steerage passage to San Francisco, resolving that I would mend my fortunes. It is so easy to drift. I saw that as long as I remained friendless and unknown nothing but degraded toil was open to me. Surely I could climb up, but was it worth while? A snug farm in the Northwest awaited me. I would work my way back there, and arrive decently clad. Then none would know of my humiliation. I had been wayward and foolish, but I had learned something.

What with steamer fare and a few small debts to settle, I found when I landed in San Francisco that once more I was flatly broke. There was no letter for me, and perhaps it was on account of my disappointment, perhaps on account of my extreme stabbiness, but I found I had quite lost heart. So I tightened my belt and sat in Portsmouth square, cursing myself for the many nickels I had squandered in riotous living.

I was drowsing on my bench when some one addressed me.

"Say, young fellow, you look pretty well used up."

An elderly, gray-haired man came and sat by me.

"Come, buck up, kid, you're pretty near down and out. I've been studying in you two days. Let's go and feed."

He took me to a restaurant where he ordered a dinner that made my head swim.

My benefactor was rather under medium height, but so square and solid you felt he was a man to be reckoned with. His mouth was firm and his chin resolute. Altogether his face was a curious blend of benevolence and ruthless determination.

"Feel better, son? Well, go ahead and tell me as much of your story as you want to."

I gave an account of all that had happened to me since I had set foot on the new land.

BENTLEY FAVORS DEVELOPING MEN

Former Giant Star Would Give Rookies a Chance.

"The two greatest managers in baseball are Connie Mack and John McGraw, and the greatest of these is Connie Mack," declared Jack Bentley, a former star of McGraw's New York Giants. "Record books may show that McGraw has won more pennants in recent years than Mack, but winning pennants is not the sole task of a successful manager," added the man who is now piloting the York Roses to a possible pennant in the New York-Pennsylvania league, writes Tom Shriver in the Philadelphia Record.

"Connie Mack has developed more ball players and given more rookies a chance to make good than any other manager in the game," said Bentley.

"On the other hand, McGraw has never been content to develop a single ball player, being content to buy stars when they were needed. That system is always easier, but does not indicate any great managerial ability," continued the former big league pitching star.

"Here at York I am going to try and follow Mack's system. I will give every youngster a chance to make good, and if we can produce a pennant winner while developing young stars everybody will be far happier," was Bentley's final observation.

"Right now the York team looks good to me, and I am hoping to get the boys into the thick of the fight for this year's league championship," added Jack.

It seemed strange to see big Jack Bentley far from the noise and excitement of Broadway, but the popular star of the big leagues seems perfectly contented in one of the best towns of the New York-Penn circuit.

Bentley has had a strange career in baseball. At one time he was right on the top of the heap, and his praises were being sung on every hand. Then came an unfortunate day at the Polo Grounds, when two throws from the outfield snapped the arm that had been hurling winning baseball for many years.

It meant a trip to the minors for Bentley, and his spirits sagged, and his play became listless. So he jumped at the chance of becoming a manager.

"I want to get up to the top once more," said Jack. "My days as a big league star are over, but if I can pilot the York team to a championship it will mean another taste of the glory that comes to a winner," he added.

More Boxing Titles

A proposal to create seven additional boxing championships will be submitted by President Paul Prehn to the National Boxing association at its September meeting.

"The great problem confronting boxing promoters is that of acquiring championship attractions," Prehn explained, "and official junior champions in each class would double the attractions now offered. This would bring more boxers into prominence, too, and give the unfortunate performer who is between the classes a chance."

Jim Thorpe, famous Indian athlete, is said to be muscle bound at the age of forty-four.

Georgetown university students, 75 per cent of them, find golf the game which gives them the greatest thrill.

A total of $1,200,000 was risked on the eleven entries in the recent Plinko Breakers. It was a new mark in money bet.

Francis Ouimet, leading amateur golfer around Boston, won't be active in golf meets for a number of weeks because of a recent operation.

Luis Firpo, Argentine heavyweight, has resumed training again and announced that he expects to go to New York before the end of the year to return to the ring.

Wilbert Robinson, president-manager of the Dodgers, denies that he is willing to quit the Brooklyn team. "I did not say I was willing to quit, and I have no intention of doing so," declared Robbie, when asked about the statement he is credited with making recently.

Robinson was quoted as telling a newspaper man that he was willing and eager to resign immediately as the Brooklyn's manager.

To Play in South

Coach Paul Steward, Northwestern university's new baseball mentor, will lead his team into the Southland for a seven-game series starting August 27. The opening game is with Little Rock, Ark., of the Southern league. Other teams to be met on the trip are University of Texas, Rice Institute and University of Arkansas.

High Praise for Gehring

COMPARATIVELY few maps designate the geographical location of Fowlerville, Mich., a town of something like 1,200 humans, in Livingston county, but Fowlerville has given baseball one of the best, if not the best, second basemen since Nap Lajoie. When Dan Howley, now manager of the St. Louis Browns, turned Charley Gehring over to Ty Cobb and the Tigers in the spring of 1926, the bald and vociferous pilot, who at that time was at the helm of the Toronto club of the International league, did the Detroit club a service that scarcely could be measured in dollars and cents, writes E. J. Carveth in the Detroit Free Press.

Gehring was a high class prospect with the Leafs. He is a finished ball player and today certainly the best second baseman in the majors. There is not a surer pair of hands in baseball than Gehring's. He goes far to his right or left or even back into center or right field after drives labelled for hits. He can throw with the best of them. He is a smooth piece of double play machinery and a high class defensive ball player.

Gehring's remarkable fielding tells only part of his value to the Tigers. Over the greater part of the schedule to date, Gehring has shown the way to his mates in hitting, and playing with a club that has been clubbing the ball for a team average of from .316 to .329 since the season started, it is not difficult to realize the potency in Gehring's bat.

If there is anything missing from Gehring's baseball makeup, it is color. Charley is not of the chattering type. He cannot be persuaded to bait the umpires or spit tobacco juice into his glove. His even temper is described by some as a baseball handicap—but Charley is batting .378 and fielding .931, which excuses him for lack of what the critics are wont to define as color.

There have been many good second basemen since Lajoie, among them Eddie Collins, Pop Young and Bill Wambaugns, but did any of them have a pair of hands as sure as Gehring's? And Gehring is unlike Lajoie only because he hits 'em from the other side of the plate.

Gehring.

Position in Outfield Luring to Bullet Joe

"Bullet Joe" Bush, famous as a pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics and other major league baseball clubs, has deserted the pitcher's mound for the outfield and now is playing right field for the Portland club of the Pacific Coast league. He follows a trail left by a number of other pitchers who became effective outfielders, another Joe being prominent in the number. "Smoky Joe" Wood, after finishing his career as a star pitcher for the Boston Red Sox, went to Cleveland with Tris Speaker and did great work in the outfield for the Indians.

Joe Bush goes to the Far West with a fine major league background. He was with the Athletics from 1912 to 1917 and then saw service with Boston, New York, St. Louis and Washington in the American league and Pittsburgh in the National before drifting back to his first love, the Athletics. He was in five world series with three clubs, the Athletics, Red Sox and Yankees.

Even so great a baseball player as Walter Johnson shares the necessity of common humanity in requiring occasional sick leave.

Frank Gilhooley, who manages the Rochester Internationals, believes he has a future big league star in Sol Kirk, rookie outfielder.

Two baseballs, used by the Toronto baseball club 24 years ago, are the prized possessions of W. F. Kress of Preston, Ont., a veteran fan.

Roy Grimes, utility first baseman with Kansas City of the American association, has been sold outright to Buffalo of the International league.

Hollis Thurston, veteran pitcher who was in the major leagues for a number of years, is pitching very effectively in the Pacific Coast league this season.

Dafe Alexander, rookie with Detroit, is the biggest first baseman in the major leagues. He stands six feet three inches tall and weighs 215 pounds.

Lawrence (Larry) Woodall, for nine years a member of the Detroit catching staff, was sold to the Portland club of the Pacific Coast league. It was an outright sale.

The Charlotte club of the South Atlantic association has released Johnny Jones, hard-hitting outfielder, as one of the first moves to come within the player limit.

Behind the perfect pitching of Al Nichols, Amherst defeated Williams 4 to 0. The star Lord Jeff, twirler, enjoyed a perfect day on the mound, allowing no hits in nine innings.

Elias Funk, outfielder, has been purchased from the New York Yankees by Hollywood of the Pacific Coast league. Funk was with St. Paul of the American association last season.

It is learned that Paul M. Shellenberger, star shortstop of the Lafayette college undefeated baseball team, will sign a contract with the Philadelphia Athletics at the close of the college season.

Jersey City has three pitching recruits from the college ranks in Manfred, of New York university; Smith, of Columbia, and Miner, of Syracuse. All three were on the mound in one game.

No playing manager in the history of baseball has been able to approach the feat of Capt. Adria C. Anson in winning five pennants in the National league. His Chicago club came in first in 1890, 1891, 1892, 1893 and 1894.

A Big Contractor Wanted Fifty Men Immediately.

I would never see her more. Garry was pale and quiet, but I could see he was vastly moved.

"Athol," said he, "if ever you need me just send for me. I'll come, no matter how long or how hard the way."

I can see them to this day standing there in the drenching rain, Garry fine and manly, mother small and drooping.

"Good-bye, tiddle, good-bye."

I forced myself away, and stumbled on board. When I looked back again they were gone, but through the gray shadows there seemed to come back to me a cry of heartache and irremediable loss.

Character Molded by Example of Parents

Do you ever wonder what you would have been if your father and mother had been different? I often do.

My own father and mother lived what they tried to teach their two children; my sister and myself. To have so consistent an example of absolute integrity would be of incalculable worth to any child; I never can sufficiently express my debt of gratitude to them.

My father was a "natural born scientist, an indefatigable searcher for the relation between cause and effect. It was he that taught me to ask the why of everything; so want to know and to understand things.

Both my father and my mother judged persons by the essentials of character; such things as honesty, kindness, uprightness; by what persons were—not by how much money they had or how much show they could make.—Mary E. Mullett in the American Magazine.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Ramsay MacDonald Coming to Washington for World Peace Conference.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

RAMSAY MACDONALD, new prime minister of Great Britain, is planning to come to the United States to confer with President Hoover, in regard to naval armament reduction and enforcing the Kellogg pact outlawing war by joint action of the English speaking peoples. In Washington the news of this plan was well received, and it was learned at the White House that Mr. Hoover would be glad to meet Mr. MacDonald and discuss with him questions of mutual interest to their two countries. American Ambassador Dawes, on his way to England, was apprised of this development by radio and almost immediately after his arrival in London he went to Scotland for a conference with the prime minister who was taking a ten days' vacation at his home in Lossiemouth. Mr. Dawes was expected to deliver to Mr. MacDonald an invitation to visit Washington and hold there a conference with President Hoover and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada. The best guess in London was that the trip would be made about the end of July after the session of parliament adjourns.

According to London correspondents, Mr. MacDonald said: "If President Hoover invites me to Washington I am going to answer 'I will go.' I shall hope to settle this question of Anglo-American relations once and for all." It was asserted he hopes to carry the discussion much further than naval subjects. He believes the world is entering on an era of great industrial and financial combines whose boundaries will cut across all national frontiers, and he is desirous of a discussion on economic co-operation and avoidance of cut-throat competition in foreign markets. Mr. MacDonald, as a Socialist, welcomes the welding of industry into trusts and sees no objection to the spread of trusts in the international field under proper governmental control.

JUST when it appeared that the farm relief bill as doctored up by the house and senate conferees and approved by the President had clear sailing, the senate messed things all up by rejecting the conference report by a vote of 43 to 46 because the export debenture feature had been eliminated. In this step the Democrats were joined by 13 Republicans, all listed as radicals except Couzens of Michigan. The debenture advocates not only stood by their scheme, but they were especially determined to force the house to go on record on this feature of the measure.

President Hoover immediately called leaders of the house and senate to the White House and a program was agreed upon. This was to send the bill back to conference as the senate asked, and to have the conferees agree on their original report, after which it was expected the house would reject the debenture plan by a comfortable margin and accept the conference report. There appeared to be no doubt that the senate also would adopt the report of the conference after the house had rejected the debenture by a vote of 250 to 113.

The most interesting feature of the affair was the outspoken threat of Senator Brookhart of Iowa that a third or "progressive" party would enter into the congressional campaign next year and the Presidential campaign of 1932 if the debenture were not included in either the farm bill or the new tariff bill. He asserted the President rather than the senate was to blame for delays in obtaining farm legislation.

Tariff hearings were begun by the senate finance committee, and Senator Wesley Jones told the senate this work should be speeded up with a view to completing the enactment of the legislation early in the fall, and therefore congress should recess for only a brief time. But Senator Watson, majority leader, expressed the belief that the tariff bill could not be finally acted upon until just before the regular December session.

SIGNATURE of the Young plan for German reparations payments by the seven interested nations is having speedy result in the way of settling other post-war problems. The council of the League of Nations met in Madrid, and the Germans carried out their plan of bringing before it the matter of early evacuation of the Rhineland. Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, proposed that an international conference be held this summer for the handling of all outstanding questions left over from the war, and this was agreed to by Dr. Gustav Stresemann, German minister of foreign affairs. Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain already had intimated that he was willing to participate in such a meeting. It was generally believed that the conference would be held in July, probably in London or The Hague.

It had been supposed that the council at this Madrid session would take up the vexatious question of national minorities, but Stresemann insisted it should be referred to the World Court at The Hague. This was strongly opposed by Briand and the representatives of the secession states, and a compromise was reached by which the matter was held over for the September session of the League assembly.

French Socialists in convention at Nancy declared in favor of the Young reparations plan, evacuation of the Rhineland and immediate ratification of the Mellon-Beranger accord for the payment of the French debt to the United States. Certain of the United States senators led by Howell of Nebraska have attacked the Young plan as "another move by the allies and the international bankers" to cancel not only the war debts but also the interest on the allied obligations to America. Administration leaders and State department officials asserted nothing in the Young settlement would affect the war debts owed the United States. J. P. Morgan, one of the American experts, declared on arrival in New York that the bank for international settlements, to be established under the Young plan, would be the greatest instrument for the preservation of world peace yet devised.

PRESIDENT HOOVER, because he used to be secretary of commerce, was especially interested in the ceremony of laying the cornerstone of the magnificent new Department of Commerce building. Surrounded by many other high government officials, he wielded the trowel that was used by President Washington in laying the cornerstone of the Capitol 136 years ago, and in his address he said the event marked the emergence of the Commerce department into full maturity and service. The building will be the largest single public structure in Washington and in its actual floor space will be the largest office building in the world. It is to be the most important structure in the government's $115,000,000 program for public buildings in the city of Washington.

NEARLY every day the quick shooting enforcers of prohibition furnish more ammunition for the foes of Volsteadism. Last week they killed an apparently innocent citizen at International Falls, Minn., and a young man at Detroit whose companions admit he and they had been trying to run a boatload of liquor from Canada. Drys in congress took the opportunity to denounce the activities of prohibition officers and Representative Clancy of Michigan demanded an investigation of the Detroit case, but after a trip to that city he said the shooting was justified. Representative Florence Kahn of California introduced a bill in the house directing the treasury to pay $25,000 to the dependents of every person "wantonly or negligently killed by any prohibition officer not acting in self defense." Other congressmen urged that the treasury forbid the use of firearms by dry agents, but Seymour Lowman, assistant secretary of the treasury in charge of all prohibition enforcement agencies, said this could not be done. He declared that agents had been cautioned for more than a year against reckless use of firearms, and that he did not see what more could be done to prevent killings without crippling enforcement.

Two officers of Hopkinsville, Ky., who were convicted for killing a man in a prohibition raid were denied a new trial by Federal Judge Dawson in Louisville. In Silver City, N. M., a dry agent induced a bootlegger to sell him liquor and the latter was shot by other agents as he was making the delivery. Angered by the dry raid at Ripon, Wis., during the celebration of the Republican party's seventy-fifth birthday, Assemblyman Lamoreaux of Ashland county introduced a resolution asking the federal government to desist from attempting to enforce the Eighteenth amendment in the Badger state. About the same time dry agents raided the favorite drug store of Wisconsin's wet legislators in Madison.

Mr. Lowman has ordered heavy reinforcements for the dry enforcers of the Detroit area, in the way of both men and boats. In response to this the big rum runners of the Great Lakes met in Ecorse and laid plans to operate in unison. They adopted a shuttle system whereby traffic will be diverted to Lake Erie or Lake Huron when the enforcers are concentrated on the Detroit river, and they also have devised an elaborate intelligence system and began buying larger and better boats. These are just a few of the wet and dry developments that take up vast space in the columns of the metropolitan dailies.

UNLESS all indications are wrong, peace between Mexico's government and the Roman Catholic church will be declared in the near future. Archbishop Iturbide of Michoacan and Bishop Pascual Diaz of Tabasco held conferences with President Portes Gil in Chapultepec castle as the climax of long negotiations, and there was good reason to believe they arrived at an understanding which would need only the approval of the Pope. In well informed quarters in Mexico City it was asserted the basis of the agreement was mutual consent for a broad interpretation of the country's religious laws, both sides making concessions.

THREE United States district judges sitting en banc in Chicago found the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and fifty-one associated concerns guilty of violating the Sherman antitrust act by pooling their so-called "oil cracking" processes. The decision which granted the government a permanent injunction restraining the defendant companies from further violations of the law, came after more than four years' litigation. In the original suit, filed in 1925 the government claimed the defendants conspired to restrain trade and create a monopoly by refusing independent concerns the right to use their Burton "cracking" process, used to extract gasoline from crude oil. In defense the Standard of Indiana held that the process had been of vast benefit to consumers and had materially lowered the price of gasoline.

THREE Swedish aviators started to fly from Stockholm to New York, but a broken gas feed pipe forced them to land on the coast of Iceland. They got their plane to Reykjavik and last week made three attempts to fly from there to Greenland but were driven back each time by rough weather. The aviators, Ahrenburg, Floden and Ljunglund, are trying to establish a new air trade route between Europe and America.

GALVESTON'S International "pageant of pulchritude" came to an end with the awarding of the title "Miss Universe" to Fraulein Lisl Goldarbeiter of Vienna, Austria, the young governess being adjudged the most beautiful of all the contestants. Miss Irene Ahlberg of New York was named "Miss United States." The affair did not come off without a small scandal, for Theda Delrey, "Miss Tulsa," who was selected for ninth prize, was accused of being really the "Miss Houston" of two years ago and therefore ineligible as a former contestant.

The most recently incorporated town in Arizona is Buckeye, in Maricopa county.

Plans are now being made by the Arizona State Fair Commission to show agricultural products at the California State Fair at Sacramento, in September.

District Judge Reed Holloman sentenced Alfred Rivera of Santa Fe to serve from one to three years in the state penitentiary for selling marihuana in Santa Fe.

Jack Towles, 10, son of John C. Towles, former collector of internal revenue for Arizona, was killed instantly in Phoenix when he was run over by an ice truck.

A cave apparently thousands of feet long has just been discovered 135 miles east of Phoenix. Up to the present time this has only been explored to a very limited extent.

Mrs. E. A. Perrault, secretary of state, certified to Governor R. C. Dillon that she has held the tobacco tax to be inoperative, because of the sufficiency of the referendum petitions.

The New Mexico bar examinations, Jose D. Sena, secretary of the board of bar examiners announced, have been postponed from the second Monday in July to the first Monday in August.

Hopes for a special session of the ninth Arizona legislature this summer apparently vanished when Governor Phillips declared he does not at this time see any good reason for assembling the legislators.

Superintendent Fred Anton of Las Vegas died in the hospital at Clovis from injuries received when his automobile got out of control several days ago, according to reports received by Santa Fe officials.

Camp John C. Phillips, will be the official designation of this year's annual encampment of the Arizona National Guard. More than a thousand officers and enlisted men will attend the training camp, August 11 to 25.

Poultry outlook this year for Arizona is favorable and should continue to grow better, according to Clyde F. Rowe, dairy and poultry specialist of the University of Arizona. He has completed a survey of several counties which specialize in poultry raising and dairy products.

Plans and specifications for construction of three state armories to cost approximately $200,000 each, are being completed and bids either singly or as group will be advertised shortly, it was stated by the adjutant general. The new armories for use of Arizona National Guard units, will be located at Safford, Douglas and Nogales.

Helen Benson of Carlsbad, N. M., was only a novice typist a year ago and then she won the amateur typing championship of her state. Now she is going to the International Typewriting Contest at Toronto in September and hopes to win for the United States the world's amateur typing crown now held by Irma Wright of Toronto.

It is claimed that Arizona has the greatest area in national forests of any state in the Union. This now totals 11,349,835 acres. 13,373 acres were added during the past year. Only one county in Arizona does not have any land in national forests. National forests have returned to the other counties of the state during the past fiscal year $114,485. This money is used by the several counties for road or school purposes.

The first 50,000 copies of the official 1929 highway tourist map are now off of the press and ready for distribution. The map is larger than those of previous years and includes small strips of adjoining states to enable tourists to orient themselves with regard to New Mexico localities.

Juan, 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Aurora Marquez, of Las Cruces, was drowned while trying to get a drink out of an irrigation ditch.

Phil Townsend Hanna, widely known writer and editor of the magazine Touring Topics, which is said to have a circulation of over one hundred thousand copies, recently was a visitor at the highway service bureau in Santa Fe where he conferred on the proposed publicity to be given New Mexico in the Automobile Club of Southern California publications. The Auto Club contemplates publishing a map and descriptive material in book form covering all of the great tourist interest area of America which lies between Needles, California, and the eastern New Mexican state line. This area is bounded on the north by an imaginary line drawn from Panaca, Nevada, to Waldenburg, Colo. The southern boundary runs from Needles, Calif., in an irregular line which includes within its bounds Prescott, Montezuma's Castle, Petrified Forest, and U. S. highway 79 through New Mexico.

As a member of the spring grading class at Colorado State Teachers College, Miss Marie T. Pratt, daughter of William Pratt of Raton, received the life certificate in teaching.

Fishing on the southern end of Mormon lake in Coconino county, and Oak Creek in Coconino and Yavapai counties has been prohibited by the Arizona State Game Fish Commission. The Commission also created a State Game Refuge on San Francisco Peaks near Flagstaff, and on Mormon mountain east of Mormon lake.

REVIEW: PROPHETS AND KINGS OF JUDAH'S DECLINE

GOLDEN TEXT—I have loved thee with an everlasting love, therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Stories Retold. JUNIOR TOPIC—Learning to Serve God.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—True and False Leaders. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—God's True Prophets.

The quarterly review always brings its problems. No set method can be prescribed. The grade, the aptitude of the pupils and the genius of the teacher are determining factors of the problem. For seniors and adults, two methods are suggested.

I. Character Study of the Kings and Prophets of the Period.

Biography is always fascinating and profitable. In the use of this method, assignments should be made a week ahead. As to the kings of this period, a study should be made of their strong and weak points, and suitable lessons be drawn from them. As to the prophets, the nature of the ministry of each should be studied.

II. The Summary Method.

This method involves the terse statement of the salient facts of each lesson with its central teaching. This method, to be effective, calls for assignments to be made a week in advance. Different minds will greatly vary. The following statements are offered as suggestions:

Lesson for April 7. Either at the beginning of Isaiah's ministry or later when called to a deeper experience, he had a vision of the majesty and holiness of the living God. The leading lesson is that a real sight of the living God discloses the sinfulness of man.

Lesson for April 14. In leading the people back to God Hezekiah proclaimed a passover. The passover was a memorial of the nation's deliverance through the shedding of the blood of a sacrificial lamb. The lamb typified Christ. The only way for a sinning and divided people to get back to God and be united is around the crucified Lord.

Lesson for April 21. Isaiah sought to comfort the people by assuring them that the Lord God as the Messiah was coming to reign over the earth, and deliver them from bondage, and shepherd them. The only possible deliverance from the world is the coming of Jesus Christ and the establishment of His Kingdom.

Lesson for April 28. Salvation of God's people was to be accomplished through the suffering of their Messiah. At Christ's first coming He suffered the penalty of our sin. His suffering resulted in a spiritual progeny. Life out of death is the law governing the universe—natural and spiritual.

Lesson for May 5. While the temple was in process of renovation, the law of God was found and read to the king. This brought great disturbance to his mind as he realized the enormity of the nation's sins. God's Word has power to convict of sin and effect a revival.

Lesson for May 12. God called Jeremiah before he was born, overcame his timidity, and sent him to warn his people of coming judgment. Though violently opposed and persecuted, God delivered him.

Lesson for May 19. Jeremiah called the people to heed once to God's Word. The only way to avert God's judgment is to return unto Him and render obedience.

Lesson for May 26. God will restore Israel to Palestine Israel will return and possess the land. Jesus Christ will then come and enter into a new covenant, writing the law of God in their hearts.

Lesson for June 2. Because Jeremiah faithfully declared God's law, he was hated and cast into a dungeon. Those who faithfully declare God's law shall suffer.

Lesson for June 9. The Rechabites out of filial loyalty to their father abstained from the use of wine. Jeremiah gave them a public test as an example to Judah. Obedience to earthly fathers brings blessings, but obedience to God brings greater blessings.

Lesson for June 16. Judah went into captivity according to God's Word, which cannot fail.

Psalm 103 is entirely devoted to praise to God. Those who have experienced the life of God in the soul will bless Him with all their being.

God Knows All I will govern my life and thoughts as if the whole world were to see the one and to read the other, for what does it signify to make anything a secret to my neighbor, when to God who is the searcher of our hearts, all our privacies are open?—Seneca.

Religion is Necessary Education without religion is worth very little, just as cleverness without character is very barren.—Ald. Leslie Owen.

Wit and Humor

FAIR PLAY

"I told my son that he was not giving enough attention to the classics," remarked the conscientious parent. "I reproached him for not knowing the difference between the Iliad and the Odyssey." "Was he properly apologetic?" "Not at all. He said nobody could know everything, and asked me if I knew the difference between crystal receptivity and a neutrolyne."—Washington Star.

They're a Scream

Bob—Saw some funny pictures last night that gave me a good laugh. Bill—I didn't know there was a good comedy at the movies this week. Bob—Didn't see them at a movie. My girl and I were looking through an old family album she'd found in the attic.

HE RANG IN

Sister—Well, what luck did you have with the latest belle? Brother—Oh, I succeeded in ringing in.

Other Things

The interne hung his shingle out proclaiming him M. D. But from A. M. until P. M. His office was M. T.

Seeking a Test

"Why did you forbid him to see you again?" "He said he loved me," answered Miss Cayenne. "If that is really true, no little thing I can say will prevent him from seeing me, even if he has to pick a lock or climb a transom."—Washington Star.

A Cheap Triumph

Edwin—Don't you believe me, dear, when I tell you that you are the only girl I ever loved? Angelina—Oh, yes. But that's not nearly as nice as it would be to know that I'd stolen you from some other girl.

HE'D GET THE CHANCE

He—I'd meet the most terrible danger, sweetheart, to make you mine! She—You'll have a chance to when you meet mother, dear.

"Just a Song at Twilight"

Every dog must have its day. And every cat its night. Even though when changing shifts They meet and start a fight.

Taking on Responsibility

"I shall say nothing but what I believe to be absolutely true," said Senator Sorghum. "But," said the practical friend, "if you stop to verify every statement how are you going to find time to make a speech?"—Washington Star.

Age

Wife—There was a poor woman here today after old clothes. Husband—Did you give her any? Wife—Yes; I gave her that ten-year-old suit of yours and that dress I bought last week.

Both Peacemakers

Policeman—I found them clutching one another and wrestling. One of the Prisoners—It ain't true, yer honor. We weren't fighting when he nabbed us—we were a tryin' to separate each other.

Overworked

"What's the result of the examination, doctor?" "You're all run down—my advice is that you give up golf a while and get a good long rest at the office."—Happy Magazine.

Pulled in Two Ways

First Motorist—Do you know that motoring has increased my appetite wonderfully? Second Same—Well, that's good. "I'm not so sure. I can't afford to eat now."

Renovated Statue of Queen on Exhibition

There is now to be seen at the Cairo museum in that city the statue of an ancient queen which was recovered in pieces from a quarry where it had been buried. The lady was Queen Hatsheput and her effigy had been removed and thrown into a quarry at the instance of Thothmes III upon the queen's death in 1480 B. C. The excavations near the temple Deir-El-Bahari, at Luxor, have occupied the expedition for years. In 1927 it was confirmed that all the queen's statues in the temple had been ordered destroyed. After the mutilation or destruction of the pieces were thrown by Thothmes' retainers into an abandoned quarry nearby. Finally, 35 years ago, when the temple was first cleared, all the debris from it was piled together. The expedition has been employing as many as 700 Egyptian laborers at a time in the task of retrieving the fragments of the buried statues and about 100,000 tons of rubbish have been removed. Fragments of several of these statues have been recovered and are being assembled, but the work is exceedingly tedious.

Boy Burglars Spunked

An old-fashioned spanking, the variety popular in grandpa's day, was the sentence meted out to two youngsters by a judge of Alameda, Calif. They had broken into a grocery store. The court advocated similar procedure in the case of other juvenile offenders.

The first chrysothemum was imported from China into England in 1790, and soon made their way to other parts of the world.
